Section 198. Any public officer of this Commonwealth or of any sub-division thereof who steals any property of the Commonwealth or of any sub-division thereof in his possession or custody or under his control as such officer; or who, with intent to steal such property, fails to deliver possession thereof when thereunto legally required by the proper officer of the Commonwealth or any sub-division thereof or by the person authorized to demand and receive the same, is guilty of felony, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding ten years, or fined not exceeding five thousand dollars, or both.

Section 199. Any person who has converted any property without this Commonwealth under such circumstances that if the conversion had been made by him with in this Commonwealth such conversion would have constituted stealing, who brings such property into this Commonwealth, is guilty of stealing, and shall be punished as provided in section 197 of this act.

Section 200. Any person who having the possession of property of another with authority to sell or otherwise dispose of the same, or having possession of any bill of lading, permit, certificate, receipt or order for the delivery of merchandise with the like authority, deposits or pledges such property or document consigned or entrusted to him as aforesaid, as a security for any money borrowed or negotiable instrument received by such person, and applies or disposes of the same to his own use, in violation of good faith, with intent to defraud the owner of such property; and such person who, with like fraudulent intent, applies or disposes of to his own use, any money or negotiable instrument, raised or acquired by the sale or other disposition of such property; and any person who being entrusted with any power of attorney for the sale or transfer of any property, who fraudulently sells or transfers or otherwise converts such property; is guilty of stealing, and shall be punished as provided in section 197 of this act.

Section 201. Any person who being a bailee of any property of another, pledges such property without the consent of the owner, with intent to defraud the owner, is guilty of stealing the said property, and shall be punished as provided in section one hundred and ninety-seven of this act. Provided, That this section shall not apply to any person pledging property which he has purchased in whole or in part with his own money or credit for another, and for which he has not been wholly reimbursed by the person for whom it was purchased.

Section 202. In any indictment for stealing it shall be sufficient to allege that the defendant stole the property.

Section 203. On the trial of an indictment for stealing, it shall not be a defense that the defendant had an interest as partner, joint tenant or tenant in common, in the property converted.

Section 204. No trustee, banker, merchant, broker, attorney, agent, director, officer or other person who steals any property entrusted to him is entitled to refuse to make a full and complete discovery by answer to any bill in equity or to answer any question or interrogatory in any civil proceeding in any court or law or equity, but no answer to any such bill, question or interrogatory shall be admissible in evidence against such person charged with such offense.

Section 205. Any officer, director, trustee, manager, employee, or agent, of any mutual savings bank, savings bank, bank of discount and deposit, trust company, title insurance company, surety company or safe deposit company, incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth, or of any private bank or unincorporated association receiving deposits of money, or of any building and loan association incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth or authorized to do business therein, who wilfully misapplies any of the moneys, funds or credits of any such institution of which he is an officer, director, trustee, manager, employee or agent; or who, with intent to defraud such institution or any other company, body politic or corporate, or any individual person, or to deceive any officer of such institution, or any bank examiner, or other person legally authorized to examine the affairs of any such institution, issues or puts forth any certificate of deposit, draws any order or bill of exchange, makes any acceptance, assigns any note, bond, draft, bill of exchange, mortgage, judgment or other instrument in writing, makes or subscribes to any false entry or false statement of fact, exhibits or subscribes to any false papers, fails to make any entry he should make, in any book, report or statement of such institution, such offense not constituting stealing, is guilty of a felony, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding five years, or fined not exceeding two thousand dollars, or both.

Whenever the Commissioner of Banking shall have knowledge of any violation of this section, it shall be his duty to institute prosecutions against all persons violating any of the provisions thereof.

Section 206. Any person being a director, trustee, officer, manager, agent, superintendent, receiver, attorney, broker, member or employee of any corporation, partnership, firm or association, or of any municipal or quasi-municipal corporation, who, as such receives or possesses himself of any property of such corporation, partnership, firm or association or municipal or quasi-municipal corporation otherwise than in payment to him of a just debt or demand and with intent to defraud, omits to make or to cause or direct to be made a full and true entry thereof in the books and accounts of such corporation, partnership, firm or association or municipal or quasi-municipal corporation, or makes or concurs in the making of any false entry in relation thereto in the books and accounts of such corporation, partnership, firm or association, or municipal or quasi-municipal corporation, such offense not constituting stealing, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding three years, or fined not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both.

Section 207. Any person being a director, trustee, officer, manager, agent, superintendent, receiver, attorney, broker, member or employee of any corporation partnership, firm or association, or of any municipal or quasi-municipal corporation who with intent to defraud, destroys, alters, mutilates or falsifies any book, paper, writing or security belonging to or in the possession or custody of such corporation, partnership, firm, association or municipal or quasi-municipal corporation, or makes or concurs in the making of any false entry or any material omission in any book of account or other document of such corporation, firm, association, municipal or quasi-municipal corporation, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding three years, or fined not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both.

Section 208. Any person being a director, trustee, officer, manager, agent, superintendent, receiver, attorney, broker, member or employee of any body corporate, public company or municipal or quasi-municipal corporation, who shall make, circulate or publish or concur in making, circulating or publishing any written statement or account of or concerning such corporation or company, its personnel, business, finances or affairs or prospects which he shall know to be false in any particular, with intent to deceive, or fraud any person, or with intent to induce any person to become a shareholder or partner therein, or to entrust or advance any property thereto, or to enter into any security for the benefit thereof, such offense not being otherwise provided against in this act, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding three years, or fined not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both.

Section 209. Any person who re-pledges or re-hypothecates and stock, bond or other security, received by him for money lent and borrowed, during the continuance of the contract of hypothecation or pledging of such security, without the consent of the person pledging or hypothecating the same, is guilty of a felony, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding five years, or fined not exceeding two thousand dollars, or both. Provided, That this section shall not be construed to prevent brokers from pledging or hypothecating stocks or other securities which they have purchased, in whole or in part, with their own money or credit, for others, and for which they have not been wholly reimbursed by the parties for whom such stocks or other securities have been purchased.

Section 210. Any banker, broker, officer or employee of any trust or savings institution, national, State or private bank, or of any association under the supervision of the Banking Department, who receives any money for deposit, knowing that such banker, broker, trust or savings institution, or bank, or association, is insolvent, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding three years, or fined not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both.

Section 211. Any person who by any false pretense made with intent to defraud, obtains the signature of any person to any written instrument, is guilty of a felony, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding seven years, or fined not exceeding three thousand dollars, or both.

Section 212. Any person who being a member of a partnership, corporation or association, fraudulently uses or pledges the name of the partnership, corporation or association for any purpose other than the bona-fide use of said partnership, corporation or association, such offense not constituting stealing, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or both.

Section 213. Section 214. Any person in the employ of any railroad company who fraudulently and in neglect of his duty fails to cancel or return to the proper officer, agent or company, any coupon or other railroad ticket, with intent to permit the same to be used in fraud of any such company, or who fraudulently stamps, prints or signs any such ticket, or fraudulently sells or puts in circulation any such ticket, is guilty of a felony, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding five years, or fined not exceeding three thousand dollars, or both.

Section 215. Any person who, with intent to defraud, makes or draws or utters or delivers any check, draft or order for the payment of money upon any bank, banking institution, trust company or other depository, knowing at the time of such making, drawing, uttering, or delivering that the maker or drawer has not sufficient funds in or credit with such bank, banking institution, trust company or other depository for the payment of such check, draft or order, such offense not constituting stealing, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding two years, or fined not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both.

In any prosecution under this section, the making or drawing or uttering or delivering of a check, draft, or order, payment of which is refused by the drawee because of lack of funds or credit, shall be prima facie evidence of intent to defraud and of knowledge of insufficient funds in or credit with such bank, banking institution, trust company or other depository, unless such maker or drawer shall have paid the drawee thereof the amount due thereon together with interest and protest fees, within ten days after receiving notice that such check, draft or order has not been paid to the drawee.

Section 216. Any person who obtains employment or appointment to any office or place of trust by color or aid of any false or forged letter or certificate of recommendation, or by any false statement in writing, as to his name, residence, previous employment, or qualification, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or both.

Section 217. Any person who is charged on oath or affirmation before a magistrate, justice of the peace, alderman, mayor or burgess in this Commonwealth with being a professional thief, burglar or pickpocket, and who has been arrested by any police officer, detective, constable, sworn peace officer or watchman at any steamboat landing, railroad depot or station, ferryhouse, on the platform or inside of any street passenger railway car, in any church or the vestibule or corridor thereof, in any building occupied as a banking institution, trust company, saving fund or broker's office, elevator used to carry passengers, in any park or place of public amusement or recreation, or the approaches thereto, auction stores or crowded thoroughfares, public or private, and against whom it shall be proven to the satisfaction of the said magistrate, justice of the peace, alderman, mayor or burgess, by sufficient testimony that he was frequenting or attending such place for an unlawful purpose, he shall be committed to the county jail or prison for a term not exceeding ninety days, or, in the discretion of said mayor, magistrate, justice of the peace, alderman or burgess, be required to enter security for his good behavior for a period not exceeding one year: Provided, however, that the defendant may, within five days after such conviction, appeal to the court of quarter sessions of the county in which said justice of the peace, alderman, mayor or burgess shall reside, upon allowance of said court of quarter sessions or of any judge thereof, upon cause shown.

Section 218. Any person who buys or receives any property which shall have been so appropriated, whether within or without this Commonwealth, as to constitute stealing under this act: or who corruptly, for any money or other property or promise or agreement for any money or property, conceals or withholds any property so appropriated, knowing, or having reasonable grounds to believe such property to have been so appropriated, is guilty of a felony, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding seven years, or fined not exceeding three thousand dollars, or both.

Section 219. It shall be lawful to prosecute and punish all buyers and receivers of stolen property, as well before as after the principal felon shall be taken and convicted, and whether the principal felon be amenable to justice or not, which presecution, conviction and sentence of said receivers shall exempt them from being prosecuted as accessories after the fact, in case the principal felon shall be afterwards convicted.

Section 220. Any person who with intent to defraud has in his possession, custody or control, any electric meter which has been tampered with or prevented from duly registering the quantity of electricity supplied or consumed; or who with intent interferes with the proper action and just registration of any electric meter; or who with such intent diverts, or otherwise uses any electric current manufactured or supplied by another, such diversion or use not constituting stealing, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding six months, or fined not exceeding two hundred dollars, or both.

Section 221. Any person who wilfully and unlawfully opens, closes, or in any manner, adjusts or tampers with any valve, regulator, guage, gate, disc, curb-cock, stop-cock, meter or other regulating, operating or measuring device or appliance in or attached to any well, tank, conduit, pipeline, main service pipe, house-pipe or display pipe or other distributing pipe of any person furnishing gas to consumers; or who wilfully and unlawfully enlarges or alters or removes from its connection any mixer furnished or approved by such furnisher of gas; or who without express permission first obtained from such furnisher of gas, puts on any mixer, or consumes the gas of such furnisher of gas, such consumption not constituting stealing; or who, without such permission, taps, severs or opens any gas main or pipe, or connects with such main or pipe any other main or pipe, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding six months, or fined not exceeding two hundred dollars, or both.

Section 222. Any person who takes, sells or transfers any promissory note or other negotiable instrument not having the words "given for a patent right" written or printed legibly and prominently on the face of such note or instrument, above the signature thereto, knowing the consideration of such note or instrument to consist, in whole or in part, of the right to make, use or vend any patent invention claimed to be patented, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or both.

Section 223. Any person who pretends for gain or lucre to predict future events, by cards, tokens, the inspection of the head or hands of any person or by any one's age, or by consulting the movements of the heavenly bodies or by any other means; or who for gain or lucre pretends to effect any purpose by spells, charms, necromancy or incantation; or who advises the taking or administering of what are commonly called love powders or potions, or prepares the same to be taken or administered; or who pretends for lucre or gain to enable anyone to get or to recover stolen property, or to tell where lost property is, or to stop bad luck, or to give good luck, or to put bad luck on any person or property, or to stop or injure the business or injure the health of any person, or to give success in business, enterprise, speculation, lottery, lottery numbers, or games of chance, or win the affections of any person whatever for marriage or seduction, or to make one person marry another, or to induce any person to alter or make a will in favor of, or against any one or tell the place where treasure property, money or valuables are hid, or to tell the place where to dig or search for gold, metals, hidden treasure or any other article, or to make one person dispose of property, business or any valuable thing in favor of another, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or both.

Section 224. Any person who at any hotel, inn, or boarding house, receives or causes to be furnished any food or accommodations, with intent to defraud the owner or proprietor of such hotel, inn, or boarding house out of the value or price of such food or accommodation; and any person who obtains credit at any hotel, inn, or boarding house by depositing at such hotel, inn, or boarding house any baggage or property of value less than the amount of such credit, or of the bill by such person incurred, with such fraudulent intent; and any person who after obtaining credit or accommodation at any hotel, inn, or boarding house, absconds from such hotel, inn or boarding house, and surreptitiously removes his baggage or property therefrom, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding six months, or fined not exceeding two hundred dollars, or both.

Section 225. Any person who marks with the word "gold" or the words "solid gold" or who sells, offers or exposes for sale, or has in his possession with intent to sell, any article of merchandise marked, stamped, labelled or branded with the word "gold" or the words "solid gold", containing less than ten karats of pure gold, such offense not constituting stealing, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding three months, or fined not exceeding one hundred dollars, or both.

Section 226. Any person who marks as being of any number of karat not less than ten in fineness, or sells, offers or exposes for sale or has in his possession with intent to sell, any article of merchandise marked, stamped, labelled or branded as being of any number of karat of gold not less than ten in fineness, or wrapped, incased or enclosed in any box, package, cover wrapper, or other thing in or by which the said article is packed, wrapped, incased, enclosed or otherwise prepared for distribution having thereupon any engraving, label, stamp, imprint or mark indicating or denoting that such article is of any number of karat of gold not less than ten in fineness, unless the component parts of which said article is made are in the following ratio: If marked eighteen karat there must be eighteen parts of pure gold and six parts alloy; if fourteen karat, there must be fourteen parts of pure gold and ten parts alloy; if ten karat, there must be ten parts of pure gold and fourteen parts alloy; and other qualities in the same proportion, with twenty-four karat as the standard of pure gold by which the article is marked, such offense not constituting stealing, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding one hundred dollars, or both.

Section 227. Any person who sells or offers or exposes for sale, or has in his possession with intent to sell, any article of merchandise to which is attached a metal mounting, addition or ornament marked, stamped, or branded with the word "gold" or the words "solid gold", unless such mounting, addition or ornament contain not less than ten karats of pure gold, such offense not constituting stealing is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding three months, or fined not exceeding one hundred dollars, or both.

Section 228. Any person who sells or offers or exposes for sale any article of merchandise to which is attached a metal mounting, addition or ornament marked, stamped or branded as being of any number of karat of gold not less than ten in fineness, unless the component parts of which such mounting, addition or ornament is made are in the ratio prescribed by section two hundred and twenty-six of this act, such offense not constituting stealing, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding three months, or fined not exceeding one hundred dollars, or both.

Section 229. Any person who marks with the word "sterling" or the words "sterling silver", or who sells or offers or exposes for sale or has in his possession with intent to sell, any article of merchandise marked, stamped, labelled or branded with the word "sterling" or the words "sterling silver", or wrapped, incased or enclosed in any box, package, cover, wrapper or any other thing, in or by which the said article is packed, wrapped, enclosed, incased or otherwise prepared for sale or distribution, having thereon any engraving, label, stamp, imprint, or mark indicating or denoting that such article is silver or sterling silver, unless nine hundred and twenty-five one-thousandths of the component parts of the metal of which the said article is made is pure silver, such offense not constituting stealing, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding three months, or fined not exceeding one hundred dollars, or both.

Section 230. Any person who marks with the word "coin" or the words "coin silver", or who sells or offers or exposes for sale, or has in his possession with intent to sell, any article of merchandise marked, stamped, labelled or branded with the word "coin" or the words "coin silver", or wrapped, incased or enclosed in any box, package, cover, wrapper or other things in or by which the said article is packed, wrapped, incased, enclosed or otherwise prepared for sale or distribution, having thereupon any engraving, label, stamp, imprint or mark indicating or denoting that such article is coin or coin silver, unless nine hundred one-thousandths of the component parts of the metal of which the said article is made is pure silver, such offense not constituting stealing, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding three months, or fined not exceeding one hundred dollars, or both.

Section 231. Any person who sells or offers or exposes for sale, or has in his possession with intent to sell, any article of merchandise to which is attached a metal mounting, addition or ornament marked, stamped or branded with the word "sterling" or the words "sterling silver" unless such mounting, addition or ornament contain not less than nine hundred and twenty-five one-thousandths parts of pure silver, such offense not constituting stealing, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding three months, or fined not exceeding one hundred dollars, or both.

Section 232. Any person who sells or offers or exposes for sale, or has in his possession with intent to sell, any article of merchandise to which is attached a metal mounting, addition or ornament marked, stamped or branded with the word "coin" or the words "coin silver," unless such mounting, addition or ornament contain not less than nine hundred one-thousandths parts of pure silver, such offense not constituting stealing, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding three months, or fined not exceeding one hundred dollars, or both.

Section 233. Any person who publicly presents for profit any unpublished dramatic play or musical composition without the consent of the author or authors thereof, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding three months, or fined not exceeding one hundred dollars, or both.

Section 234. Any person who buys or receives from a minor, knowing him to be such, or from any person unknown to such person buying or receiving, or from any person pursuing no trade, labor or employment for a livelihood, any junk, rope, scrap iron, brass, lead, copper or other metal, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or both.

Section 235. Any person who in the sale, delivery, or exchange of any milk or cream, or the products of milk or cream, uses any bottle, jar, can, tub, box, vessel or other container of another upon which is stamped, blown, engraved, or otherwise, marked, the name, title, mark or address of the owner, such offense not constituting stealing, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding three months, or fined not exceeding one hundred dollars or both.

Section 236. Any person who without the consent of the owner, wilfully and unlawfully removes, obliterates, or mutilates the name, title, mark or address of another stamped, blown, engraved or otherwise marked on any bottle, jar, can, tub, box, vessel or other container used in the sale or transportation of milk or cream or the products of milk or cream, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding three months, or fined not exceeding one hundred dollars, or both.

Section 237. Any person who without the consent of the owner thereof refills for the purpose of sale with any article of merchandise, any bottle upon which is stamped, blown, engraved or otherwise marked the name, title, or mark of another which shall have been registered according to law; such offense not constituting stealing, or who buys, sells, deals or traffics in any such bottle without the consent in writing of the owner thereof, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding six months, or fined not exceeding two hundred dollars, or both. The fact that any person other than the rightful owner thereof refills any such bottle, or uses for the sale therein of any article of merchandise, or has in his possession such bottle for the purpose of dealing or trafficking therein, is prima facie proof of the unlawful dealing or trafficking in such bottle.

Section 238. Any person who knowingly, by any false representation, obtains from any club, association, society or company for improving the breed of animals, the registration of any animal in the register of any such club, association, society or company, or a transfer of any such registration, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or both.

Any person who makes, engraves or prepares, or has in his possession, custody or control any plate or substance made, engraved or prepared after the similitude of any plate or substance from which any note or bill issued by any bank incorporated under the laws of the United States or of this Commonwealth, or under the laws of any of the States or territories of the Union, or of the District of Columbia shall have been taken or printed, or whereupon or by means whereof any note or bill may be made, printed or prepared after the similitude of any note or bill issued by any such bank; or made or prepared after the similitude of any plate or substance from which any obligation or other security of the United States, or any bond, note, coupon, or other instrument issued by this Commonwealth or any other State or territory of the Union, or by any corporation, company or individual, shall have been taken or printed, or wherefrom or by means whereof any obligation or other security of the United States or any bond, note, coupon or other instrument for the payment of money may be made, printed, or prepared after the similitude of such obligation or other security or of such bond, note, coupon or other instrument issued as aforesaid, with intent to use such plate or substance or cause or suffer the same to be used in forging or counterfeiting any of the instruments aforesaid; or passes, utters or publishes any such forged or counterfeit note, bill, coupon or other instrument, knowing the same to be false, forged or counterfeit; or has in his possession, custody or control any note, bill, bond, coupon or other instrument aforesaid made, printed, engraved or otherwise prepared after the similitude of any note, bill, bond, coupon or other instrument issued by the United States, or by this Commonwealth or by any of the States or territories of the Union, or by any corporation, company or individual with intent to pass, utter or publish such simulated note; or who has in his possession, custody or control any paper adapted to the making of any such bill, note, bond, coupon or other instrument aforesaid, and similar to the paper on which said obligations or evidences of debt shall have been issued, with intent to use such paper or suffer the same to be used in forging or counterfeiting any such instrument, is guilty of a felony, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding fifteen years, or fined not exceeding seven thousand dollars, or both.

Section 306. Any person who prints, writes, utters, publishes, sells, lends, gives away, circulates or distributes, or has in his possession with intent to publish, sell, lend, give away, circulate or distribute any letter, writing, circular, paper, pamphlet, hand bill or any other written or printed matter advertising, offering or purporting to advertise or offer for sale, loan, exchange, gift or distribution, or to furnish, procure or distribute any counterfeit coin, paper money, internal revenue stamp, postage stamp or any other token of value, or what purports to be counterfeit coin, paper money, internal revenue stamp, postage stamp or any other token of value, or giving or purporting to give information where, how, of whom, or what means, any counterfeit coin, paper money, internal revenue stamp or postage stamp or token of value, can be procured or had, or what purports to be counterfeit coin, paper money, internal revenue stamp, postage stamp or other token of value can be procured or had, whether called "green articles", "queer coin", "paper goods", "bills", "spurious treasury notes", "United States goods", "green paper goods", "business that is not legitimate", "cigars", "green cigars", or by any other name or title, or any other device, is guilty of a felony, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding five years, or fined not exceeding two thousand dollars, or both.

Section 307. Any person who for executing, operating, promoting, carrying on, or in the aiding, assisting or abetting in the promoting, operating or carrying on, or executing of any scheme or device whatsoever to defraud, by use or means of any papers, writings, letters, circulars or written or printed matters, concerning the offering for sale, loan, gift, distribution or exchange of counterfeit coin, paper money, internal revenue stamp, postage stamp or other token of value as provided in section three hundred and six of this act, shall use any fictitious, false or assumed name or address other than his own right, proper and lawful name, or whoever in the executing, operating, promoting, carrying on, aiding, assisting or abetting, in the execution, promoting or carrying on of any scheme or device, offering for sale, loan, gift or distribution, or purporting to offer for sale, loan, gift or distribution, or giving or purporting to give information, where, how, of whom or by what means any counterfeit coin, paper money, internal revenue stamp, postage stamp or other token of value can be had, or who shall knowingly receive or take from the mails of the United States any letter or package addressed to any such fictitious, false or assumed name or address, or name other than his own right, proper or lawful name, is guilty of a felony, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding five years, or fined not exceeding two thousand dollars, or both. Any letter, circular, writing or paper offering or purporting to offer for sale, loan, gift or distribution, or giving or purporting to give information, directly or indirectly, where, how, of whom or by what means, any counterfeit coin, paper money, internal revenue stamp, postage stamp or token of value may be obtained or had, or concerning any similar scheme or device to defraud the public whether such article, matter or things is called "green articles", "bills", "business that is not legitimate", "spurious treasury notes", "United States goods", "green paper goods", "cigars", "green cigars", or by any other name, device or title of a similar character, shall be deemed presumptive proof of the fraudulent character of such scheme.

Section 308. Any person who falsely and fraudulently makes, forges or counterfeits the great or less seal of the Commonwealth, the seal of any court, office, county or corporation, or any other seal authorized by the law of the United States or this Commonwealth or of any other State or territory of the United States; or who falsely and fraudulently utters or publishes any instrument or writing impressed with such forged or counterfeit seal, knowing the same to be forged or counterfeit, is guilty of a felony, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding seven years, or fined not exceeding three thousand dollars, or both.

Section 309. Any person who forges, or fraudulently defaces, alters, corrupts, withdraws, carries away, falsifies, discharges, secretes or avoids any record, charter, gift, grant, conveyance, contract, fine, forfeited recognizance or other forfeiture, or any registry, acknowledgment or certificate, or any minute, document book or any proceeding filed or deposited by authority of law in any public office, or with any public officer of this Commonwealth or any sub-division thereof, is guilty of a felony, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding seven years, or fined not exceeding three thousand dollars, or both; and if such person be a public officer of this Commonwealth or any sub-division thereof, he shall in addition to the penalty above prescribed forfeit his office, and be forever disqualified from holding any office of trust, honor or profit under the Constitution or laws of this Commonwealth.

Section 310. Any person who with intent to injure or defraud falsely makes, forges or alters, any telegram, letter or other written communication, paper or instrument by which making, forging or altering any other person is injured in his good name, standing, position of general reputation, such offense not being otherwise provided against in this act, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or both.

Section 311. Any person who issues or delivers any bill of lading, receipt or other paper by which it appears that any goods, wares or merchandise has been delivered on board any vessel or stored in any elevator or in any place designated by law for the storage of any goods, wares or merchandise, or delivered to any carrier or warehouseman, wharfinger or other bailee, unless the same has been so delivered and is at the time actually under the control of such carrier, warehouseman, wharfinger or bailee; and any person who issues or delivers any second or duplicate bill of lading, receipt or other such paper while any former bill of lading, receipt or other such paper representing any goods, wares or merchandise shall be outstanding and uncalled, without writing across the face of the same the word "duplicate"; and any person who sells, encumbers, ships, transfers or removes beyond his immediate control any goods, wares or merchandise from which a bill of lading, receipt or other such paper aforesaid has been given by him, unless such bill of lading, receipt or other such paper bears on its face the words "not negotiable", or unless it is surrendered to be cancelled at the time of such sale, encumbrance, transfer or removal, or unless in the case of a partial delivery, a memorandum thereof is endorsed upon such paper, is guilty of a felony, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding five years, or fined not exceeding two thousand dollars, or both.

Section 312. Any person who counterfeits or fraudulently impresses or makes the brand, mark or any number or other mark of any public inspector, or a mark or number in imitation thereof, upon any article subject by law to inspection, or upon any cask, vessel or container, containing such article, or upon any plug of such cask, vessel or container, or fraudulently puts any stamped plug into any cask, vessel or container, or fraudulently alters, defaces, conceals or erases any such inspection mark duly made; and any person who counterfeits or fraudulently impresses or makes upon any article subject by law to inspection, or upon any cask, vessel or container containing such article, the brand, mark or any number or other mark of any miller, manufacturer, packer or other person, or fraudulently alters, defaces or erases any such mark, or fraudulently impresses or makes the brand, mark or any number or other mark of any person upon such article, cask, vessel or container, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding one year or fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or both.

Section 313. Any person who forges or counterfeits any private stamp, mark, wrapper or label resembling or apparently intended to resemble the private stamp, mark, wrapper or label usually affixed by any other person to or used by any other person on, or in the sale of, any goods, wares or merchandise, with intent to deceive or defraud such other person or the purchaser of any such goods, wares or merchandise, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or both.

Section 314. Any person who wilfully and unlawfully defaces, obliterates or removes any mark, letter or brand from any saw-log, board, shingle, bolt or lumber of any kind floating in or lodged upon the bank of any river or stream, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or both.

Section 315. Any person who has in his possession, custody or control any engraving or printed stamp, wrapper or label or any other representation, likeness, copy or imitation of the private stamp, mark, wrapper or label usually affixed by any other person to or used by any other person on or in the sale of any goods, wares or merchandise; or any die or plate from which such engraving, stamp, wrapper, label or other representation may be made, with intent to use or sell the said die, plate, engraving, stamp, wrapper or label in aiding in vending any goods, wares or merchandise, in imitation of, or intended to resemble, or to be sold for the goods, wares, or merchandise of such other person, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or both.

Section 316. Any person who vends any goods, wares or merchandise having thereon any forged or counterfeit stamp, mark, wrapper or label of another, knowing the same to bear such forged or counterfeit stamp, mark, wrapper or label, without disclosing the fact to the purchaser thereof, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding six months, or fined not exceeding three hundred dollars, or both.

Section 317. Any person who forges, counterfeits or imitates any duly registered trade-mark, label, symbol or private stamp of any association or union of persons authorized by law to register a trade-mark, label, symbol, or private stamp; or uses, displays, sells or offers for sale, any counterfeit or imitation of any such trade-mark, label, symbol or stamp; or uses any original or bona fide trade-mark, label, symbol, or stamp, without authority from the association or union owning, controlling or having jurisdiction over the same, or after the license or authority to use the same has been rescinded, or revoked by the association or union owning, controlling or having jurisdiction over the same; or has in his possession, custody or control any such counterfeit trade-mark, label, symbol or stamp, with intent to use or sell the same in aiding in vending any goods, wares or merchandise; and any person who knowingly uses any such trade-mark, label, symbol or stamp of such association or union by placing the same on any goods, wares or merchandise which is not the product of members of such association or union; and any person who knowingly sells or offers for sale any goods, wares or merchandise on which such trade-mark, label, symbol or stamp is so wrongfully placed, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding two years, or fined not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both.

Section 318. Any person who with intent to defraud puts upon any article of merchandise or upon any cask, vessel, container, stopper, case, cover, wrapper, package, band, ticket, label or other thing covering or attached to such article or, with which such article is intended to be sold, or is sold, any false description or other indication of or respecting the kind, number, quantity, weight or measure of such article or any part thereof, or the place or country where it was manufactured, made or produced, or the quality or grade of any such article, if the quality or grade thereof is required by law to be marked, branded or otherwise indicated on or with such article; or sells or offers for sale or has in his possession, custody or control with intent to sell any article which to his knowledge is falsely described or indicated in any of the ways aforesaid, or is otherwise misbranded within the meaning of the word misbranded as defined by any act of assembly of this Commonwealth in force at the time, such offense not being otherwise provided against, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or both.

Section 319. Any person who knowingly falsely represents any article of food sold or offered or exposed for sale to be Kosher, or as having been prepared under and of a product sanctioned by the orthodox Hebrew religious requirements; or who knowingly falsely represents any such article to be so constituted or prepared, by inscribing or permitting to be inscribed thereon or on the container thereof the word "Kosher" in any language; or who falsely represents any such article to be so constituted by having the word "Kosher" inscribed in any language on his business establishment, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or fined not exceeding five hundred dollars or both.

TITLE X.—GENERAL PROVISIONS.

Section 320. Every offense now punishable either by the statute or common law of this Commonwealth and not specially provided for by this act shall continue to be an offense and be punishable as heretofore.

Section 321. The provisions of this act shall not affect any civil rights or remedies now existing by virtue of the common law or of any statute.

Section 322. The omission to specify or affirm in this act any liability to any damages, penalty, forfeiture or other remedy, imposed by law, and allowed to be recovered or enforced in any civil action or proceeding, for any act or omission declared punishable herein, does not affect any right to recover or enforce the same.

Section 323. On conviction of any person for stealing, or for robbery, or burglary in which it shall appear that the defendant also committed stealing, or for any other offense in which it shall appear that the defendant unlawfully and fraudulently took or obtained property, or received property knowing the same to have been stolen or unlawfully and fraudulently taken, the defendant shall, in addition to the penalty hereinbefore prescribed, for any such offense, be adjudged to restore to the owner the property taken or received, or to pay to him the value of the same or so much thereof as may not be restored. And on conviction of any person for forgery, uttering or publishing any forged or counterfeit coin, bank note, bill, check, obligation, security or other writing, the defendant shall in addition to the punishment hereinbefore prescribed for any such offense, be adjudged to make similar restitution, or other compensation, as in the case of stealing, to the person defrauded. Provided, that nothing herein shall prevent the party aggrieved, and to whom restitution is to be awarded, from being a competent witness on the trial of the offender.

Section 324. Every principal in the second degree, and every accessory before the fact to any felony, for whom no punishment is or shall be specially prescribed by law, is subject to the same punishment as the principal in the first degree to such felony; and every person who counsels, aids or abets the commission of any misdemeanor, for whom no punishment is or shall be specially prescribed by law, is liable to be proceeded against and punished as the principal offender, and every accessory after the fact to any felony for whom no punishment is or shall be specially prescribed by law, shall be imprisoned not exceeding two years, or fined not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both.

Section 325. Any person who conspires with another to commit an offense, the conspiracy to commit such offense not being otherwise specially provided against by an act of assembly of this Commonwealth in force at the time, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished as follows: If he conspires to commit an offense which is punishable by death or by imprisonment for life, he shall be imprisoned not exceeding twenty years, or fined not exceeding ten thousand dollars, or both; if he conspires to commit an offense which is punishable by a lesser period of imprisonment than imprisonment for life, he shall be imprisoned not exceeding one-half of the longest term, or by a fine not exceeding one-half of the largest sum prescribed for the commission of the offense he conspired to commit, or by both such imprisonment and fine.

Section 326. Any person who attempts to commit an offense, the attempt to commit such offense not being otherwise specially provided against by an act of assembly of this Commonwealth, in force at the time, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished as follows: If he attempts to commit an offense which is punishable by death or by imprisonment for life, he shall be imprisoned not exceeding twenty years or fined not exceeding ten thousand dollars, or both. If he attempts to commit an offense which is punishable by a lesser period of imprisonment than imprisonment for life, he shall be imprisoned not exceeding one-half of the longest term or by a fine not exceeding one-half of the largest sum prescribed for the commission of the offense he attempted to commit, or by both such imprisonment and fine.

Section 327. Any person who solicits another to commit an offense, the solicitation to commit such offense not being otherwise specially provided against by an act of assembly of this Commonwealth in force at the time, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or both.

Section 328. Any person convicted of any offense is, notwithstanding such conviction, a competent witness in any cause or proceeding, civil or criminal; but the conviction of any person may be proved for the purpose of affecting the weight of his testimony.

Section 329. Any person convicted of an offense punishable with imprisonment for a term less than the life of the offender, who after such conviction is convicted of an offense subjecting him to imprisonment for a term less than life shall be imprisoned not exceeding double the whole period of time which is or shall be prescribed for the offense of which he is last convicted.

Section 330. This act may be cited as "The Penal Code of 1921."

REPORT OF COMMISSIONERS ON UNIFORM STATE LAWS.

To his Excellency, the Honorable William C. Sproul, Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Sir: The undersigned, the Board of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, appointed under the provisions of the Act of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania approved the 20th day of April 1917, P. L. 90, respectfully reports:

Since the last report of the Commissioners, they have attended the Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth Annual Conferences of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws held at Boston, Mass., in 1919, and at St. Louis, Mo., in 1920.

The organization, work and purposes of the National Conference which has been in existence since August 24, 1892, have been stated in previous reports, made biennially, since the first appointment of Commissioners in the year 1901. This Conference is made up of Commissioners from the different States, who have organized themselves into a national body for the better accomplishment of the work for which its members were appointed by the several States.

The National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws is now officially recognized, not only by all the States, but by the District of Columbia, Alaska, Porto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippine Islands, representing fifty-three jurisdictions.

The Conference meets for a week, each year. It constitutes a remarkable body of men. Among the Commissioners are judges of the highest courts, professors of great prominence in the teaching of the law in the leading law schools, Congressmen, State senators and lawyers of outstanding ability. The present officers are: Honorable Henry Stockbridge, of the Court of Appeals of Maryland, President; George B. Young, of Vermont, Vice-president; Professor Eugene A. Gilmore, of the University of Wisconsin, Secretary, and W. O. Hart, of Louisiana, Treasurer.

The object of this Conference, as briefly set out in its constitution, is "to promote uniformity in State laws on all subject where uniformity is deemed desirable and practicable."

The Conference is extremely careful, both as to the character and kind of legislation which it recommends. When any proposition is made to the Conference for the preparation of a uniform law on any subject, it is first submitted to a "Committee on Scope and Program," which determines whether the subject is one upon which uniformity should be attempted, and many requests for the consideration of uniform laws get no further than a reference to that Committee.

When it is deemed advisable to have a uniform law on any subject, the matter is referred either to a standing committee or a special committee appointed for the purpose of having a tentative draft of such an act prepared. In acts of importance such as those relating to Negotiable Instruments, Partnership, Sales, and other commercial laws, the committee employs an expert who examines the laws of various States and the decisions thereon, and who, with the committee, prepares a tentative draft which is presented to the Conference. It is considered, section by section, and is then referred back to the committee, with such amendments as the Conference has adopted, because no Act can be recommended to the States as a uniform law until it has been considered by the Conference at two meetings. Many Acts have occupied most of the time of the Conference for several consecutive sessions. As an illustration, the Conference at its session in St. Louis, this year, referred back to the committee the seventh tentative draft of a Uniform Incorporation Act and, after some further amendment, recommended the fifth draft of an Act relating to Occupational Diseases. Most of the important laws come before the Conference three or four times before they reach a degree of perfection which will satisfy that body. After an Act of Assembly has been subjected to the scrutiny of the able men who compose the Conference, it cannot be recommended for adoption unless it is approved by a vote of the Commissioners, voting by States, and receives the affirmative vote of the majority of the States voting, and, in no case unless it receives the affirmative vote of at least fifteen States.

The Conference has recommended many important laws which have been adopted in many States. The Negotiable Instruments Law recommended in 1896, has been adopted in every jurisdiction except Georgia and Porto Rico. The Warehouse Receipts Act, recommended in 1906, has been adopted in forty-five jurisdictions. The Sales Act, recommended in 1906, and the Bills of Lading Act, recommended in 1909, have been adopted in twenty-three jurisdictions. The Stock Transfer Act, recommended in 1909, has been adopted in fourteen jurisdictions. The Family Desertion Act, recommended in 1910, has been adopted in twelve jurisdictions and the Partnership Act, recommended in 1914, has been adopted in eleven jurisdictions. The Limited Partnership Act, although recommended in 1916, has been adopted in ten jurisdictions. The Act for the Extradition of Persons of Unsound Mind, recommended in 1916, has been adopted in seven jurisdiction. The Fraudulent Conveyance Act recommended in 1918, was adopted in 1919 by nine States and the Conditional Sales Act, recommended at the same time, was adopted in 1919 by six States.

In addition to the acts just referred to, the following Acts have been recommended to make uniform the law on the subjects with which they deal:

Acknowledgements of Written Instruments Act.
Acts Relating to Wills Executed without the State.
Probate of Foreign Wills Act.
Marriage and Marriage License Act.
Marriage Evasion Act.
Family Desertion Act.
Pure Food Law.
Child Labor Law.
Foreign Acknowledgements Act.
Cold Storage Act.
Workmen's Compensation Act.
Land Registration Act.
Foreign Depositions Act.
Proof of Statutes Act.
Flag Law.

This State has adopted the following uniform laws:

Negotiable Instruments Act.
Sales Act.
Warehouse Receipts Act.
Bills of Lading Act.
Stock Transfer Act.
Partnership Act.
Limited Partnership Act.

It is earnestly hoped that a number of uniform Acts may be adopted at the Session of the Legislature of 1921.

Respectfully submitted,

WILLIAM H. STAAKE,
Chairman of Commission.
WALTER GEORGE SMITH,
WM. H. HARGEST,
Commissioners.

George Wharton Pepper, Esq.,
Chairman

Sir: I hereby submit my First Annual Report as Treasurer of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety covering a period from the inauguration of the work, April 14, 1917, to May 31, 1918, inclusive (the end of the fiscal year of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania), with data relating to the various departmental activities to give an understanding of the scope and progress of the work, so far as the same is shown upon the books of the Treasurer's office.

For the sake of convenient record, a brief outline is inserted of the system adopted by the Committee relative to the funds placed in its custody.

All funds at the disposal of the Committee come out of the $2,000,000 appropriated by the Legislature in 1917 and by it placed in charge of the Commission of Public Safety and Defense, consisting of the Governor, the Lieutenant Governor, the State Treasurer, the Auditor General, and the Adjutant General. This Commission in turn allots such sums to the Council and Committee as the members of that Commission think proper, after due consideration and action upon requisitions made for specific purposes.

The Lieutenant Governor, Honorable Frank B. McClain, has spent much time at the Committee's headquarters in Philadelphia, and has attended its meetings in order to familiarize himself with the scope of the work.

Requisitions when made by the Committee are formally presented to the Commission for their consideration at their meetings in Harrisburg by the Executive Manager of the Committee, Mr. Lewis S. Sadler, and its Secretary, Colonel Lewis E. Beitler.

Funds thus received by the Treasurer are immediately deposited at Drexel & Co. to the credit of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety, and can be disbursed from this account only by action of the Executive Committee authorizing and directing the treasurer to make payments for purposes as exhibited by the minutes of the proceedings of the Committee. In order properly to supervise receipts and expenditures, the system adopted has been as follows:

An accountant for the Treasurer was appointed by him and confirmed by the Committee, who is under salary, and devotes his entire time to the work. Mr. John Radcliffe, for many years in the Accounting Department of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, was granted a leave of absence by that company for this purpose, and has been in service every day since April, 1917. At the beginning, arrangements were made by the Treasurer for monthly audits of the accounts by Messrs. Lybrand, Ross Bros. & Montgomery, Certified Public Accountants, who volunteered their services without compensation as a public duty, and began their work. It became unnecessary to continue this audit, however, because by the courtesy of Honorable Charles A. Snyder, Auditor General of Pennsylvania, a representative of his office, Mr. H. R. Purple, was specially assigned to this duty and has spent practically his entire time at the Committee's headquarters engaged in daily audits.

Reports in detail have been regularly made by the Treasurer fortnightly to the Executive Committee and presented at each of their regular meetings. Duplicates of these reports have been also sent regularly the same day to the Auditor General.

Purchases

Purchases of supplies of all sorts for the various departments have been made from the lowest responsible bidders by the Treasurer's Accountant acting in conference with the Executive Manager, Mr. Lewis S. Sadler, and the Secretary, Colonel Lewis E. Beitler. Office furniture and equipment have been bought under an arrangement for return after the work of the Committee has ceased and an allowance made on cost thereof.

Persons are employed only upon the written request of the Director of each department, passed upon by the Executive Manager, recommended by the Advisory Committee, and finally ratified by recorded action of the Executive Committee, as shown by the minutes of its meetings, whereon each name and amount of salary appears.

County Executive Secretaries, nominated by the various County Committees, are confirmed after consultation with and approval by the Lieutenant Governor, and their salaries and allowances for expenses are passed upon by the Executive Committee with due regard to the local conditions of the scope of the work in the respective counties. The itemized expenses of such County Committees bear the signature of the Chairman of such Committees in approval of same.

All bills over $25 are approved before payment by the signature of the Director of the department incurring same; under that amount, by the Executive Secretary of the department; and after approval by the Treasurer's Accountant, are identified by the signature of the Secretary of the Committee as applicable for payment in accordance with action taken in regard to the matter to which they are chargeable either by the Executive or Advisory Committee, and have the signature of Mr. Arthur E. Newbold, Chairman of the Finance Committee.

Vouchers

Bills are paid by voucher drawn upon Drexel & Co., the depository of the funds of the Committee received from the Commission. These vouchers bear upon their face proper words of description and explanation to identify the respective accounts with the bills, and are verified from the approved bills by the signatures of Colonel Lewis E. Beitler, Secretary of the Committee; of Mr. Arthur E. Newbold, Chairman of the Finance Committee, and of Mr. John Radcliffe, Treasurer's Accountant, thus directing their signature and issue by the Treasurer.

These vouchers when paid are returned to the Committee for its permanent files. The original bills and accompanying documents, when paid and receipted, go to the Auditor General's Department at Harrisburg and remain there as required by law.

The accounting upon the books of the Committee carries an appropriate number of headings representing the respective departments of the work. Receipts of funds from the Commission and disbursements thereof are credited to and chargeable against these respective divisions of accounts.

This report summarizes the condition of the various activities of the Committee so far as they are shown by the expenditures applicable thereto, without going into more detail than is practicable herein. Tables are also appended showing the number of persons employed throughout the Counties of the State. These tables do not, of course, include the many persons throughout the Commonwealth who are members of the General Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety and of the County Committees, their number now totaling some eighteen thousand, who serve as volunteers and without pay.

By arrangement with the United States Government, the Departments of Civilian Service and Labor and Food Supply are co-ordinated with the Federal authorities and carry on these branches of the work under a plan of sharing the expenses thereof. These branches of the Committee's work have been growing steadily, and the expenses will probably increase with the continuance of the war. At present the rent of their offices—occupying three entire floors at the Committee's headquarters, Finance Building, Philadelphia—is paid by the Committee, and salaries of employes and other expenses are also paid as may be agreed upon from time to time by the Committee.

Treasurer.

ANALYSIS OF FIRST ANNUAL REPORT OF TREASURER, PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF NATIONAL DEFENSE AND COMMITTEE OF PUBLIC SAFETY.

The Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety has published the report of its Treasurer, Effingham B. Morris, from the commencement of the work of the Committee, April 14, 1917, to May 31, 1918, and close of the State's fiscal year.

During that period $368,921.33 was expended in war work by the Committee from the $2,000,000 set aside by the State for that purpose.

Expenditures by Departments were: For general administration, $75,953.93; for food supply, $74,830.36; for county committees, $78,830.84; for civilian service and labor, $79,306.20; for publicity and education, $21,707.49; and in other departments, $38,292.51.

In submitting his report as Treasurer, Mr. Morris details the supervision maintained over all expenditures. He states that all funds are allotted to the Committee from the legislative appropriation of $2,000,000 upon specified request and after due consideration by the Pennsylvania Commission of Public Safety and Defense. This Commission consists of the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Auditor General, State Treasurer, and Adjutant General. The funds as received are deposited with Drexel & Co. and disbursed by action of the Executive Committee, through the Treasurer, who has an accountant in charge. Daily audits are made of all expenditures by a State Auditor assigned by the Auditor General. Treasurer's reports are made fortnightly to the Executive Committee and Auditor General. Supplies are purchased through competitive bidding and from the lowest responsible bidder. The Executive Committee passes upon all employes engaged.

The report shows both the large and increasing activities of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety and the infinite detail with which its expenditures are recorded and are in this report displayed by Treasurer Morris. All information that could be desired in enabling one intelligently to understand what the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety is doing with the State's money is in evidence, and tells an impressive story in figures of work well thought out and actively and prudently managed, in conducting the State-wide mobilization of civilian activities for promotion of the Government's war program.

The Committee's Food Supply, and Civilian Service and Labor Departments are co-ordinated with the Federal Administration, and represent the Government in this work in Pennsylvania. Three floors in the Finance Building, Philadelphia, are now occupied as general State headquarters for these State and Federal departments, the rent being paid entirely by the Committee.

SUMMARY.

The report indexes the expenditures in various tables. The expense accounts shows the total amounts disbursed for the several departments and a classification indicates the purposes. There are also tables showing appropriations made separately to the various departments and the amounts drawn against these appropriations; itemizing the total monthly salaries and number of salaried employees; and also a classification of employees by departments and monthly salary rolls of same.

Larger items of expenditure were general administration, $75,953.93; food supply, $74,830.36; expenses of local County Committees in sixty-five counties, $78,830.84; civilian service and labor, $79,306.20; and publicity, $21,707.49. Salaries of 227 employees in all departments, excepting County Councils and Committees, accounts for $114,946.83 of the total expense. Salaries of sixty-six executive secretaries of the County Committees approximated $53,843. The total number of salaried employees is 293. These employees include headquarters accounting, clerical and stenographic forces, field agents, employment superintendents, farm labor managers, farm camp leaders, and other classes of employees.

In the second table, which classifies expenditures according to character of outlay, one of the biggest items was for printing and stationery used by all departments, totaling $58,309.91. This included the extensive poster work conducted in the interest of military and naval recruiting, increased food supply and conservation, and recruiting and stabilizing of labor.

Rentals totaled $21,553.72, which included rents of headquarters in the Finance Building, Food Department quarters in the Bulletin Building, and sixteen employment offices maintained in various sections of the State by the Department of Civilian Service and Labor. General offices occupying four floors in all are now located in the Finance Building.

Traveling and incidental expenses thereof amounted to $25,225.94. Of this sum more than $10,000 was used for transportation and expenses of representatives of the Committee in all counties to and from four largely attended conferences held in Philadelphia during the year, for promotion of important phases of the Committee's work. Field work by agents of the Food Department in behalf of greater crop production, better marketing and distribution of foodstuffs accounted for another $5,000 of traveling expense. Similar activities of representatives of the Civilian Service and Labor Department and conferences in connection with problems of employment added another $4,700, and patriotic propaganda on Liberty Loans, etc., conducted by the Speakers' Bureau Publicity Department, incurred traveling expenses of about $2,600.

The sum of $21,707.49 charged against the Publicity Department included traveling expenses of speakers, and salaries of clerical and executive staffs of the State and Philadelphia County Speakers' Bureau and Four Minute Men, and salaries of the Executive Secretary, office assistant, stenographer and two field representatives of the Publicity Department. It also included the expense of placing plate matter for educational purposes, at various times, in the several hundred newspapers of the State.

Furniture and fixtures for the various offices were installed at a cost of $11,117.22, subject to a ratable return when use shall have ceased. Under miscellaneous charges of $8,962 are included cost of repairs to and renovating of the Co-operative Employment Bureau, 1519-1521 Arch Street, which is obtained rent free; buttons for various recruiting purposes, stenographic reports of conferences, shipments of slides for propaganda purposes in moving picture houses and similar emergency outlays. Advertising to acquaint employers and employees with the Committee's free employment service maintained throughout the State, and to promote crop production, cost $3,733.95.

The sum of $7,169.44 was spent for police equipment, billies, badges, etc., for the Home Defense police organized in twenty-six counties. More than $2,100 was spent for flags, signs, banners, posting, truck service, etc., to aid State and National military recruiting and similar expenditures of about $2,300 were made for naval recruiting.

WARTIME ACTIVITIES OF THE PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF NATIONAL DEFENSE.

When a history is written of Pennsylvania's part in winning the war, the chapters devoted to civilian activities will of necessity be largely a recital of the work of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense.

This war-emergency body, originally known as the Committee of Public Safety for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, was created in March, 1917, by appointment of the Governor, to mobilize and conserve the civil resources of the state for the benefit of the Federal war program. Some 300 prominent citizens were named to inaugurate the work. But successive appointments soon increased the membership until the Council became the largest public organization ever created in Pennsylvania, with a roster of 15,000 representative, influential civilians whose services were given voluntarily as required to help the nation win the war.

Federal authority was early vested in the Council, through which it became the medium for the conduct of practically all of the national war policies, so far as they applied to Pennsylvania. The State Legislature promptly provided a war-work fund of $2,000,000, control of which was assigned to the Pennsylvania Commission of Public Safety and Defense, composed of the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Auditor-General, Adjutant-General and State Treasurer. The Council (at that time the Committee of Public Safety) became the functioning arm of this Commission, and its numerous war-emergency undertakings were approved and financed to present total appropriations of more than $1,000,00.

To review the comprehensive work of the Council would be to enumerate almost all of the noteworthy war-time achievements of the State. Its far-reaching program gradually led to an assimilation of all of the important civilian service essential to successful prosecution of the war. The conduct of its work represented a concentration of effort not paralleled at any other time in Pennsylvania's history and probably unexcelled by any other State mobilization of potential resources. But, splendid as have been its physical accomplishments, perhaps the greatest service rendered by the Council was its fusing of the patriotic endeavor of all creeds and classes into singleness and unanimity of purpose, and that purpose a fixed and unselfish resolve to spare no effort and to shirk no duty that would help to win the war. Never before in Pennsylvania has this unanimity of public aim been achieved. The Council was able to bring about this result because of its State-wide organization and its solitary objective—success of the national war program. Its absorption of all special war activities and of the efforts of all classes of war workers naturally permitted the introduction and secured the ready acceptance everywhere of a harmonious spirit of patriotic service.

Much of the work undertaken was of a constructive character, and its value has been so apparent that permanent retention of some features has been recommended by State officials and will be brought before the incoming Legislature. This applies especially to Americanization of the foreign-born, food supply and food conservation work, employment service and child welfare activities.

Detailed mention is made in the appended outline of the broad general work of the Council. This work was conducted under a plan which concentrated all activities in five divisions, and their appropriate separate departments, of the Council, all under compact, central executive control.

Major divisions directing activities were Administration, which included Departments of Finance, Publicity, Legislation and Legal Advisory Department; Relief, including Departments of Medicine, Sanitation and Hospitals, and Civic Relief; Equipment and Supplies, with Departments of Food Supply, Construction and Materials, and Highways Transport Committee; Service, with Departments of Civilian Service and Labor, Military Service, Naval Service, and Volunteer Home Defense Police; and Division of Transportation, with Departments of Railroads, Electric Railways and Motors, and Highways and Waterways. The Council, therefore, had a working scope covering practically every field of useful endeavor.

Being the only body which had delegated State authority to mobilize and conserve all resources essential to the prosecution of the war, it obtained the willingly granted right to assimilate operations of many useful established organizations and institutions. As necessity demanded, their functions were incorporated almost wholly or in part into the general work, as hereafter described. Activities of official State departments essential to the efficiency of the Council's program were at its command. The Council thus stood as the one body in Pennsylvania with organization and authority for carrying out its great and vital work.

There were 70 sub-divisions of the Council in the 67 counties of the State. These sub-committees were duplicates, in organization and working scope, of the main Council. Each sub-Council had one salaried officer—an executive secretary—who was responsible for stimulation of effort in his county, for keeping his Council fully informed of the State-wide work in hand, and also for keeping headquarters fully acquainted with the activities of his particular Council.

A word of appreciation is due those loyal and untiring citizens who so promptly accepted membership in the Council and so devotedly fulfilled the patriotic obligations which they assumed with that membership. Their services were vital as reinforcement of the country's military effort and will be held in grateful remembrance as having enabled Pennsylvania to maintain her service back of the line equal to the unsurpassed standard of her service on the battle front.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE.

The duties of the Department of Finance are referred to in the report of Effingham B. Morris, Treasurer. The accounts of the Pennsylvania Council, as an agent of the Commission of Public Safety and Defense created by the Legislature, are audited by the Auditor-General of Pennsylvania, as required by the organic law of the Commonwealth. It has been the fixed policy of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense to safeguard the amount appropriated by the Legislature in every way to meet the demands arising in the course of the arduous task of the country, as allotted by the Commission to the Council as its agent for the purpose. The strictest economy has, therefore, been observed by the Pennsylvania Council in confining expenditures to general purposes of public safety and defense. Up to December 31, 1918, the date of the Treasurer's report submitted herewith, $882,129.16, which is less than one-half of the $2,000,000 appropriated by the Legislature, had been spent for all the work accomplished by the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense, as outlined in the activities of its various departments herein set forth and detailed in the Treasurer's report. The first annual report of the Treasurer was issued on June 27, 1918, and is now brought down to date. A supplement will also be filed in the near future, covering the final expenditures of the closing period of the Council's activities from and after December 31, 1918. Allotments already made by the Commission will, the Council believes, prove more than sufficient to cover outstanding and closing expenses, unless unforeseen war contingencies arise. The balance of the cash in hand will then, of course, be returned to the control and disposition of the proper State authorities.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLICITY AND EDUCATION.

Among the first divisions of the Council to function was the Department of Publicity, which closely adhered to its designated work of interpreting to the public the Council's plans and activities and of conducting an educational propaganda.

This work called for sub-division of activities and the employment of various agencies through which very effective service was made possible. There was, of course, the news division and correlated publicity service. This was fully maintained. A second division, and by far the largest in the Department, was in charge of speaking activities. This was the Speakers' Bureau (Four Minute Men Division), including some 6000 speakers, splendidly organized, their efforts directed by a State chairman in immediate touch with the inspirational source, at Washington, of all patriotic propaganda conducted by means of the spoken word.

The Four Minute Men were a picturesque feature of the country's war effort. Pennsylvania had the largest Four Minute organization of any State, and Philadelphia, with more than 300 Four Minute Men, had the largest single unit. These organized speakers were a big factor in the success of the Liberty Loan, Red Cross, War Savings and other patriotic drives. They accepted all speaking engagements necessary to the promotion of every phase of patriotic effort.

In a year of service in Pennsylvania they addressed more than 35,000 meetings, with a total attendance of more than 23,000,000 persons. During the Fourth Liberty Loan drive, alone, despite the handicap of a prevailing influenza epidemic, they spoke at 21,164 meetings to more than 11,000,000 people.

Incorporation of the Four Minute Division into the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense was one of the numerous illustrations of how the Federal war activities functioned through the State body.

Another division, which effectively supported the speaking activities was the Liberty Sing Army. This singing organization was extended to 55 counties of the State and included 100 choruses, under the guidance of a State Director and 100 local directors. More than 1,000,000 patriotic song sheets were distributed to members of the "Sing" Army who were regularly enrolled and pledged to dedicate voice and service to the national cause, a pledge which was loyally fulfilled during the war period.

A fourth, and a most important division of the Department, took up a work of far-reaching and permanent value—the Americanization of the foreign-born population of the State. Organization for this work, by a recognized expert, was begun only after a very exhaustive study of the State problem. The Chief of the bureau spent many years in similar work among the foreign-born employees of one of the great steel corporations of Pennsylvania.

In preparing to inaugurate the work, a survey, by questionnaire, was made, which disclosed that of the 67 counties of the State, only 12 did not show a perceptible foreign population. The other 55 counties included foreign-born residents—many completely foreign in the sense of unfamiliarity with American ideals and standards—to the number of 1,500,000.

A personal visitation was made by the Chief of the bureau to about 40 of the counties for the purpose of setting up a permanent organization, and as rapidly as Community Councils were formed, representatives for carrying on Americanization were appointed.

A registration is under way throughout the State to determine the number, nationality and citizenship status of the foreign-born. Registration is being especially pushed in the large industrial sections of the State.

Afternoon classes, evening classes and factory classes to teach the language, standards of living, and other features of Americanization to the foreign-born have been organized, and this work has been encouraged through correspondence, personal visitation and general instruction. County and city superintendents of schools readily acceded to having Americanization placed on their Institute programs for discussion. A member of the faculty of Columbia University and of the Carnegie Foundation was engaged to write plans for instructing foreigners in English covering a course of three years. This work has been completed and is being distributed throughout the State.

The Superintendent of Schools for the Ford plant, of Detroit, was secured to instruct teachers, through the courtesy of Mr. Ford. He gave a course of instruction consisting of six and one-half hours each at Erie, Scranton, Sharon, Pittsburgh and other industrial centres in the State. Through the efforts of this Bureau, an Americanization course is being given in the University of Pittsburgh covering two semesters with University credit. It is free, with a class of 176 teachers, and those interested in Americanization taking the work at this time.

A free information, complaint and advice service is planned, and one bureau is established in Pittsburgh to which foreigners can go for official information regarding any matters of vital interest to them.

Publicity was given Americanization through addresses made by members of this department, at chambers of commerce, teachers' institutes, business meetings, plant meetings, congresses of foreign-born persons, clubs and church organizations, and through English and foreign-language newspapers.

One foreign speakers' bureau has been organized to assist in Liberty Loan, Red Cross and other drives. This organization will be maintained and used in furthering Americanization work.

An Americanization conference was held in Philadelphia which was attended by delegates from every county of the State. The following Americanization folios were published in the interest of the work:

1. Americanization in Pennsylvania.
2. Organization of schools for the foreign-born.
3. Americanization in industry.
4. Suggestions on Americanization for various co-operative agencies.
5. Methods of teaching English to foreigners, first, second and third years.

The approved plan of organization has been fully carried out in seven counties and is rapidly being extended. The plan requires an Americanization committee and an executive committee of six in each district.

The work as a whole has been basic and fundamental. The underlying idea has been to mold public opinion in the State towards the establishment of a permanent Americanization bureau under State control.

A fifth division was the Bureau of War Charities, which was organized at the request of the National Council for the purpose of protecting the public, and was active in approving the solicitation of war-relief funds only by worthy, necessary organizations.

The news service of the Publicity Department was fully developed and comprehensive. The plan was adopted of making the service, so far as possible, the clearing house for all news relating to general activities. There are, of course, well-known established avenues through which publicity is usually disseminated and these were regularly employed. Other methods of keeping the public informed were also devised and utilized with good effect.

Posters and general literature were issued and the "Pennsylvania Bulletin" was published at intervals to exploit the more important work of the Council. The most complete co-operation was given by the press in furthering the work of the Council. Practically unlimited newspaper space was devoted by the patriotic publishers of the State to the promotion of the Council's local and State-wide activities.

DEPARTMENT OF LEGISLATION.

Duties defined for the Department of Legislation included, inter-alia, the framing of appropriate statutes to give effective force to policies or measures adopted by the Executive Committee; also, their introduction into and support before the Legislature.

One of the bills which enlisted the Department's attention was the Act of Assembly passed at the 1917 session of the Legislature, authorizing the creation of the Pennsylvania Home Defense Police. A number of problems, such, for example, as anti-loafing measures, which had been given local attention in various counties, would have required special legislation for their elimination had the war continued, and were being considered by the Department.

LEGAL ADVISORY DEPARTMENT.

Upon the creation of the Legal Advisory Department, a Legal Advisory Board consisting of seven members was appointed which organized legal committees in each of the 67 counties of the State, representing a total membership of 1020 attorneys, who, upon request and without charge, advised men called into military service as to their legal rights and the care of their financial affairs while in camp and at the front.

Posters containing names and addresses of members of committees of each county were placed in all draft board headquarters and post offices throughout the State. A legal handbook was published which contains a brief digest of the Federal and State legislation affecting men in military and naval service. Copies of this book were distributed to the members of legal committees and to the judicial authorities in the State, as a guide for local legal committees in giving advice to drafted men.

It must be realized that many men called into the military service left their affairs in a chaotic condition, and it was to the members of these committees that the members of the family of the soldier or sailor came for advice. In fact, any information or help that the drafted or enlisted man or his family needed was obtained from members of these committees. They not only protected the rights of the enlisted man in court proceedings, but also prepared for him wills, powers of attorney, arranged his affairs in building associations and insurance companies, and when occasion required it, directed the Red Cross in the care of dependent wives and children and in matters pertaining to allotments, insurance and the care of their property.

Now that demobilization has taken place, it is imperative that the discharged soldier and sailor should resume his industrial activities as speedily as possible, and be assisted in placing in order his business affairs. For this purpose the Legal Advisory Department has retained its organization of legal committees in each of the counties throughout the State. It is most gratifying to report that members of the committees have volunteered to continue to help, in legal matters, the enlisted man, so that he may make a good start in civil life upon his return from camp from the front.

DEPARTMENT OF SANITATION AND HOSPITALS.

This Department was organized with a view to co-operating in its particular field with State and Federal activities, supplementing such co-operation by original effort where necessary.

The Department's first effort was the compilation and indexing of data relating to every organization, institution and profession coming within its scope whose capacity, operation and personnel could in any way be applied to the service of the State and nation in war-time.

Among its special activities which attracted national attention was a campaign which the Department inaugurated for the conservation of drugs, pharmaceutical supplies and biological products. The 6000 druggists of the State, also doctors, veterinarians and dentists, were solicited by the Department to pledge themselves to prevent waste of these products. Overstocking by stores of perishable supplies, such as antitoxins and serums, was discouraged. Druggists were requested to educate the public in home conservation of drugs and remedies. The Department's campaign was endorsed by the American Manufacturers of Pharmaceutical and Biological Products at their 1917 convention in New York, who urged that similar action be taken in all States.

Considerable effort was devoted to listing professional men for various branches of service. A particularly valuable roster was compiled of dentists, veterinarians and pharmacists willing to give special service in emergency. The information included the character and amount of service proffered, the equipment possessed and how much of it was available for Government use.

Complete information was obtained relating to hospitals, homes and other institutions. Essential facts, such as the location, ownership, character and equipment of these institutions, and whether at the disposal of the Government, were included.

Institutions and buildings which might be used in emergencies as convalescent hospitals are indexed, and the facts are still available to inform the Government of the best location for reclamation or hospital camps. This information includes such details as approximate size, topography, present condition of the sites, transportation and light and power facilities in each case.

Realizing that it was essential to insure a constant supply of medical officers for the army and navy, as well as for the civilian population in case the war lasted a number of years, a State-wide campaign was made to discourage medical and pre-medical students from enlisting prior to the draft. Similar action was taken in behalf of dental and veterinary students. All of these, except the pre-medical students, were ultimately permitted to enroll in the Enlisted Medical Reserve Corps, and thus were enabled to finish their courses in the institutions in which they registered.

Sanitary camp sites were secured for a number of Pennsylvania military units prior to their departure for the permanent camps. The military camps throughout the State were inspected in the interest of improved policing and general sanitary conditions, cleanliness of the men, etc., the State Board of Health inspecting the water supply, sewage disposal and other sanitary installation.

All hospitals in the State possessing sufficient clinical material to give competent instruction were encouraged to increase their facilities for enlarging the number of pupils taking the regular three-year course for the thorough training of nurses. Young women were encouraged to enter the regular hospital training courses.

The Department took an active part in promoting the creation of auxiliary forces of nurses to supplement trained staffs depleted by the war. This was accomplished largely by requesting hospitals throughout the State to offer special three months' courses in hospital work to women. These courses were given as an elementary training to provide a valuable auxiliary nursing force in case of emergency, those finishing such courses not to be considered as fully trained nurses. The value of this and similar preparatory effort was emphasized during the recent devastating influenza epidemic which swept the State.

Through the Department, the services of the entire State-wide organization of the Pennsylvania Council were marshalled in support of the preventive, sanitary and relief work of the State Department of Health.

Spencer C. Gilbert, Esq., a member of the Executive Committee, was appointed to represent the Pennsylvania Council at Harrisburg in order to establish direct contact with the Acting Commissioner of Health for prompt and intelligent direction and control of the County Council's work.

Mr. Gilbert opened at once headquarters adjacent to the Health Commissioner's Office, and his facilities included direct telephone service to all sections of the State for the transmission of instructions to and receipt of reports from county officers of the Council and other administrative duties. The thorough organization maintained by the County Councils made it possible to place in each county at the command of the Acting Commissioner of Health a large and efficient force of workers equipped for rendering prompt services of varied nature.

Registration records of the Department had been prepared for just such a crisis. Using the registration as a basis, it was possible with the aid of State and local health authorities, to control and direct demands for medical services, and also to conserve the work of overburdened physicians.

The menace of a drug shortage was avoided in some places by a country-wide inventory of supplies, which record was centrally kept and used in maintaining a proper distribution. In a few places the exaction of high prices was reported, but this practice was in most instances quickly and quietly suppressed by the Department or other representatives of the local Councils of Defense.

In the creation of emergency hospitals the Department and the County Councils generally bore a most important part. In some instances they obtained, opened and equipped these hospitals. In others they co-operated with the authorities and with associated bodies. Again, meetings were called by our initiative, and the desired results obtained.

Prompt despatch of doctors, nurses, drugs, food and supplies, as well as the removal of patients to and from the hospitals, was made possible by the thorough organization of the Highways Transport Committee of the Pennsylvania Council, which co-operated to the fullest extent.

Necessary quarantine service was obtained through the co-operation of the State Council's Volunteer Home Defense Police. Wide publicity for preventive and treatment measures was secured on behalf of the Department and the State authorities by the County Council's publicity organizations, generously supported by the press.

In securing material, assistance, beds and bedding, cots, chairs, tables, cooking utensils, foodstuffs, drugs and fuel, the central organization of our Council, with representatives in all parts of the counties, enabled the whole to be directed with speed and efficiency, and did much not only to prevent wasted effort, but to assemble adequate supplies at remote points.

A complete report of all services rendered to the State and to the public during the epidemic has been separately issued and official appreciation of the work is therein expressed.

DEPARTMENT OF CIVIC RELIEF.

Soon after its inception this Department formulated a comprehensive program for broad supervision and direction of war-time civilian relief. The application however of Federal, county and municipal measurer to the solution of this problem rendered it unnecessary for the Department to undertake the active conduct of much of the service originally contemplated, but it was able by co-ordinating the efforts of existing agencies and through co-operative aid to do much to promote war relief work.

The Department gave valuable assistance to humanitarian societies and associations through a special appeal made to the charitable public, urging them not to overlook their customary contributions in the stress of war-time conditions. More than 20,000 contributors were reached by this appeal, and the response was much appreciated by various institutions which otherwise might have been seriously handicapped by the withdrawal of subscriptions. A notable work was undertaken through the creation of a Child Welfare Division, whose function has been to survey that problem in the State and begin the conservation of the health of children as a permanent measure. Co-operation of the State Department of Health was invited and the program was so favorably viewed that the State Commissioner of Health created in his Department a new Division of Child Hygiene, with which was merged the activities of the Pennsylvania Council's Child Welfare Division, whose director was placed in charge of the State-wide work.

At the present time there are Child Welfare organizations in 59 counties of the State, and 33 of them have done effective work and have co-operated so satisfactorily with the Division of Child Hygiene of the Department of Health that there has been made possible a permanent working basis between the Department and their county committees.

In organizing local committees the plan has been adopted of adhering to school district boundaries in the rural districts and voting precincts in the cities. Small towns in themselves constitute single units. The committees include local representatives of the State Health Department, local health officers, physicians, members of nursing agencies and of women's clubs and civilians prominent in sociological work.

Effort has been concentrated principally upon the insuring of proper care for mothers and for infants at recognized critical periods, and in protecting the health and maintaining the nutrition of children of pre-school age (2 to 6 years). Advice is given and qualified experts are at call to aid in stimulating interest and planning procedure for all communities taking up the subject of protection of child health.

In the Philadelphia unit of the Civic Relief Department a Sub-Committee on Recreation devised social activities, amusements and as much of the spirit of home life as possible for enlisted men stationed in or about the city. A weekly bulletin was published through which army and navy men were kept in touch with recreations and amusements regularly organized for their diversion. This bulletin at times listed as many as 100 sources of entertainment, absolutely free to service men. Various organizations, clubs and fraternities co-operated in providing these entertainments. The Recreation Committee had booths located at central points as information bureaus for men in the service. In many other ways it made itself of great use to the large military and naval force here mobilized.

DEPARTMENT OF FOOD SUPPLY.

Organized before the creation of the United States Food Administration, with which it eventually merged, the Department of Food Supply early assumed its assigned task of awakening the people of the State to the seriousness of the world food situation, and the institution of such measures as would enable Pennsylvania to contribute its share to the general relief.

The appointment, later, of Howard Heinz, its Director, as U. S. Food Administrator for Pennsylvania, and the conduct of both organizations under his management, was a concrete example of the functioning of the National war program in this State through the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense.

Local Food Supply Committees were appointed in all counties, an executive secretarial force was installed and work was immediately started along the following clearly defined lines:

To increase the productiveness of the State in all food materials.

To conserve the food supply of the State and reduce food waste.

To facilitate food distribution and marketing.

While, from the beginning of operations, the Department of Food Supply, and later the Food Administration, relied mainly upon the county organizations for the extension of their services and propaganda, early recognition was given to the potential value and usefulness of many permanent State institutions and private agencies, which were called upon to assist in working out the food problems. A close co-operation was constantly maintained with the State Department of Agriculture and Labor, the Farm Extension Bureau, State College, State Agricultural Commission, the Grange, and with churches, schools and the public press, all of which rendered valuable services.

Although organized rather late in 1917 to proffer a large degree of assistance to farmers in the way of additional supplies of fertilizers, implements, etc., the Department was yet able to help, directly and through its local committees, in obtaining and distributing seed, labor, and, in some instances, increased bank credits; also in promoting the cultivation of many large areas of vacant lands and of the town and city war garden plan. Informative posters and bulletins covering the needs of the situation and suggesting the substitution of staple crops for less essentials were issued and widely distributed. Meetings of farmers were addressed extensively and much educational propaganda was put forth through the columns of the local and agricultural press, and by various other means, the excellent results of which were generally evident in the 1917 State crop return.

Educational work was undertaken in many directions from the beginning to teach the vital necessity of avoiding food waste and for the substitution for foods less abundant and those needed abroad, of those in plentiful supply. The Federal Food Administration Conservation Pledge plan for housewives was given strong support by the Pennsylvania Food Department in a State-wide campaign for the signatures, which resulted in the registration under the food-saving banner of upwards of 1,000,000 Pennsylvania women.

Another early activity, instituted with the first maturing crops of perishable fruits and vegetables, was the creation of a corps of expert women demonstrators of canning, preserving and drying, by which large classes were taught modern methods in many districts.

Early surveys were instituted preparatory to an effort to equalize distribution as far as possible. Definite plans were formulated for the establishment of community markets, both in towns and at rural roadsides, as a means of bringing the producer and consumer into direct contact. Many such markets were established in various sections of the State and were productive of much good, through the elimination of spoilage waste and the reduction of food cost to the consumer without the usual relative disadvantage to the producer.

As a result, three months after the war began, of the adoption of the Food Administration plan, it became necessary, as a means of avoiding duplication of effort and overlapping of subordinate authority, to merge the State and Federal activities into one general organization that closely co-ordinated all the elements engaged and all functions, both administrative and educational. Thus, while many features of the food work in Pennsylvania in the latter half of 1917 had their inception in the State Food Department, their execution, after mid-August, was jointly conducted by an enlarged State and Federal organization working in the common interest.

To insure the complete and safe harvesting of Pennsylvania 1917 crops, movements were set on foot, in co-operation with the Civilian Service, and Labor Department, to enlist schoolboy labor, the volunteer labor of city vacationists having practical farm experience, and to close small town stores one or two days of each week to permit proprietors and clerks to engage in harvesting work. While the farm labor supply of the State was at no time in the season equal to the demand, it is an undoubted fact that by one means and another the actual requirements were met and the crops saved.

Every possible encouragement was extended to farmers throughout the season to raise additional supplies of quick meat, including poultry, hogs and sheep, with especially favorable results as to the two first mentioned and a general improvement in the sheep-raising industry.

As the 1917 season advanced a State-wide movement was begun to obtain as material an increase in the normal acreage of winter wheat and rye as possible without undue disturbance of the crop rotation balance; to secure better yields per acre through seed selection, the distribution of fertilizer at reasonable cost and its more economical use, and by educational work in better methods in general. A volunteer corps of practical speakers on farm topics was engaged over a considerable period in addressing grange meetings, Farmers' Institutes and neighborhood meetings in rural communities.

A Farmers' Potato Association was organized, with a large membership throughout the State, which concerns itself in matters of seed selection, cultivation methods and crop marketing, and it is expected that the influence of this organized movement for the betterment of existing conditions will have a permanent material good effect upon this important Pennsylvania crop.

The food conservation propaganda was enlarged by a special campaign of intensive character in the Sunday Schools of the State, in which a day was set apart as Food Conservation Day. The whole movement, vigorously supported by county organizations and the press, constituted perhaps the largest single intensive educational undertaking made in connection with the nation's food interests.

This was followed by a similar campaign among the secular schools of the State public and private under support of the State educational authorities, and in full co-operation with superintendents, principals and teachers.

Many public meetings were held for the purpose of promoting conservation, and thousands of addresses made before regular assemblies, including church congregations. Personal canvass among homes was undertaken on a large scale, especially in districts populated by foreigners. Much literature, including kitchen and window cards, was effectively placed.

War kitchens were established in co-operation with the Woman's Committee for regular operation over considerable periods in larger cities, in which courses of demonstration work were carried on. Many demonstration exhibits were conducted at county fairs and other miscellaneous gatherings.

The chief food conservation demonstration and exhibit of Pennsylvania, however, and one regarded as particularly unique and effective, was a Food Train, consisting of three cars especially fitted and operated for this purpose.

In one of these cars was a collection of graphic exhibits illustrating the principle of food conservation, the reasons for its necessity, and what it could be made to accomplish by individual effort combined. Another taught war bread making and methods of conserving wheat, sugar, meats and fats by the use of substitutes. A third demonstrated canning, preserving and drying by the use of such implements and devices as are readily accessible to the ordinary household.

The demonstration work on this train was conducted by competent instructors in home economics supplied by State College. The train was operated over a period of six weeks in the autumn of 1917. Beginning June, 1918, it covered practically every railroad station in the State, outside of the larger cities. Its operation was largely by courtesy of the Pennsylvania Railroad, which contributed cars suitably fitted and decorated, exterior and interior, also their hauling and shared the outfitting expense with the State, which otherwise did all the actual financing.

Hotel and restaurant men were induced to contribute voluntary aid to the conservation cause by reducing menus, the partial elimination of foods required in the prosecution of the war, and the more extensive service of substitute cereals for wheat and of seafoods and vegetables. A conservative estimate of the conservation by hotels and restaurants in Pennsylvania, based upon a questionnaire, placed the saving from November, 1917, to May, 1918, inclusive, of meat over 8,000,000 pounds and of flour over 9,000,000 pounds; from February to May, 1918, inclusive, of sugar at approximately 3,000,000 pounds.

Through co-operating with the Food Administration, the Department shared in the credit of a stupendous cash saving. This, applied to Pennsylvania, meant on a normal consumption of approximately 9,000,000 barrels of wheat flour, a saving in price by regulation of from ten to twelve dollars per barrel; because, left to the action of the law of supply and demand, flour might have speedily reached a price of $25. On flour alone it meant a benefit of at least $90,000,000 to Pennsylvania pockets, while in sugar, just as surely to have soared to a price of 25 cents per pound, uncontrolled, with a normal State consumption of 720,000,000 pounds, there was roughly a saving of $100,000,000 more.

The women's organization in Pennsylvania rendered untiring and invaluable service in its contact with large and small groups of women, with the homes of the people direct, and with both the native and foreign elements. With the last named, its influence for good was most potent and of the highest importance.

The work of the Department was given the highest Federal commendation at a Food Conference of committee representatives held in Philadelphia. It was attended by Federal Food Administrator Hoover, who acknowledged that Pennsylvania's food conservation, food producing efforts, and general committee efficiency were unsurpassed elsewhere. The department had, at that time, registered more housekeepers in the food saving campaign than all of the other States of the Union combined.

DEPARTMENTS OF MATERIALS AND PLANTS.

It was originally planned that the Department of Materials should undertake as part of its work to determine with exactness the available resources of the State in minerals and materials which enter into industrial processes.

A survey of the industrial capacity of the State's manufacturing establishments and co-ordination of their productive effort were intended to be within the working scope of the Department of Plants.

Both departments were organized, county directors were appointed and preparations were made for active service. It was, however, decided by the Council of National Defense, Washington, D. C., to undertake the work falling within the scope of these departments on a national basis through Federal committees and boards. At the request of the National Council, the Departments, therefore, discontinued their work, in which no expense to the State had been incurred up to that time. Thereafter the functioning of Federal bodies made it unnecessary for either Department to resume.

DEPARTMENTS OF CONSTRUCTION AND MATERIALS.

The Department of Construction and Materials was created in September, 1918, when the War Industries Board, through the Council of National Defense, called upon the Pennsylvania Council to act as their representative in passing upon all proposed construction projects, in order that all building construction which was not absolutely necessary might be stopped. B. Dawson Coleman was appointed Director. He immediately proceeded to create an organization in every county of the State and issued a bulletin outlining the work and defining the duties of the Department.

At that time, there was no doubt of the urgent necessity on the part of the Government to preserve all labor, materials and transportation for war essential work. Through the broadly organized machinery of the Pennsylvania State Council, this Department was able to act promptly, not only in establishing its own organization, but also in accomplishing effective work throughout the State.

The Director addressed personal letters to the Mayors of most of the prominent cities throughout the Commonwealth, and local committees of the Department held meetings with various building and trade organizations. General publicity was given to this work through the local directors in the several counties; posters were printed and distributed through every county and appeals of various kinds were made calling upon all patriotic citizens to defer all unnecessary building projects until after the war had been won.

The people of Pennsylvania responded most heartily to these appeals, and the amount of work deferred in this manner no doubt greatly exceeded the figures obtained through formal applications.

During the period from September 14 to November 13, when the War Industries Board removed all restrictions on building construction, the following results were obtained:

Six hundred and ninety-one applications were acted upon and were either approved or disapproved.
Applications received and disapproved	$1,766,646.00
Projects deferred by persuasion through the Local Committees, etc	2,873,701.00

Total amount of work deferred	$4,640,347.00
Applications approved by this Department and the War Industries Board, mostly projects already under construction	$1,431,786.00

Restricting power was not exercised in any arbitrary way, and results were accomplished without undue criticism.

HIGHWAYS TRANSPORTATION COMMITTEE.

The Highways Transport Committee, originally organized and long operated as the Department of Motors and Motor Trucks, began its work with an exhaustive inventory of the motor resources of the State, the object being to arrange a comprehensive motor service ready at instant call for any emergency situation.

Activities following the organization of this department included not only important duties therein originating, but also a great amount of co-operative service of value to other departments.

Following the development and extension of the Pennsylvania Council's work during the progress of the war, demands for transportation and the uses to which motor service could be applied became even greater than had been anticipated.

The wisdom of securing registration for emergency service of 25 per cent. of the 300,000 passenger cars of the State was amply justified. Ten per cent of these cars constituted a reserve for immediate emergency use night or day. This emergency service was given in practically all counties of the State. Hardly any war activity was conducted without at one time or other utilizing the ample and ready resources of the motors division.

One of the greatest services rendered by the various units of the Committee was the splendid work during the recent State-wide influenza epidemic. In this crisis the county divisions of the Committee furnished cars for the transportation of doctors and nurses, the removal of stricken persons, and the conveying of meals, drugs and supplies. It even became necessary to use trucks as hearses and ambulances. For a period of three weeks, emergency transportation units, the smallest consisting of 20 cars and the largest of 400 cars, were constantly employed. In Philadelphia, 3000 cars had been under requisition for the Fourth Liberty Loan Drive, and 400 were diverted to epidemic service. A part from the epidemic crisis, emergency motor ambulance service was furnished to various hospitals in many sections when required.

The several Liberty Loan campaigns created a tremendous demand for motor service, which was fully met. Four Minute Speakers, Community Choruses, War Exhibits and other essentials to the work of stirring up popular support for the Loans could not have been so efficiently employed had it not been for the mobility obtained through the Highways Transport Committee. Motor facilities provided by the Committee were also largely used in the War Savings and Thrift Stamp drives, Red Cross and Y. M. C. A. campaigns. In many counties cars were furnished to haul Red Cross supplies, comforts, etc., which were being shipped to the war zone. The Committee also moved baggage of drafted men, provided transportation for units of the Student Army Training Corps, hauled emergency farm workers to and from the farming districts, helped in the crop movement and assisted in the fuel conservation campaign by conveying firewood from woodlands to cities. Volunteer workers who cut this wood were also transported.

That the Committee had an organization capable of coping with big emergency work was illustrated when the Second Field Artillery—a Philadelphia big-gun regiment—received orders to mobilize early in the war. At short notice, through its Philadelphia Division, the Department supplied 60 motor trucks and transported 1300 artillerymen, batteries of heavy howitzers and a vast amount of stores and equipment from the armory in the center of the city to a mobilization camp ten miles distant. The work was accomplished in a few hours, despite very unfavorable weather conditions, and without a single mishap, breakdown or delay. High appreciation was expressed by Colonel H. D. Turner, commanding the regiment.

Another notable illustration of capacity to dispose of emergency calls was the work of the Chester Division during disturbances in that city. In response to a hurry call from the Mayor, the division put into service 24 motor vehicles, which were used to transport guards, police and State police. The service was so effective in assisting the authorities to keep disorder in check that its continuance was requested and granted until the trouble had been suppressed. Many cars and trucks remained in service all night during the most violent periods of the outbreak. The great value of the service rendered was publicly acknowledged by Mayor McDowell.

Motorists throughout the State were also enlisted in an important war-time service. At the call of the Committee the county units undertook to keep Pennsylvania's main highways open to traffic throughout the winter. Freeing of the highways from snow blockades was of great value to the War Department. The first test run of a war truck convoy from Detroit to an Atlantic port was successful, principally because of the Committee's work in providing an unobstructed route. More than half of the journey lay through Pennsylvania. Very heavy snows preceded the arrival of the convoy and caused delays elsewhere, but Pennsylvania's roads were kept passable. In some places drifts 8 feet high were cleared away. The route lay through 8 Pennsylvania counties, in each one of which the local committees made every provision for the speeding of the convoy to its destination. The crews were housed and fed and the trucks were overhauled in accordance with a program prearranged by the Committee. Patriotic demonstrations were also a feature. The convoy maintained schedule time throughout its trip in the State, which was in strong contrast with the delays it encountered on other portions of its journey. The War Department, in appreciation of the service rendered, warmly commended the Committee's work in press announcements issued at Washington, D. C.

In various sections of the State pilots were provided for succeeding convoys and they insured against delays through missing the route. In one county alone, volunteer pilots guided more than 1500 trucks during the period of shipment. Route guides were also furnished to chauffeurs when the convoys passed through Philadelphia.

When the landing of large American Armies in the War zone had introduced new and complicated problems of army motor transportation the War Department availed itself of the services of the Chairman of the Pennsylvania Highways Transport Committee, who went to France and assisted in adjusting the motor service to General Pershing's needs. A vice-chairman of the Committee also accepted and rendered similar service for Y. M. C. A. transportation in France.

The Committee was active in encouraging the establishment of motor express service and promoting the "return loads" plan advocated by the National Highways Transport Committee.

DEPARTMENT OF CIVILIAN SERVICE AND LABOR.

The Department of Civilian Service and Labor was created for the study and solution of the many labor problems which have arisen in connection with the war emergency. Its duties have included the ascertaining of labor needs in the various war industries and the supplying of these needs so far as possible. In carrying out this program, the efforts of the Department have been directed not only to the redistribution of labor in such a manner as to serve the best interests of a nation at war, but the mobilizing of a new force of workers from the ranks of young men of high school age, women and girls and persons heretofore unemployed.

The main feature in the program of the Department was the supplying of labor to war industries through a State-wide system of employment bureaus. Using as a nucleus, the offices already established by the State Department of Labor and Industry, the activities of these offices were extended and new bureaus opened in all of the larger industrial centers. In May, 1918, the Director of the Department of Civilian Service and Labor was appointed Federal Director for Pennsylvania of the United States Employment Service, and an agreement was made with the Department of Labor whereby the offices already established, then 17 in number, should become part of the Federal Service in Pennsylvania. Funds were appropriated by the United States Government for extensive additions to the service, and a comprehensive system was developed, operating under the supervision and control of the State Director. The headquarters offices of the Federal Employment Service were supplied by the Department of Civilian Service and Labor, which combined its offices with theirs. Under this system a total of 70 offices were established to supply the needs of war industries in practically every industrial community in the State.

By proclamation of the President, the United States Employment Service maintained, since August 1, 1918, exclusive control of the handling of unskilled labor to war industries. The recruiting of all forms of labor has been controlled and directed by the service. A carefully evolved plan of clearance placed the resources of the entire State at the disposal of the essential industries in any particular district, and at the same time a system of operation by zones made it possible to supply the needs of these industries with as little geographical redistribution as possible. Over 200,000 workers were supplied to war industries between August 1, 1918, when the enlarged system was put into operation, and the date of the signing of the armistice. An equal important task now faces the Service, in the transference of these workers back to peacetime industries and the finding of jobs for the thousands of men about to be released from military and naval service.

The urgent need of supplying agricultural labor was recognized by the creation of a special section of the Department known as the Committee on Agricultural Labor Service. Through this section local agricultural committees were organized and an agent, designated the County Manager for Farm Labor, was appointed in practically every county in the State. These managers acted as local representatives in obtaining information in regard to the needs of the farmers in their respective districts and in handling the placement of such labor as was available. In a number of communities Farm Emergency Corps were organized, and through these corps hundreds of business men in various parts of the State volunteered their services for one or more days each week during the peak season in order that the crops might all be harvested. The agents of the Agricultural Labor Service Committee worked in co-operation with the Farm Bureau Agents in each county, and with the United States Department of Agriculture, whose representative made his headquarters with the Department of Civilian Service and Labor, and maintained a close contact with the Department in devising methods of supplying farmers with adequate labor.

The recruiting of workers for war industries was carried on by the scouts of the United States Employment Service and by the development of three labor reserves initiated by the Federal Government and organized in this State under the Department of Civilian Service and Labor. Through these three reserves, namely, the Public Service Reserve, the Boys' Working Reserve and the Departments of Registration and Women in Industry of the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense, the mobilization of an industrial army of men, boys and women, respectively, was effected, to supplement the ranks of persons seeking entrance into war work through the regular channels.

The Public Service Reserve is a national organization founded by the United States Department of Labor for the purpose of enrolling men who might wish to offer their services in a non-military capacity. While a general enrollment was at first contemplated, this was abandoned as plans developed, and the Reserve became the recruiting arm of the United States Employment Service, with the function of conducting a series of drives for workers who were needed for particular forms of Government or war work. Valuable service was rendered in enlisting men for civilian duty overseas, for shipyard work in this Country, for clerical positions in Washington and for many other kinds of service. During the past few months the Reserve was active in organizing local support for the employment offices throughout the State.

The Boys' Working Reserve, which is affiliated with the section of Agricultural Labor Service, supervises the enlistment and placement of boys from 16 to 21 years of age in non-military service, particularly along agricultural lines. Under the auspices of this reserve, approximately 5000 young men were placed in agricultural service during the season of 1918. About three-fourths of this number lived with the farmers for whom they were working, and the remainder in camps which were established and conducted by the Department.

Early in 1918 the sum of $75,000 was appropriated by the State for equipment of camps and supervision of boys in agricultural service. The individual farms upon which members of the Reserve were placed were chosen with great care, and boys were visited by a corps of trained inspectors, to make sure that their environment was favorable and their work satisfactory. In this manner adjustment of any difficulties arising between the boys and their employers was assured and the danger of boys being placed in unsuitable positions or receiving unfair treatment from the farmers averted.

An important factor in the Farm Camp program was the maintenance of a mobilization and training camp at State College. This institution generously loaned not only its entire equipment, but its force of agricultural instructors, for a period of eight weeks, and a force of 1,000 boys received a training course of two weeks each, during which time they were instructed in the common farm practices and operations. As a result, the city lad reported to his first job not only with a practical knowledge of the fundamental principles of harnessing, milking, planting and harvesting, but also with a body developed and hardened to meet the demands made by the strenuous activities of farm labor. An additional advantage was served in the fact that the boys who were physically or temperamentally unfitted for agricultural life were weeded out in the mobilization camp and the farmers were relieved of the trouble and expense of additional training.

The Supply Camps to which the boys were detailed after leaving the College, were conducted under the direction of trained leaders, who assigned the boys to their daily tasks on the farms in the neighborhood and supervised their off-duty hours. The pleasures of camping, with the social and recreational opportunities which it afforded, made the life exceedingly attractive, and it is notable that about 75 per cent. of young men entering this service remained until the end of the season, or until released by the completion of their work. It is believed that the utilization of boy-power contributed largely to the solution of the farm labor problem during the past season, and that the agricultural experience will prove a valuable factor in its effect on the boys both from a physical and disciplinary standpoint.

A special section of the Department of Civilian Service and Labor was established to deal exclusively with problems relative to women in industry. This section was developed in connection with the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense, and maintained close co-operation with that organization in enrolling women for war service, and in the study of the substitution of women for men and their placement and protection in war work. The Division of Women in Industry kept in constant touch with the women's offices of the United States Employment Service and rendered valuable service in the investigation of conditions surrounding the women workers in the various plants engaged in war work. In several of the crowded industrial centers housing surveys were made and remedial measures taken toward securing better quarters for women workers. Women employes in large numbers have sought the advice and assistance of this Department in the many and varied problems which have arisen in connection with their entrance into new and unusual occupations.

The program of the Council of National Defense to increase the number of skilled workers by the establishment of intensive training courses in industrial establishments was worked out in Pennsylvania under the auspices of the Department of Civilian Service and Labor, and a special committee was formed under this Department to aid firms having Government contracts in developing courses of training in accordance with the plan outlined by the Committee on Industrial Training for War Emergency of the National Council. This Committee had conferences with a number of large employers of labor rendered them material aid in devising methods of training suited to the needs of their respective plants.

From its inception, the Department of Civilian Service and Labor endeavored to arouse the citizens of the State to a sense of the importance of the labor program and the necessity of the hearty and loyal support of the public in bringing the war to a successful issue. To secure the co-operation of labor and capital, the Department assisted the Employment Service in establishing Community Labor Boards in 84 districts in the State, and placed the facilities of the county offices of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense at the disposal of these boards. Through the local units of the Council, contact with industrial conditions in various localities throughout the State was maintained, and surveys of labor conditions made from time to time for the information of the Department. Advice and help were given in the establishment and conduct of the Employment Service offices.

DEPARTMENT OF MILITARY SERVICE.

The primary duty outlined for this Department, co-operation with the Federal Government in the creation of the National Army, was actively prosecuted so long as the military authorities required the aid of civilian agencies in this particular field. Participation in recruiting activities, of course, ended with the full enforcement of the Selective Draft, but the Department later gave much assistance in draft registration as the various classes were called, and promoted preliminary military training for drafted men. It was a practical advocate of preliminary training up to the signing of the armistice.

Registration of eligibles for the selective draft brought into play the services of the Department soon after it was organized. Recruiting efforts to bring the Regular Army and the National Guard up to full strength followed. In both instances the Department's work is conceded to have contributed very largely to the remarkable registration and recruiting standards set by Pennsylvania. An analysis of the national recruiting figures discloses that Pennsylvania led all States in the number of men enlisting in the Regular Army. In registration for selective service the State practically made a 100 per cent. return of eligibles.

Registration work was conducted along these lines: Directors of registration were named in the various counties and were placed in charge of the preliminary campaign to insure registration of all eligibles. Daily instructions issued from headquarters were carried out effectively by the county units. Thousands of posters, handbills, warning bulletins and other forms of publicity were employed to keep the day of registration before the public.

It was at the request of this Department that the Postmaster General permitted free delivery of registration literature by rural mail carriers, a concession which was of immense benefit to registration work throughout the United States.

In some counties advance lists of known eligibles were prepared and other precautionary measures were taken to prevent registration delinquency. In many districts the registration workers either directly provided motor transportation or induced firms and organizations to provide such transportation as a means, to speed up the enrolment of men within the prescribed age limit for military service.

Recruiting of the Guard and Regular Army was aided by a carefully planned campaign. Every form of publicity was employed, including the issuance of 70,000 recruiting posters and 200,000 leaflets adapted to the particular recruiting use of various Guard regiments. The newspapers loyally supported the effort by the publication of daily news stories. A special two-column Guard recruiting story, prepared by the Department, appeared in a great majority of the 700 newspapers of the State. Philadelphia regiments in need of special assistance were aided by the posting throughout the city of 24-sheet posters, and by placing of correspondingly large signs on the armories. Motor service was also supplied for their recruiting forces. The assistance given to the Guard was highly praised by the various regimental commanders in letters to the Director of the Department.

The call to the colors took from the Department its first Director, Avery D. Andrews, who entered the service in France as Colonel of Engineers, U. S. A., was subsequently promoted to the rank of Brigadier General, and is at present Deputy Chief of Staff at General Headquarters in France.

The present Director, who was appointed in the spring of 1918, in addition to continuing the original program of activities, rendered services of the Department to general patriotic propaganda. At his direction the Executive Secretary of the Department organized and arranged many mass meetings in Philadelphia and vicinity in aid of the Liberty Loan, War Chest and similar drives. The attendance of many hundreds of sailors, marines and soldiers and their bands were secured. Similar aid was given to the celebrations on Bastille Day and Britain Day.

Assistance was given to the 18 to 45 draft registration, and to special military training units for draftees and others at such institutions as State College. Wide publicity was given to induce civilians possessing high school education to attend officers' training schools at such Government camps as Lee, Gordon, Pike, Taylor and Hancock.

The Department aided in organizing boards of instruction for draft boards throughout the State. The district committees on military service assisted very materially. At the same time measures were taken to establish preliminary military training units in various sections. By the time the armistice was declared so many of these preliminary training units had been established, and so effective was their work, that the majority of draftees in the State had the opportunity of going to camp as trained men, and very many accepted the opportunity. This work was noted with approval by the War Department. Major General Carter, U. S. A., expressed official appreciation of the Director.

The Department issued literature which was widely distributed among selective service men, informing them of the advantages to be derived from preliminary training, and the list of places in each district where such training could be had. It also kept in circulation in theatres of the State six films of successful military training units to sustain interest in the work.

Through the recommendation of the Department interest was inspired in the recognition by the various communities of heroism on the part of the men in service, also in the erection of honor rolls and temporary memorials carrying the record of those in the service. In many districts, in response to the Department's recommendation, the first Sunday of each month was set aside for a community gathering or memorial service, at which new names were added to the Honor Rolls.

When, in the fall of 1918, the Government decided to establish the Student Army Training Corps and Student Naval Training Units in the various colleges throughout the State, the Department did much to bring these special advantages to the attention of eligibles. Pennsylvania's quota of 9243 was more than filled when the college and university sessions opened on October 1. Provision was made to have others attend vocational schools. Considerable literature and information was issued from time to time upon important questions relating to the Student Army Training Corps.

Assistance in filling out questionnaires was given to thousands of men. A bureau of information and translations was organized in Philadelphia, from among the members of the Student Army Training Corps, and was very useful in matters relating to the affairs of foreign-born draftees.

The Department co-operated in furnishing transportation for officers and men in the service, and members of special commissions.

DEPARTMENT OF NAVAL SERVICE.

Recruiting for the Navy, the Naval Militia and the Naval Coast Defense Reserve, and the creation of auxiliary defense fleets were the principal lines along which the activities of this Department were concentrated.

A naval recruiting campaign was undertaken soon after the organization of the Department, which resulted in fully 5000 men being enrolled in a few weeks. This by no means represents the extent to which recruiting efforts could have been carried, as owing to lack of naval housing facilities in this district, the Department was practically forced temporarily to suspend its recruiting work. Indications were that 25,000 men would have been enrolled by a continuance of the campaign.

At one time there were seventy enrolment stations open for the distribution of recruiting literature and information. Recruiting trips were made up and down the Delaware River, securing a large number of men. Ten thousand window cards, 60,000 booklets and many thousand leaflets were used in the publicity effort.

After several thousand men had been enrolled in the reserve the need of a camp for housing and training the recruits became apparent, and the Department secured a desirable site near Cape May, at a nominal rental of $1 for the duration of the war, which was equipped to accommodate 2000 men. The work of arranging for all the necessary camp facilities was handled by the Department. Through its efforts an expensive railroad siding was constructed by the Reading without cost to the Government.

Among the other achievements was the listing of boats in the district available for coast defense work, some of which were subsequently taken over by the navy as mine sweepers.

The co-operation of tugboat owners and the proffer of a number of these boats for naval service were also obtained. Assistance was given to naval training classes of the University of Pennsylvania in drill work.

Largely as a result of the Department's activities, the city made a generous appropriation to improve sanitary conditions in and around League Island Navy Yard by the abatement of the fly and mosquito nuisance. Also, as a result of its work, additional barracks at the Navy Yard to house 5000 men were provided.

DEPARTMENT OF VOLUNTEER HOME DEFENSE POLICE.

An auxiliary police service to supplement existing forces during war-time was provided through the creation of this Department. The Governor's signature, on July 18, 1917, to an act of Assembly authorizing the commissioning of Volunteer Home Defense Police permitted enrolment to begin under a plan which had been formulated some months previously. At the present time, 12,217 Volunteer Home Defense Police are actually commissioned, drilled and in service, under direction of county superintendents. This service extends to 46 counties of the State, but the more active operations of the police have been in 34 counties. Members of the force have the powers of policemen of first-class cities.

The county plan of organization follows the headquarters and platoon system, headquarters being centrally located and platoons strategically placed to cover the designated territory and for rapid concentration in case the entire county forces are needed for service in any particular section. Enrolment includes owners of motor vehicles, who provide emergency transportation.

In enrolling members, fitness was first passed upon in the local units, subject to approval of the Director of the Department. Members were separately commissioned by the Governor and invested with this specific authority:

To prevent injury and destruction to the various industries of the Commonwealth by enemies' acts; to suppress riots and tumults; to preserve public peace and safety; and to arrest upon view, without warrant, any person apprehended in the commission of any offense against the laws of the State or of the United States. The official insignia are an arm band and a badge. The arm band is worn only when its owner is on active duty, and the badge is worn visibly at such times. Members, however, keep their badges with them at all times as evidence of their authority to make arrests should they witness violation of the statutes when off duty. The arm band bears the coat-of-arms of Pennsylvania. Police equipment included a "billy" and whistle. Insignia and equipment are furnished without cost to the police by the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense.

In a number of the counties the Volunteer Police have been uniformed and equipped with rifles by the local Councils of National Defense. This in addition to the regulation police equipment provided by the State Council.

Under the plan of organization, county forces are separate from those of the larger cities. Philadelphia and Pittsburgh have control of their own Defense Police, independent of the general State system, but all other Defense Police come under authority of this Department.

Chiefs of Police command in cities, township officers in first-class townships and authorized county officials control elsewhere. Men of military, naval or police experience were given preference in the appointment of officers.

Members were, of course, officially enrolled for local service only, but as the force is on a volunteer basis, they may volunteer for temporary service in any part of the State, should occasion require the mobilization of special forces to handle an extraordinary situation.

Many units have received military instruction and drill in riot, fire and other police duties. County headquarters report direct to the Philadelphia headquarters of the Department, thus keeping the Director informed of local operations and enabling him to supervise mobilization movement and direct efforts in case of necessity.

The police, in addition to performing routine police duty, have enforced regulations of the United States Food Administration have investigated seditious activities, and made arrests at the instance of the United States Department of Justice. They have been active in locating and arresting deserters from the army camps; have stopped the "underground" serving liquor to service men; aided in procuring a full registration of men of military age, and in many other ways have made themselves useful auxiliaries of the Government.

Some of the police units have organized Secret Service divisions, which have been helpful to the Military Intelligence Department, U. S. A. When the War Department was advocating the preliminary training of drafted men, so that they would arrive in camp with some knowledge of military tactics the Volunteer Police actively engaged in this work. They have also been of service in naturalization work. The aid rendered to the Government was recently made the subject of praise by Major General Carter, U. S. A., who, on behalf of the War Department, commenced the volunteer policing as having been of notable military value in relieving the department of the necessity of taking many protective measures.

During the recent influenza epidemic the police gave assistance in quarantine work, which was considered necessary in many sections. They also manned ambulances and assisted at hospitals where orderly service was inadequate to meet the epidemic crisis.

The organizer of the force, Lieutenant-Colonel John C. Groome, Signal Corps, U. S. A. is at present in charge of the United States Military Police service in France. Lieutenant-Colonel Groome was also the organizer of the famous Pennsylvania State Constabulary, and at the War Department's request was given leave-of-absence from his command of that organization to direct the army police service abroad.

The Volunteer Home Defense Police are generally recognized to have had a potent moral influence which prevented disorder from coming to a head in sections where sedition probably would have been open had there been no preparation made to keep it in check. The State authorities have requested that the organization be kept intact and in service until the final peace settlement.

DEPARTMENT OF RAILROADS.

In the creation of the Department of Railroads it was recognized that the railroad problem during war-time was primarily of national concern, and that State activity should be merged with Federal effort. Naturally, the Department formulated plans and proceeded with its work as an integral unit of the greater national system of railroads. The action of the Government in assuming entire control and direction of the roads, of course, supplanted all other operating activities and relieved all State committees of the necessity of giving special attention to the subject of railroad service.

It may not be inappropriate to state that the Director of this Department was one of the group of railroad presidents into whose control was submitted the management for war purposes of the entire railroad mileage of the country before a Federal Director was named.

DEPARTMENT OF ELECTRIC RAILWAYS AND MOTORS.

The importance of electric railways as war auxiliaries of the steam roads is obvious, hence the organization of a separate department to co-ordinate the operations of the State-wide electric systems and to arrange for service contact between the steam and electric roads in case of necessity.

Electric railways were confronted with many problems of operation and extension incidental to the state of war, also the imposition of restrictions by the Fuel Administration. In meeting local demands and delivering the utmost service they placed a strain upon their facilities beyond the normal requirements. In this way they contributed more or less directly to the success of the larger transportation program of the Federal Director of Railroads. Had greater efforts been required in meeting the national transportation emergency, they were ready at all times to assume specially assigned service.

DEPARTMENT OF HIGHWAYS AND WATERWAYS.

The Department of Highways and Waterways was created to inquire into the availability of rivers, canals and highways of Pennsylvania as transportation resources; to give consideration to their utilization and to the solution of problems arising therefrom, and, in particular, to give careful study to the conditions of roads throughout the State.

As official State organizations and departments are charged with direct responsibility for the construction, maintenance and control of these arteries of traffic, many phases of the Department's work were limited to co-operative effort. In this connection it found opportunity to render road development service of immediate benefit to several districts and also of general benefit in the State-wide plan of improved transportation facilities.

Other activities of the Department included consideration of legislation for general road improvement. The Department maintained close working contact with the State Highways Transport Committee to prevent overlapping of effort where activities of both Departments related to highway matters.

WOMAN'S COMMITTEE.

The Woman's Committee of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense has a complete organization, with 75 chairman in the 67 counties of the State. This division was organized with Departments of Registration and Organization, Food conservation and Production, Women in Industry, Child Welfare, Education, including Speakers' Bureau and Americanization; Liberty Loan, Foreign Relief, Health and Recreation and Bureau of Information. There was also a standing Committee on nursing.

What the division accomplished in Pennsylvania represents not only an army of women interested in the work of the various departments, but a splendid mobile force that may be swung into action to meet any emergency. The registration of women for war service to fill places in industry left vacant by men called to the colors was an important work, very efficiently handled by the Department of Registration, co-operating with the Director of Women in Industry. This registration was conducted in 56 counties, and 315,000 women were enrolled. The Department furnished 6,000 women as volunteer registrars to make the enrolment.

In addition to leading to many actual placements of workers in paid and volunteer positions through this service, large numbers of women were located, subject to call for special emergency service. The registration was of particular value when the epidemic of influenza swept over the State in October, 1918. It was the means of securing great forces of women for the nursing of the sick, more detailed mention of which is made in a special report of the Woman's Division covering epidemic work. Many volunteers were obtained to manage diet kitchens, seamstresses to provide clothing and housekeepers to care for the homes of stricken families.

The Department of Food Conservation and Production worked in complete co-operation with the United States Food Administration in Pennsylvania. Through this Department community kitchens and canning centers were organized in every county of the State. Demonstrators were supplied to instruct housewives in the use of cereal substitutes, woman speakers were supplied at county food meetings, teachers' institutes and county fairs, and great assistance was given in the feeding of stricken families and convalescents during the epidemic. Especial attention was paid to personal instruction of foreign-born residents in following the program of the Food Administration.

Important duties were assigned to the Department of Women in Industry. It was recognized that every facility must be given to the Government in meeting the industrial needs of the war, but on the other hand, the Department emphasized that the employment of women to fill these needs in Government plants be accompanied by the establishing of such standards as would fully protect women workers. It strenuously urged the right of the woman worker to a fair wage, legal working hours and proper environment, and in return asked from the working woman a spirit of co-operation and patriotic service.

A definite policy of recruiting for war work was followed and placements were made only where working conditions were good. At the same time a campaign was conducted for improvement of working and wage conditions in all essential industries. More than 160 vocations were listed in which women might be usefully employed, and the necessary organization perfected to bring prospective workers and employers into contact. The Department was very active in the recruiting of women for service in the Land Army of America, and assisted in establishing units in many countries. These units were of particular service in agriculture in the southeastern section of the State.

The placing of women in large numbers in industrial plants created a need for women employment managers, and many of the largest firms in the State applied to the Department, and through it were furnished with such managers. Other special workers were also supplied upon request. After the appointment of a Federal Director of Employment for Pennsylvania, the Director of Women in Industry gave co-operation in an advisory capacity, and the Department also co-operated in every way with the Civilian Service Department of the Pennsylvania Council.

The Department on Child Welfare was affiliated with the Child Welfare Division of the Pennsylvania Council and they jointly conducted the work. This work related to various phases of health and sanitation affecting infant and child welfare, and is referred to in the report of the Civic Relief Department of the Pennsylvania Council. The joint effort was under the direction of the Division of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health.

Fifty-one counties possessed Departments of Education organized by the Woman's Committee. Enrolled in this Department were more than 500 women throughout the State, who served as speakers upon assigned topics. This Department gave special attention to the subject of Americanization, and its speaking organization is still enrolled for service in behalf of that work. The Department in many districts has secured the co-operation of social welfare agencies, teachers' associations, religious societies and other agencies, to carry out an Americanization program along lines that may be suggested in future.

The Department of Foreign Relief acted as a co-ordinating agency in bringing together war relief organizations, securing unity of activity and reducing duplication of effort to a minimum. It was of special service to the Emergency Aid and the Fatherless Children of France, the Belgian and the French Committees.

Another Department, the Liberty Loan Department, was of great assistance in the various Loan drives. This department was responsible for securing subscriptions of $225,000,000 during the Fourth Loan Campaign, thus enabling Pennsylvania to go "Over the Top" in the Fourth, as well as the Third, Loan drive. The Department of Health and Recreation concerned itself with co-ordinating all agencies and organizations doing work for women and girls. Through questionnaires it collated information relative to necessary welfare work which should be undertaken in various sections of the State, and it made this information available to agencies which could be of service in that work.

Publicity and correlated effort were in charge of the Bureau of Information, which aimed to give women the benefit of such experiences as radically transformed life for the women abroad. Foreign pamphlets on women's war work were obtained and placed at the disposal of women engaged in war activities. Research work was conducted for their benefit, and much original publicity material was issued. This included the "News Letter," a monthly publication devoted to the activities of the Woman's Division. A directory of training courses, both professional and vocational, for women in the State of Pennsylvania, was compiled, and will be of value during the present reconstruction period.

A registration of graduate and pupil nurses, and a complete indexing of this enrolment were accomplished by the Standing Committee on Nursing, with the assistance of the Department on Registration. This index included 11,606 graduate nurses and 4,842 pupil nurses, enrolled in 186 training schools. It was a survey of value to the Surgeon-General of the Army, as showing a nursing strength sufficient to permit of a heavy draft for military purposes.

The committee encouraged young women to take up the profession of nursing and assisted in securing the entrance of hundreds of young women into the United States Student Nurse Reserve. Its lists of nurses enabled it to place the State Department of Health in touch with 11,098 women, who were called upon for service during the disastrous influenza epidemic.

The Woman's Division, confronted by the most distressing needs, arising from the ravages of the epidemic in all parts of the State, promptly concentrated its activities upon relief work. A temporary Department, the Emergency Nursing Service, was organized, with headquarters in the building of the Emergency Aid, 1428 Walnut Street, Philadelphia. All calls for assistance were answered and nurses were circulated. A list of assignments made in Philadelphia alone totaled 1135 epidemic workers, including 628 hospital volunteers, aides and helpers, 153 volunteers on private cases, and 82 practical nurses on private cases. Directors of the various departments went directly to hospitals, where they worked in the wards, assisted in the kitchens, and in other ways gave much-needed service. Included in this service was the establishment, in other sections, of emergency hospitals.

As the counties fell under the scourge the several County Chairmen found themselves besieged with calls for assistance. By calling upon the County Director of Registration, each County Chairman was able to get in touch with hundreds of volunteers eager to serve as nurses' assistants or general helpers in hospitals, private homes and institutions. In many instances the Directors of Registration in those counties which were not seriously in need of assistance answered the calls of their neighboring counties and supplied many volunteer workers.

A detailed report of the entire work of the Woman's Committee, with special mention of the State-wide service rendered during the epidemic, is being issued separately.

WAR HISTORY COMMISSION.

Steps were taken, by the appointment of a War History Commission of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense, to make a permanent record of the military, economic and civic participation of Pennsylvania in the great war. Eminent historians, experts in research work and prominent citizens constitute this Commission, which has divided its work into two principal divisions, one of which is making a record of all Pennsylvanians who have entered into the military or naval service of the United States or any of the Allies. The other division is recording the commercial, industrial and civic activities of the State during the war period. The Commission is co-operating in the collection and preservation of war records with local historical societies, Chambers of Commerce, trade organizations educational authorities, and other agencies, for the purpose of making the permanent record of Pennsylvania's war participation full, complete and authentic.

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF NATIONAL DEFENSE AND COMMITTEE OF PUBLIC SAFETY

TREASURER'S REPORT.

Headquarters

Seventh Floor, Finance Building

GEORGE WHARTON PEPPER, ESQ.,
Chairman.

Sir: I herewith submit my report as Treasurer of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety covering a period from the inauguration of the work, April 14, 1917, to December 31, 1918, inclusive, with data relating to the various departmental activities to give an understanding of the scope and progress of the work, so far as the same is shown upon the books of the Treasurer's Office. This report embraces the information and statistics in my First Annual Report, dated June 7, 1918, covering a period from April 14, 1917, to May 31, 1918, inclusive (the end of the fiscal year of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania).

For the sake of convenient record, a brief outline is again inserted of the system adopted by the Committee relative to the funds placed in its custody.

All funds at the disposal of the Committee come out of the $2,000,000 appropriated by the Legislature in 1917 and by it placed in charge of the Commission of Public Safety and Defense, consisting of the Governor, the Lieutenant-Governor, the State Treasurer, the Auditor General and the Adjutant General. This Commission in turn allots such sums to the Council and Committee as the members of that Commission think proper, after due consideration and action upon requisitions made.

The Lieutenant-Governor, Honorable Frank B. McClain, has spent much time at the Committee's Headquarters in Philadelphia, and has attended its meetings in order to familiarize himself with the scope of the work.

Requisitions, when made by the Committee are formally presented to the Commission for their consideration at their meetings in Harrisburg by the Executive Manager of the Committee, Mr. Lewis S. Sadler, and its Executive Secretary, Colonel Lewis E. Beitler.

Funds thus received by the Treasurer are immediately deposited at Drexel & Co. to the credit of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety, and can be disbursed from this account only by action of the Executive Committee authorizing and directing the Treasurer to make payments for the purposes as exhibited by the minutes of the proceedings of the Committee. In order properly to supervise receipts and expenditures, the system adopted has been as follows:

An accountant for the Treasurer was appointed by him and confirmed by the Committee, who is under salary, and devotes his entire time to the work. Mr. John Radcliffe, for many years in the Accounting Department of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, was granted a leave of absence by that company for this purpose, and has been in service every day since April, 1917. At the beginning, arrangements were made by the Treasurer for monthly audits of the accounts by Messrs. Lybrand, Ross Bros. & Montgomery, Certified Public Accountants, who volunteered their services without compensation as a public duty and began their work. It became unnecessary to continue this audit, however, because by the courtesy of Honorable Charles A. Snyder, Auditor General of Pennsylvania, a representative of his office, Mr. H. R. Purple, was specially assigned to this duty, and has spent practically his entire time at the Committee's headquarters engaged in daily audits.

Reports in detail have been regularly made by the Treasurer fortnightly to the Executive Committee and presented at each of their regular meetings. Duplicates of these reports have been also sent regularly the same day to the Auditor General.

Purchases of supplies of all sorts for the various departments have been made from the lowest responsible bidders by the Treasurer's Accountant, acting in conference with the Executive Manager, Mr. Lewis S. Sadler, and the Executive Secretary, Colonel Lewis E. Beitler. Office furniture and equipment for the central headquarters in Philadelphia have been bought under an arrangement for return after the work of the Committee has ceased, and an allowance made on the cost thereof. All other furniture and equipment for various county offices throughout the State according to complete inventories thereof in the Treasurer's office will be disposed of as directed by the Board of Commissioners of Public Grounds and Buildings at Harrisburg, according to law.

All bills over $25.00 are approved before payment by the signature of the Director of the Department incurring same; under that amount by the Executive Secretary of the Department and, after approval by the Treasurer's Accountant, are identified by the signature of the Executive Secretary of the Committee as applicable for payment to in accordance with action taken in regard to the matter which they are chargeable, either by the Executive or Advisory Committee, and have the signature of Mr. Arthur E. Newbold, Chairman of the Finance Committee.

Bills are paid by voucher drawn upon Drexel & Co., the depository of the funds of the Committee received from the Commission. These vouchers bear upon their face proper words of description and explanation to identify the respective accounts with the bills, and are verified from the approved bills by the signature of Colonel Lewis E. Beitler, Executive Secretary of the Committee; of Mr. Arthur E. Newbold, Chairman of the Finance Committee, and of Mr. John Radcliffe, Treasurer's Accountant, thus directing their signature and issue by the Treasurer.

These vouchers, when paid, are returned to the Committee for its permanent files. The original bills and accompanying documents when paid and receipted go to the Auditor General's Department at Harrisburg, and remain there as required by law. The accounting upon the books of the Committee carries an appropriate number of headings representing the respective departments of the work. Receipts of funds from the Commission and disbursements thereof are credited to and chargeable against these respective divisions of accounts.

Persons are employed only upon the written request of the Director of each Department, passed upon by the Executive Manager, recommended by the Advisory Committee, and finally ratified by recorded action of the Executive Committee, as shown by the minutes of its meetings, whereon each name and amount of salary appears.

County Executive Secretaries, nominated by the various County Committees, are confirmed after consultation with and approval by the Lieutenant-Governor, and their salaries and allowances for expenses are passed upon by the Executive Committee with due regard to the local conditions and the scope of the work in the respective counties. The itemized expenses of such County Committees bear the signature of the Chairmen of such Committees in approval of same.

This report summarizes the condition of the various activities of the Committee so far as they are shown by the expenditures applicable thereto, without going into more detail than is practicable herein. Tables are also appended showing the number of persons employed throughout the Counties of the State. These tables do not, of course, include the many persons throughout the Commonwealth who are members of the General Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety and of the County Committees, their number now totaling some 15,000, who serve as volunteers and without pay.

By arrangement with the United States Government, the Departments of Civilian Service and Labor and Food Supply are co-ordinated with the Federal authorities and carry on these branches of the work under a plan of sharing the expenses thereof. These branches of the Committee's work have grown steadily with consequent increased expenditures. The rent of their offices, occupying two entire floors at the Committee's headquarters, Finance Building, Philadelphia, was paid by the Pennsylvania Council and Committee of Public Safety; and salaries of employes and their expenses are also paid as have been agreed upon from time to time by the Committee.

Immediately after the signing of the armistice on November 11, 1918, the Executive Committee determined to dispense with the services of salaried employes and to reduce office expenses throughout the State from and after December 31, 1918. This action of the Executive Committee applied to County Executive Secretaries and office expenses in all but four of the seventy local County Committees; to all managers of Farm Labor Bureaus, Boy's Working Reserves, Woman's Committees, expenses of Bureau of Four Minute Speakers, expenses of Construction and Materials Department, co-operating with the Federal Government, and generally to every department whose activities could be summarily curtailed. At the Headquarters office of the Council reductions were made to as great an extent as was possible, in view of the requirements of bringing all the work of the Council to a final close, and the accounting therefor to the Commission and to the Auditor General. In the four cities of Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Erie and Scranton, the office expenses were also cut 50 per cent. from and after December 31, 1918, but it was not possible to terminate absolutely the activities under way there without detriment to the interests of the State. A longer closing period was therefore determined upon as advisable in the places named by the Executive Committee, with the expectation that this might be accomplished within 60 days, as hereinafter mentioned. Leases of space in the Finance Building, Philadelphia, were cancelled, for the front half of the tenth floor, as of January 1, 1919, and the rear of the tenth floor as of February 1, 1919, and rooms on the fourth and seventeenth floors as of January 1, 1919.

The remaining leases for other floors in the Headquarters, Finance Building, Philadelphia, namely, the second, running until August 15, 1919; the seventh, until April 15, 1919, and the eleventh, until February 15, 1919, are dependent upon the continuance of the duties of the Departments of Food Supply, Labor, Americanization, Woman's Committee, Civic Relief and Child Welfare, and State Volunteer Police, until they can be transferred to other recognized agencies of the Commonwealth and their work carried on without loss to the public welfare.

As soon as this can be accomplished in the near future the accounts of the Council and Committee will be brought down from the date of this report, December 31, 1918, by a supplement thereto, covering such closing period; and filed with the Commission of Public Safety and Defense at Harrisburg, and also with the Auditor General of the Commonwealth.

Unless war contingencies arise in the near future, which are at present unforeseen, the Council believes that the appropriations made to it by the Commission, as referred to in this report, will prove more than sufficient to cover the outstanding expenses of the Council, together with those necessary in the closing period of its work during the coming few weeks; and the balance of cash in its hands will then, of course, be returned to the control and disposition of the proper authorities of the State.

Very respectfully,

(Signed) EFFINGHAM B. MORRIS,
Treasurer.

PENNA. SAFETY BOARD DOING BIG WORK
SAYS M'ADOO.

'An Organization of Remarkable Thoroughness,' Secretary Declares; Defense Delegate Calls it Model for Other States.

Special Dispatch to The North American.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—"Pennsylvania's committee of public safety is doing a tremendous work in the mobilization of the state's resources for the war. It is an organization of remarkable thoroughness and efficiency. It is doing big things in a big way."

This was the word brought back to Washington by Secretary McAdoo, who attended the conference of the committee of public safety in Philadelphia this week. Other representatives of the government at the conferences warmly praised the committee as a war agency. Arthur E. Bestor, who represented the council of national defense, said today:

"After a nationwide survey and first-hand information that I have obtained by direct contact with many war emergency bodies, I am glad to say that there is not in the United States, in my opinion, a more compact and efficient organization for the conduct of the war activities than the Pennsylvania committee of public safety.

"If we could duplicate in every state the organization of the Pennsylvania committee for carrying on patriotic education, we should soon mobilize public opinion, combat traitorous propaganda and thereby find much easier the solution of many problems involving national co-ordination and enthusiastic popular support.

"I have just returned from Philadelphia, where I participated in the conferences of public safety committee delegates from the sixty-seven counties of Pennsylvania. It was beyond question the most impressive showing of efficient organization for the purposes for which the national and state defense councils were created that I have encountered.

"The inauguration at the Union League of the speakers' bureau against seditious influences resulted in one of the most remarkable sessions it has been my privilege to attend. The reception accorded to Secretary McAdoo revealed a splendid unanimity of purpose in Pennsylvania, irrespective of party, creed or social standing.

"In speed and thoroughness of its organization of a speakers' division to co-operate with our national speakers' bureau, the Pennsylvania committee has made a new record. Its speakers' conference demonstrated that the members of that division have a correct perception of the task ahead of them, that they have the machinery to undertake it and the guidance to carry it to success.

"The Pennsylvania organization impressed me with its splendid efficiency both in its collective membership and its leaders and individual members. It has scope and plan of action, which could profitably be copied by all of the states."

PATRIOTISM MARKED ROUTE OF WAR TRUCKS.

Government Officials Praise Efficient Work of Pennsylvania Committee.

TRIUMPHAL PROGRESS.

By Louis W. Strayer, Staff Correspondent.

Special From The Dispatch Bureau.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 6.—With only a few days elapsing since Secretary McAdoo and other high officials of the Government congratulated the Pennsylvania Committee of Public Safety upon its ability to do "big things in a big way," the committee is receiving further commendation for another demonstration of efficiency. This time it is the Quartermaster's Department that bestows praise. The service in which the Pennsylvania committee gained new distinction was in its aid to the war truck convoys which recently completed a test run from Detroit to an Atlantic port.

The longest stage of the convoy's journey lay through Pennsylvania. Due to the Public Safety Committee's preparedness, that section of the route was covered with railroad time-table precision and without mishap or delay of any kind despite intense weather handicaps and other adverse conditions. The heavy snows that impeded the convoy elsewhere were not permitted to choke the roads of Pennsylvania. In some places roads were freed of drifts eight feet deep to give passage to the trucks. Not only was the trail kept open but the housing and entertainment of the crews and the overhauling of the trucks were carried out on a prearranged schedule.

Patriotic Ovation.

A feature that contributed in no small way to the efficiency of the operation of the convoy was the stirring patriotic ovation given by Public Safety representatives during its passage through Pennsylvania. This reception was in such strong contrast to the scant welcome accorded elsewhere that it was especially commented upon by Captain Bennett Bronson, in command of the convoy. At the request of the Pennsylvania Committee of Public Safety, hotels, theaters and clubs along the route, dispensed free hospitality.

When the test run was scheduled the Quartermaster General's Department through the Council of National Defense, notified the defense committees of the States in which the route lay to make all necessary preparations to insure an unimpeded run. The route traversed eight Pennsylvania counties, beginning at a point midway on the Ohio boundary and passes southeasterly across two-thirds the length of the State. The Pennsylvania Public Safety Committee instructed its local units in these counties to prepare a clear right-of-way for the convoy. Complete arrangements were made a week in advance of the run as follows:

Given Warm Welcome.

When the truck train entered Beaver County, at the Ohio State line on December 20, relays of horses had been secured and were in readiness to help the trucks on icy grades, from which snow had been removed by the local committee. High school boys and other volunteers had assisted in opening a passage through exceptionally heavy drifts. Guards were placed at all railroad crossings to prevent accidents such as had resulted in the demolition of a truck and the killing of a chauffeur in the run across Ohio. Steam whistles tooted welcome and people turned out all along the line to cheer the convoy. Meals were supplied by the county Red Cross unit.

Upon reaching Allegheny County on schedule time a bugle corps of Boy Scouts met the train and it was escorted along a decorated route. Pittsburg officials in motor cars also joined in the line of parade. The trucks were parked in a requisitioned building and given mechanical attention. Crews were housed and fed in the artillery armory. The train was passed on to the next county line, Westmoreland, under patriotic escort.

Here the triumphal progress was continued and the train was sped to the Somerset County line, where it was given a similar ovation and similar substantial attention. The passage through Bedford, Fulton, Franklin and Adams counties was a repetition of these enthusiastic reception.

Christmas Celebration.

The Christmas celebration was made a big feature in Bedford County, with plenty of good cheer and entertainment provided by that county's Committee of Public Safety. In each county the roads had been cleared of all obstacles, and through the co-operation of the State Highway Department the surfacing was in first-class condition. The route followed is part of the famous Lincoln highway.

INQUIRER BUREAU, 1320 F. STREET

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 27.—Pennsylvania is the first State in the Union to make effective the programme for co-ordinating Federal and State efforts to supply war industries with labor, according to a statement issued by the Department of Labor today.

This co-ordination has been successfully effected by the employment service of labor and industry and the civilian service and labor department of the State Committee of Public Safety, which are now working together throughout Pennsylvania under the direction of Edgar C. Felton, formerly president of the Pennsylvania Steel Company and in charge of the civilian service of the State Safety Committee.

Mr. Felton holds the appointment of Federal Director of Employment for Pennsylvania from the Department of Labor. Officials of the State and Safety Committee concerned with this amalgamated service are also being given Federal status in order that the unification may be furthered.

Other States Will Follow.

The example set in Pennsylvania is expected to be followed by every other State, a number of which are already organizing labor exchanges in which Federal and State employment officers have joined forces. More than 200 Federal and State employment officers are already reported by the Department of Labor as being in operation, and the early establishment of some fifty additional amalgamated offices is projected.

Under the national war labor programme, of which Secretary of Labor Wilson is now National Labor Administrator, the Department of Labor has been given complete charge of every phase of the war labor problem. The distribution of labor is in the hands of the United States Employment Service.

Secretary Wilson expressed gratification in his today's statement at the co-operation given by employers and business men's organizations in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and other industrial cities of Pennsylvania to the Federal service and its work.

VOLUNTEER POLICE OF PA. BEST IN U. S.

10,387 COMMISSIONED MEN HAVE EXTENDED SERVICE TO 46 COUNTIES.

Units Have Aided in Drilling Draftees and Probed Sedition.

INQUIRER BUREAU, 1320 F. Street

WASHINGTON, D. C., September 8.—That Pennsylvania with 10,387 commissioned men possesses the largest and most efficient body of volunteer police in the country is shown by a report of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense to the War Department, made public today. The report shows that the police service has been extended to 46 of the 67 counties of the State. Completely organized, drilled and equipped forces are operating in 33 of these 46 counties. In the other thirteen organization is proceeding. Accompanying the figures submitted to the War Department, is an outline of the police activities which have been of acknowledged service to the government. Major General McCarter recently on behalf of the War Department, commended Pennsylvania's volunteer policing as having been of notable military value in relieving the department of the necessity of taking many protective measures.

The Pennsylvania volunteer Home Defense police was organized by, and is under the control of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense, with William S. Ellis acting director, and Charles Carey, executive secretary. In addition to performing routine service it has enforced regulations of the United States Food Administration, has made investigations of seditious activities and arrests at the instance of the Department of Justice. According to the report it has located and arrested army deserters, stopped the "underground" serving of liquor to soldiers, assisted in registration of draftees and in other ways made itself a useful auxiliary of the government.

Additional war service is now being preformed by the volunteer police in the drilling of drafted men. When preliminary military training of draftees was recently advocated by the War Department, many of the Pennsylvania Home Defense police units already were engaged in that work. They had undertaken it out of local interest in boys called to the army from their home counties. This preliminary training is of value to the draftees in procuring speedy promotion. Pennsylvania's method of creating the volunteer police force is highly commended by officials of the War Department and is cited by them as a model for other States.

FOUR-MINUTE SPEAKERS OF PENNA. IN LEAD.

INSTRUMENT OF VICTORY."

NO PART OF STATE, HOWEVER REMOTE,
BUT HAS ITS STIRRING MESSAGE.

INQUIRER BUREAU, 1406 G St., N.W.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 13.—Pennsylvania leads the country in making the "spoken word an instrument of victory." More than six thousand four-minute men are in service in the speaking division of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense, according to a report from that organization to W. McCormick Blair, national chairman of four-minute men. As there are about 42,000 four-minute men in the entire country, Pennsylvania alone possesses one-seventh of the Nation's organized speaking forces. The plan under which the Pennsylvania four-minute men are boosting the sale of the Fourth Liberty Loan carries the appeal to the remotest sections of the State.

Each of the sixty-seven counties of Pennsylvania, the report shows, has its complete four-minute men organization in charge of a chairman, and there are 643 local chairmen. The county chairmen are grouped in five districts, under district directors, and the complete organization is under control of the State director, Benjamin H. Ludlow, at State headquarters, Philadelphia.

A motor car campaign is a feature of "carrying the message." The speakers reach even the cross-roads, communities and hamlets. In order that no rural settlements may be overlooked, routing of the speaking tours is arranged with the help of Government geodetic maps, which are supplied to chairmen. These maps show the location of every dwelling in the State, and it is the job of the four-minute men to get a bond argument to households, no matter how remote.

Pershing veterans from the fighting front and soldiers in full service equipment accompany the speakers on tours to convey the war atmosphere to places where the United States uniform is rarely seen and a look at a real fighting man is something of an inspiration.

War films are shown and one of the strongest subscription appeals is made through reference to each community to the individual fighting its boys are doing "Somewhere in France."

PENNSYLVANIA MOTOR SERVICE WELL ORGANIZED.

HAS PROVED CAPABLE OF MEETING ANY TRANSPORTATION EMERGENCY THROUGHOUT STATE.

Philadelphia Press.

From a Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 3.—That Pennsylvania has a motor service capable of meeting any transportation emergency in the work of the war is shown by a report from the State Council of National Defense to the Council of National Defense, made public today. When the Highways Transport Committee of the Council of National Defense recently undertook to organize subordinate committees in each State for a more thorough utilization of the nation's highways transport resources it obtained the most efficient, immediate co-operation in Pennsylvania.

It was unnecessary to create new machinery there, because the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense in its motor truck department already possessed a Statewide organization which, in large measure was carrying out the policies advocated by the Highways Transport Committee.

The report presents a summary of Pennsylvania's motor activities. One of the first steps taken by David S. Ludlum, former State Motors Director, and now chairman of the Pennsylvania Highways Transport Committee, was a service registry of twenty-five per cent. of the three hundred thousand pleasure cars of the State, ten per cent. of the registered cars being held available for emergency service at all times. This service has been rendered in all counties for Liberty Loan drives, also in transportation of war and munition workers, and in some instances in moving military bodies. Particularly valuable service was given in transporting nurses, doctors, medical stores and in conveying stricken persons during the influenza epidemic. Trucks equipped as ambulances, saved the day in many devastated districts.

A truck service supplementing the passenger service has done good work in hauling baggage of draftees, moving guns and other equipment and military stores, also hauling wood from the forests to cities, to aid the Fuel Administration's conservation work.

WAR HISTORY COMMISSION.

Hon. William C. Sproul, Chairman

John Bach McMaster, Vice-Chairman

Albert E. McKinley, Secretary

Philadelphia, November 17, 1919.

George Wharton Pepper, Esq., Chairman,
 Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety,

Philadelphia, Pa.

My Dear Mr. Pepper:

I beg to submit herewith my third and final report as Treasurer of the "Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety." Taken together with the previous general reports made on June 7, 1918, and January 7, 1919 and printed and distributed for public information, this covers a period from the inauguration of the work, April 14, 1917, to its close, October 15, 1919, inclusive. Certain detailed statements and data accompany this general report, which deals with the total figures representing the funds disbursed by the Council as one of the agents of the Commonwealth during the war. Your attention is invited to these, as well as to the closing accounting with the new "Pennsylvania Commission of Public Welfare." Previous published reports set forth the system of accounting and such details are not now repeated.

The terms of the Act of Assembly of June 26, 1919, approved by Governor Sproul on July 18, 1919, provide that the books, documents, and correspondence of the Council shall be available for the use of the new Commission; and these will accordingly be left in the offices now occupied, and the same will be in charge of that Commission.

All original bills and voucher receipts for their payment have been audited by the Auditor General each month, and will remain in his office at Harrisburg as required by law.

Acknowledgment will doubtless be made by the Commission for the custody of these books and papers, and also for sundry detailed items for their current use.

As you have been the inspiration of the Council throughout its existence and in every detail of its work, I cannot make a final report to you without an expression of admiration of the service you gave during the two and a half years, and also of personal pleasure in having been one of the many under your leadership.

Yours sincerely,

(Signed) EFFINGHAM B. MORRIS,
 Treasurer, Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety.

Philadelphia, November 29, 1919.

Honorable Charles A. Snyder,
 Auditor General of Pennsylvania,
 Harrisburg, Pa.

My dear Sir:

I have the honor to transmit for the information of your Department the report submitted to me by Effingham B. Morris, Esquire, Treasurer of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense.

As you will note, the report included a certificate from the Treasurer of the Pennsylvania Commission of Public Safety and Defense to the effect that the report is the record of a complete and satisfactory settlement of the account between that body and the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense.

Inasmuch, however, as a representative of your Department has in fact audited Mr. Morris' books and has kept in daily touch with all transactions therein recorded, it seems proper to suggest the propriety of a direct communication from you making official acknowledgment of the receipt of the report for your files.

Please accept an expression of our high appreciation of the courtesy and efficiency which have characterized all the dealings of your Department with the business of the Council.

Very truly yours (Sgd.) G. W. PEPPER, Chairman.

Harrisburg, December 1, 1919.

George Wharton Pepper, Esq., Chairman,
 Pennsylvania Council of National Defense,
 Finance Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

My dear Sir:

Your communication, transmitting a copy of the report of Effingham B. Morris, Esq., Treasurer of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense, has been received.

I take this opportunity to state that the Auditor General's Department is under more than ordinary obligation to Mr. Morris for the splendid service he has rendered the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania as Treasurer of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety. The scrupulous care with which he has supervised every expenditure of the Committee of Public Safety's appropriation was a task performed in patriotic manner and a substantial service to the State and Nation. I am informed that the Auditor General's Department never in its history dealt with a more satisfactory custodian of public funds than he has proved himself to be.

It is to be regretted that men of his type hesitate to enter the activities of the State, the county or the city in a public capacity. His work is proof that men in high private station will render to the Nation capable, comprehensive and painstaking service when the needs of the hour demand it.

The Public Welfare Commission will officially express to your Committee its appreciation of his connection with the public service. Until that time believe me, with much respect, to remain at your service.

Sincerely yours (Signed) CHAS. A. SNYDER,
Auditor General.

DRAFT OF LETTER SENT TO EACH MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Philadelphia, Pa., December 18, 1919.

My dear Mr.

I enclose for your information and files a copy of letter to Mr. Pepper and of a report which accompanies it, dealing with the completed figures of the expenditures of the "Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety," and the final accounting therefor.

This apparently closes the work of the Council; and on behalf of Mr. John Radcliffe, Treasurer's Accountant, and the others associated with me in the Accounting Department I ask you to accept assurance of appreciation of the uniformly courteous and helpful consideration shown by all the members of the Executive Committee, and by the Directors and members of all Departments of the work.

Yours sincerely (Signed) EFFINGHAM B. MORRIS,
Treasurer, Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety.

REMARKS.

Within thirty days after the Armistice on November 11, 1918, steps were taken by the Executive Committee to close the activities of "The Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety," it being the wish of the members to bring the work to a final conclusion as rapidly as should be found consistent with the interests of the Commonwealth.

The bulk of this was accomplished in due course in January, 1919. After conference with the Governor, a portion of the work was continued at his request until it could be taken over under legislative enactment then proposed, which should authorize the creation of a new "Pennsylvania Commission of Public Welfare" to be charged with duties set forth in such Act of Assembly. This Act was passed by the Legislature upon June 26, 1919, and the Commission was organized thereunder on September 30, 1919, and arranged to take over the work of the "Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety" at the close of business, October 15, 1919. Under these conditions, therefore, certain activities have been carried on from February 1, 1919, to October 15, 1919, inclusive, a period of nine and one-half months and are summarized under the following nine heads:

Department	Total Expenditures
	Feb. 1 to Oct. 15, 1919,	Inclusive
1—Civic Relief	$562.28
2—Civilian Service and Labor	92,831.47
3—Food Supply	5,308.66
4—General Administration	21,070.08
5—Volunteer Home Defense Police	2,078.57

6—Publicity (Americanization)	8,940.30
7—Expenses, Local Committees	17,740.90
8—War History Commission	21,201.48
9—Woman's Committee	2,043.36

Total $171,777.10

As to these it may be said, for the purpose of record merely, that as to:

1. Civic Relief: The amount shown as expended was due for outstanding bills at the time when the department closed its work in December, 1918.

2. Civilian Service and Labor: This department has twenty-three employment offices in various localities throughout the State, which were required to remain open and active in securing places for returning soldiers, and to aid in stabilizing industrial conditions in the State. The number of these offices was gradually reduced as warranted by conditions to a total of nine remaining in service on October 15, 1919.

3. Food Supply: This amount was for outstanding bills, principally the expenses of transportation of the Food Conservation Trains sent to all parts of the State, and not completely rendered by the railroad companies through the United States Federal Railroad operation until some months after the completion of the service furnished.

4. General Administration: This item covers the salaries and expenses and rent of offices for the accounting, stenographic, telephone, filing, mailing departments, which were reduced as rapidly as the service could be dispensed with, there being on October 15th one Treasurer's Accountant and his necessary clerks and stenographers to make the final accounting and payments.

5. Volunteer Home Defense Police: This department is still in existence and operation throughout the State and is turned over to the proper State authorities.

6. Publicity (Americanization): This department, being a permanent educational bureau, has been retained in service and is turned over to the proper State authorities.

7. Expenses, Local Committees: All of the sixty-nine County Committees, which were in active operation during the war, were disbanded as of December 31, 1918, except those in Alleghany, Erie, Lackawanna and Philadelphia. These four were continued in existence in order to finish important work, and each one has been finally closed.

8. War History Commission. This department, under the Chairmanship of Honorable William C. Sproul, Governor of the Commonwealth, naturally continues its work.

9. Woman's Committee: The work of this department throughout the State was of such an important character in numerous directions that it could not be terminated abruptly, and it was finally brought to a conclusion upon July 31, 1919.

If the Council and Committee had terminated its activities in accordance with its own wish as of January 31, 1919, its summary of receipts and expenses at that time would have been as follows:

Total Net Income	$942,501.41
Total Expenses	938,819.27

Balance on hand, January 31, 1919. $3,682.14

As indicated in the foregoing pages of this report, at the close of business October 15, 1919, there was a bank balance of $412.77, which was refunded Honorable Frank B. McClain, Treasurer of the Commission of Public Safety and defense, and a copy of the complete financial transactions between the respective Treasurers of the Commission and the Council, certified to in triplicate for auditing and filing by each Treasurer, is herewith attached (marked Exhibit "A") as part of this final report, for the information of the members of the Executive Committee of the "Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety" and also of the Executive Officers of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

The furniture purchased from the Library Bureau for use at the central headquarters in the Finance Building, Philadelphia, has been repurchased in accordance with their contract, with the exception of such furniture as is needed in the five rooms on the seventh floor of the Finance Building, retained by the new "Pennsylvania Commission of Public Welfare" for their occupation.

Also various grades of typewriters have been repurchased by the L. C. Smith, Underwood and Royal Typewriter Companies in accordance with their contracts, excepting such typewriters as have been retained by the Public Welfare Commission.

For several months past the various County Councils, Farm Labor Bureaus, Federal Food Administrators, etc., have been directed to forward all furniture and equipment, the property of the Council and Committee, to the Superintendent of Public Grounds and Buildings at Harrisburg and his acknowledgments of the various shipments received are on file.

A miscellaneous account has been kept of small sums of money received for the sale of postage stamps, etc., to employees of the Council and Committee and also for the sale of waste paper, and printed matter that became obsolete at the close of the war. A record has also been kept and receipts obtained of all expenditures paid out of this fund, which was used to repurchase postage stamps, pay emergency outside help in moving furniture from floor to floor and room to room in the Finance Building, Philadelphia, while establishing offices at the beginning of the war and in performing similar services during and at the close of the war, and also emergency outside help for miscellaneous purposes, and the same has been properly audited by representatives of the Auditor General's office and balance turned over to him for delivery to the State Treasurer, as shown on Exhibit "B," which is a part of this report.

EXHIBIT "A".

Treasurer of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety in Account With the Treasurer of the Commission of Public Safety and Defense.

	1,115,750.00

Correct:	Approved:
JOHN RADCLIFFE, (Signed) JOHN RADCLIFFE, Treasurer's Accountant.	EFFINGHAM B. MORRIS, Treasurer, Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety.

I certify the above to be a true and correct record of the amount paid to the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety, total amount of vouchers filed for credit, and moneys refunded, which is a complete and satisfactory settlement of the account between the Treasurer of the Pennsylvania Commission of Public Safety and Defense and the Treasurer of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety.

Signed in triplicate for filing and auditing purposes.

(Signed) FRANK B. McCLAIN,

Treasurer,

Pennsylvania Commission of Public Safety and Defense.
Philadelphia, Pa., November 13, 1919.

EXHIBIT "B".

Exhibit of Receipts and Expenditures of a Special Account Kept to Record Proceeds from the Sale of Postage Stamps, etc., to Employees, Proceeds from the Sale of Waste Paper and Obsolete Printed Matter, Also Record of Use Made of This Fund in Repurchasing Postage Stamps and Payments for Emergency Expenses as Outlined Under "Remarks."

Total Amount Received	$522.00
Total Amount Expended	503.95
Balance on hand, October 15, 1919	$18.05

I certify the above is in accordance with the book records of the Treasurer's office of the Pennsylvania Council of National Defense and Committee of Public Safety and that same has been audited and found correct and properly receipted bills are on file, which is a satisfactory settlement of the account, and also that the balance of eighteen dollars and five cents ($18.05) has been turned over to me for delivery to the State Treasurer.

Harrisburg, Pa., November 15, 1919.

(Signed) H. R. PURPLE,
Acting Special Deputy Auditor General.

REPORT OF THE COMMISSION TO CODIFY AND REVISE THE LAW RELATING TO BANKS, PRIVATE BANKERS AND TRUST COMPANIES DOING BUSINESS WITHIN THIS COMMONWEALTH.

APPOINTED UNDER AUTHORITY OF THE ACT OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Approved July 25, 1917, P. L. 1202.

To the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

The Commission appointed in pursuance of the Act of the General Assembly approved July 25, 1917, P. L. 1202, to codify and revise the laws relating to banks, private bankers and trust companies doing business in this Commonwealth, made a preliminary report February 26, 1919, submitting the draft of an act relating to the Banking Department of the State. This act with some slight amendments was adopted by the General Assembly and approved May 21, 1919.

The Commission in its report recommended the continuation of its work with the scope thereof broadened to include the study of the laws relating to savings banks and all institutions under the supervision of the Banking Department; and it further urged that the resolution adopted by the General Assembly in 1917, proposing the amendment of Section XI of Article XVI of the Constitution, be approved by the General Assembly at the Session of 1919.

The Commission was continued under Act of Assembly, approved July 21, 1919, P. L. 1057, with extended powers as suggested, and the resolution relative to the amendment of Section XI of Article XVI of the Constitution was again adopted.

The approval of the constitutional amendment by the electors, November 2, 1920, has made it possible for the Commissioners to submit a final report and a draft of a codification of the Banking Laws of the State.

The work of the Commissioners has included a complete study of the banking laws of the Commonwealth, and also the banking laws of other states and of the United States. The Commissioners have incorporated in the act submitted a number of provisions derived from the National Bank Act, the Federal Reserve Act and the banking laws of other states. They have, however, followed to the fullest extent deemed expedient the laws of this Commonwealth dealing with banks, especially the few general laws which are as follows:

1. The Act of April, 16, 1850, relating to banks of issue.
2. The Act of May 13, 1876, relating to banks of discount and deposit.
3. The Acts of May 9, 1889, and June 26, 1895, amending the 29th Section of the Act of April 29, 1874. These two acts cover the general powers of trust companies incorporated since the adoption of the present Constitution.
4. The Act of May 20, 1889, relating to savings banks.
5. The Act of June 19, 1911, relating to private banks.

Under the present banking laws there exists in the Commonwealth the following classes of banking or quasi-banking institutions.

1. State Banks. Most of these banks are incorporated under the Act of 1876. Some few are still operating under the Act of 1850, being banks of issue, but no longer exercising the issue privilege, because of the Federal tax provisions upon the issue of notes.
2. Trust Companies. Companies operating under special charters granted prior to the present Constitution, and trust companies incorporated as title insurance companies under the General Incorporation Act and the amendments thereto of 1889 and 1895.
3. Savings Fund Institutions incorporated by special charter prior to the present Constitution. Mutual Savings Banks incorporated under Act of 1889. Co-operative Savings Banks and a few savings banks having a capital stock organized under old charters.
4. Private Bankers.

The act has been drawn to provide for all these classes of institutions, to make it possible for them to qualify thereunder, and further to provide that new institutions organized must incorporate in accordance with the provisions of the act.

For the sake of completeness, it has been deemed advisable to incorporate in the Code, with some few changes, the Banking Department Act of May 21, 1919, the provisions of which appear to have worked satisfactorily in the efficient operation of the Banking Department. For the sake of convenience, the act has been divided into articles dealing with various powers, restrictions and provisions applicable to the various classes of institutions.

The Commissioners have agreed upon the principle that the development of banking in recent years has tended largely toward a character of institution which first, receives deposits; second, discounts paper; third, deals in securities; fourth, acts as fiduciary. In order that such an institution may function properly, it has been deemed advisable that it should be possible for such to enjoy a perpetual charter, and by reason of the amendment to Section 11 of Article XVI of the Constitution, it has been possible for the Commissioners to draft the act so as to provide for the granting of such charters. They have provided that trust companies accepting the act or hereafter incorporated thereunder shall enjoy the discount privilege, and have amplified the act of July 17, 1919, P. L. 1032, whereby state banks were permitted to act in a fiduciary capacity. They have felt that modern banking conditions require that the capital of such institutions be graded according to the population in the community served, and that institutions exercising fiduciary powers should have capital greater in amount than that required of state banks as such. They have, therefore, provided for an increased capital for both state banks and trust companies in the larger centers of population and a smaller amount of capital in smaller communities. As the stockholders of state banks are subject to double liability on their holdings of stock, and under the act as drawn, trust companies qualifying thereunder or hereafter incorporated will enjoy the full powers of state banks, the Commissioners have reached the conclusion that it is proper that the stockholders of such trust companies should be subject to the double liability.

They have also felt that the provision in regard to the limit of loans might safely be increased from the percentage heretofore provided for state banks. They have incorporated certain restrictions as to investments, which banking practice would seem to indicate to be wise, and have granted certain powers of investment in addition to those now exercised by banks to enable such institutions to function properly.

Very careful consideration has been given to the powers and duties of directors, in the endeavor to safeguard the interests of depositors and stockholders without imposing burdens so heavy as to prevent banking institutions from securing proper persons to serve upon their boards.

It has seemed to the Commissioners wise that the powers of investment of savings banks should be amplified. They have, therefore, incorporated a provision giving such institutions the right to invest in bank acceptances, under certain restrictions and limitations, feeling that the holding of such investments by savings banks would tend to strengthen and render them more liquid to meet the needs of the communities served in times of financial stress. They have given most careful consideration to the provisions of the savings bank laws of those other states which specify minutely certain corporate obligations as legal investments for such institutions. They have been impressed with the remarkable market depression of such securities during and since the world war. Such market depression has convinced them that at this time it would be unwise to endeavor to broaden the investment powers of savings banks along such lines, believing that at a later date, when financial matters are more fully readjusted, experience will have better determined what additional classes of securities savings banks might be safely permitted to purchase.

The Commissioners have reached the conclusion that an increase in the number of so called private bankers (designated in this act "unincorporated banks") is not necessary to serve the convenience and need of the public; that for the protection of the public such institutions should become partnerships with increased capital, graded according to the population of the community served; and that in operation their business should be conducted with practically the same powers and subject to the same limitations as those recommended for state banks.

Under recent Federal Legislation (Section 11 K of the Federal Reserve Act as amended), national banks are given the right to exercise fiduciary powers when not in contravention to state law. The national banks so acting would not be required to give bond in this State. Fiduciary estates in the care of such banks are now subject to examination by state authority. The Commissioners have felt it proper that the Banking Department should have power of supervision over national banks acting in a fiduciary capacity to the same extent as in the case of trust companies. They have felt, however, that provision for such inspection should not be included in a State Banking Code. They have, therefore, prepared and submitted a draft of an act supplementing the Fiduciaries Act and the Wills Act, the adoption of which they feel would further safeguard the management of estates by national banks when exercising the fiduciary power.

In the course of their study and consideration of the Banking Laws, the Commissioners have had brought to their attention many times the question of the usury law of this Commonwealth. They have consulted with bankers, business men and others as to the economic effect of the present law. Their investigation indicates that:

1. Money of Pennsylvania banking institutions and individuals flows from this state to markets offering higher rates of interest with good security.
2. Such flow of money to other markets reduces the amount of money loaned within the State.
3. Mortgages in this State are not largely sought by investors, for the reason that other investments can be secured within or without this State, considered equally safe, and bringing in a much higher rate of return.
4. Funds for investment in mortgages are greatly needed to help solve the present housing situation in various communities throughout the State.

5. The present usury law forces Pennsylvania corporations and individuals to contract outside the State for funds which otherwise could be furnished by Pennsylvania institutions, and the securities so issued in other states by Pennsylvania corporations are afterwards returned to this State and sold largely to Pennsylvania investors.

Therefore, the Commissioners have reached the conclusion that the present usury law does not accomplish the purpose for which it was enacted; and that in many cases it works an actual hardship to the borrower and to the lender, both individual and corporate, within this State. They, therefore, suggest and recommend to the General Assembly the necessity for serious consideration of the advisability of altering or amending the present usury law so as to permit money in this Commonwealth to be more subject to the law of supply and demand, in the interest of the borrower, the lender and the public at large.

The time required in the work of revising and codifying the banking laws has made it possible for the Commissioners to give full and proper consideration to the other subjects committed to them by the amendment of July 21, 1919. From the study made, however, they are convinced that the increasing service which building and loan associations are rendering to the public requires further legislation in order that their growth may not be retarded, and that the service they now render may be safely increased. They would, therefore, recommend to the General Assembly that full consideration be given to this subject.

The Commissioners have been greatly aided in their deliberations by counsel and recommendations from Hon. John S. Fisher, Commissioner of Banking; Capt. J. W. Morrison, First Deputy Commissioner, and P. G. Cameron, Second Deputy Commissioner. They desire to express their great appreciation of the able assistance so received, and for the many courtesies extended to them.

Respectfully submitted,

GEO. D EDWANLE,
Chairman.

Secretary.

ARTICLE I.

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

Section 1. Short Title. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same. That this act shall be known and may be cited, as "The Banking Act of 1921."

Section 2. Definitions. Except as otherwise expressly indicated, the following words, wherever used in this act, shall be taken and construed to have the following meanings:

"Bank" means any state bank, trust company, savings bank or unincorporated bank, heretofore or hereafter organized.

"Trust company" means a corporation having power to execute trusts and to act in any fiduciary capacity, whether such corporation has been heretofore organized under the General Corporation Act of 1874 and its supplements or under any previous act of assembly, general or special, or is hereafter organized under this act or any supplements thereto.

"Savings bank" means an institution incorporated under any general or special act of assembly on the mutual plan and without capital stock, and receiving deposits payable on stipulated notice.

"Unincorporated bank" means an individual, partnership or unincorporated association engaged in the business of banking.

"Banking" means discounting and negotiating promissory notes, drafts, bills of exchange and other evidences of debt; receiving deposits of money and commercial paper otherwise than as bailee, lending money on real or personal security, and buying and selling gold and silver bullion, foreign coins or bills of exchange.

"Commissioner" means Commissioner of Banking.

"Person" means an individual, a partnership or an unincorporated association.

"Court" means the court of common pleas of the county where the banking house or other place of business of the corporation or person in question is located.

"Prothonotary" means the prothonotary of such court.

Note:—The purpose of this section is merely to define terms as used in the Code, and not to attempt general definitions, enumerating the powers, etc., of the different institutions, which are fully set forth in the appropriate sections.

The last three definitions are copied from section 2 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 3. Unauthorized Use of Words Indicating Banking, Trust Company or Savings Bank Business.

(a) No corporation or person, except a national bank, a federal reserve bank, or an incorporated or unincorporated bank duly authorized to transact business in this state, shall, as a designation or name, or part of a designation or name, under which business is or may be transacted in this state, make use, in any of the ways enumerated in clause (d) of this section, of the word "bank," "banking," or any other word or words indicating the carrying on of a banking business.

(b) No corporation or person, except a corporation duly authorized to do a trust company business in this state, shall, as a designation or name, or part of a designation or name, under which business is or may be conducted in this state, make use, in any of the ways enumerated in clause (d) of this section, of the word "trust" or any other word or words indicating the carrying on of a trust company business or a business in the nature thereof: Provided, that this clause shall not be construed to prevent any individual, as such, from acting in any trust capacity as heretofore.

(c) No corporation or person, except a savings bank duly authorized to transact business in this state, shall, as a designation or name, or part of a designation or name, under which business is or may be conducted in this state, make use, in any of the ways enumerated in clause (d) of this section, of the word "saving," "savings," or any other word or words indicating the carrying on of the business of a savings bank or savings fund or a business in the nature thereof: Provided, however, That the prohibitions of this clause shall not apply to any incorporated bank having the word "saving" or "savings" as part of its corporate title at the date of the approval of this act, nor shall such prohibitions prevent any bank from establishing, operating or advertising a department for the receipt of savings or time deposits.

(d) The prohibitions of clauses (a), (b) and (c) of this section shall include the use of any of the prohibited words in any corporate, artificial or business name or title; the use of any office sign at the place where such business is transacted, having thereon any word or words indicating that such place or office is the place or office of a bank, trust company or savings bank, as the case may be; and the use or circulation of any letterheads, billheads, blank forms, notes, receipts, certificates, circulars, or any written or printed or partly written and partly printed paper whatever, having thereon any word or words indicating that such business is the business of a bank, trust company or savings bank, as the case may be.

(e) Any corporation or person violating any provision of this section shall forfeit to the commonwealth the sum of one hundred dollars a day for every day or part thereof during which such violation continues, such penalty to be recovered in an action brought by the Commissioner in the name of the commonwealth, as other penalties are recoverable.

(f) In addition to the remedy provided by clause (e) of this section, a court of competent jurisdiction may, on bill filed by the Commissioner in the name of the commonwealth, issue an injunction restraining any such corporation or person from further using such word or words in violation of the provisions of this section and from further transacting business in such manner as to lead the public to believe that the business being carried on is that of a bank, trust company or savings bank, as the case may be, during the pendency of such action to recover the penalty, and perpetually, and may make such other order or decree as equity and justice may require.

Note:—This new section takes the place of the act of April 23, 1909 (P. L. 121; 5 Purd. 5701), relating to the use of the word "trust," and section 3 of the Private Banking Act, June 19, 1911. (P. L. 1060; 5 Purd. 5350), which is therefore omitted from Article VII of this Code.

Section 4. Applicability of Act. Except as herein otherwise indicated, the provisions of this act shall apply to all banks heretofore incorporated or doing business at the date of the approval of this act, as well as those hereafter incorporated or established.

Note:—This section is new.

Section 5. Constitutionality of Act. If any section, clause, sentence, paragraph, or other part of this act, shall for any reason be adjudged by any court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, such judgment shall not affect, impair or invalidate the remainder of this act or any part thereof, but shall be confined in its operation to the part thereof directly involved in the controversy in which such judgment shall be rendered, it being hereby declared that the legislature would have enacted the remainder of this act without such part adjudged to be invalid.

Any section, clause or other part of this act so declared to be invalid shall not be considered as having been stricken out from any other portion or portions of this act wherein cross-references thereto are made but shall be taken and construed as having been actually written in full, into such other portion or portions from which cross-references are made.

Note:—The first paragraph of this section is copied, with slight modifications, from section 51 of the Banking Department Act of 1919. The second paragraph is new.

Section 6. Acceptance of Provisions of Act. Acceptance of the provisions of this act by any bank in existence at the date of the approval of this act, chartered under any law of this commonwealth, general or special, shall be by filing with the Commissioner a written acceptance under the seal of the corporation of all the provisions of this act and of the constitution of the Commonwealth, signed by the president and the cashier or treasurer of such bank and authorized by the vote of a majority of the stockholders thereof, or a majority of the trustees or managers where there are no stockholders, at a meeting called for that purpose.

When the Commissioner shall be satisfied that such bank has complied with all requirements of this act, he shall issue to the bank a certificate to that effect and transmit a copy thereof to the Auditor General, and thereafter such bank shall be entitled to all the benefits and be subject to all the provisions of this act, but shall continue to possess all powers given to it by any special act of assembly, so far as the same shall not be inconsistent with this act or with the Constitution.

Note:—This takes the place of section 32 of the act of May 13, 1876 (P. L. 161; 1 Purd. 406), which does not prescribe the procedure and applies only to state banks. The new section includes trust companies, thus replacing section 3 of the act of June 11, 1885 (P. L. 111; 4 Purd. 4289). It also includes savings banks. The procedure conforms to that prescribed by section 26 of the General Corporation Act.

Section 7. Expiration of Charter of Existing Bank. Whenever the charter of any bank in existence at the date of the approval of this act, which bank shall have accepted the provisions of this act and of the constitution of the Commonwealth, in the manner provided by section 6 of this act, shall be limited in time, such bank may, at any time before the expiration of such charter, obtain a new charter under this act in the following manner:

A special meeting of the stockholders shall be called, in the manner provided by clause (a) of section 86 of this act, or, when there are no stockholders, a special meeting of the trustees or managers shall be called as provided by law or by-law, for the purpose of considering and deciding whether application for a charter under this act shall be made. If, at such meeting, the holders of a majority of the stock or a majority of the trustees or managers as the case may be, of said bank shall decide in favor of such application, a majority of the directors, or of the trustees or managers, of the bank shall thereafter, and before the time when the charter of said bank expires, subscribe and acknowledge in duplicate the certificate of incorporation required by section 68 of this act, and attach thereto certified copies of such resolution and proof of notice of such meeting, and shall file said certificates, copies and proofs with the Commissioner and pay to the Commissioner a fee of one hundred dollars.

The Commissioner shall thereupon proceed to ascertain whether the provisions of the law have been complied with and shall also ascertain from the best sources of information at hand, and by such investigation as he may deem necessary, whether said bank is in good financial standing and repute whether in the conduct of its affairs, so far as he officially knows, the said bank has conformed to the laws of the state, and his opinion whether the granting of a new charter under this act to said bank is consistent with the interests of the public.

If the Commissioner shall be satisfied as to the matters above enumerated, he shall forthwith so notify the bank in writing and shall endorse his approval on said duplicate certificates of incorporation and shall transmit the same to the Governor, who, if he shall approve the same, shall proceed as is provided by section 73 of this act; and the certificate of incorporation transmitted by the Governor to the recorder of deeds shall be recorded and indexed in the same manner as is provided by section 74 of this act; and from and after the date of such recording, the charter of said bank and its corporate rights and franchises shall be in law renewed and extended, with the same force and effect as though the bank had been incorporated under this act.

If the Commissioner shall disapprove such certificates of incorporation, he shall forthwith certify such disapproval to the Governor, stating fully and clearly his objections to the granting of the proposed charter, and shall forthwith furnish the bank with a copy of such objections. The bank may thereupon, but not later than thirty days after receipt of such copy, proceed by application for a writ of mandamus against the Commissioner to have the validity of said objections determined by the court according to the law, and if determined in favor of said bank, the court shall issue its writ of mandamus to the Commissioner, requiring him to issue his certificate in proper form in favor of the bank, whereupon the Governor shall proceed to issue letters patent as hereinbefore provided.

Provided: That any savings bank without capital stock, incorporated prior to 1874, the charter of which has been renewed from time to time by general or special legislation, where the right of perpetual succession was conferred by the original charter upon the managers, may apply for and receive a perpetual charter upon an application being made in the manner as provided in this section, without accepting the provisions of this act, and shall continue to be entitled to the privilege and benefits conferred in its original charter, but shall not be entitled to any of the benefits conferred by this act excepting the right of perpetual succession, unless and until it shall have duly accepted all the provisions of this act.

Note:—This section, which renders obsolete the existing laws as to renewal and extension of charters, is intended to bring all banks having twenty-year charters under the operation of this act as their charters from time to time expire. Under the amendment to Article XVI, section 11 of the Constitution, perpetual charters are made possible; and it is improbable that any bank which could obtain a perpetual charter under this act would desire a renewal for twenty years only.

This section provides a method of procedure assimilated to original proceedings for incorporation, and involves the repeal of section 4 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 400) and the act of April 26, 1889 (P. L. 61; 1 Purd. 420), so far as they relate to renewal and extension of charters, and of the act of May 10, 1889, (P. L. 185; 1 Purd. 421), so far as it relates to the renewal of charters of banks of discount, savings banks and trust companies.

Section 8. Advertisements in Newspapers and Legal Periodical. Whenever any of the provisions of this act, advertisement is required to be made in a newspaper or newspapers, such advertisement shall, unless otherwise provided be made in a newspaper or newspapers of general circulation in the county, published in the city, borough or township where the banking house or other place of business of the corporation or person in question is located.

Whenever advertisement is required to be made in two newspapers, if there shall be, in the county, a legal periodical designated by the court of common pleas for legal advertisements, then such advertisement shall be made in one newspaper as aforesaid and in such legal periodical. If there be only one newspaper published in the city, borough or township and no such legal periodical be published in the county, publication in such one newspaper shall be sufficient. If there be no newspaper published in the city, borough or township, then the advertisement shall be made in a newspaper of general circulation in the county, published at the county seat, or, if none be there published, in the newspaper published nearest to said city, borough or township within the county, and in such legal periodical if any there be in the county. If there be no newspaper published in the county, then the advertisement shall be made in the newspaper published nearest to such city, borough or township in an adjoining county.

Note:—This section is intended to avoid repetitions in the various sections by which advertisements are required. It is founded on the last part of section 4 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 400), with some revision and the addition of the provision as to legal periodicals.

Section 9. Service of Notices. Except as herein otherwise expressly provided, all written or printed notices required by this act shall be served either in the manner now or hereafter provided by law for the service of writs of summons except that service need not be made by the sheriff, or by mailing such notice by registered mail, return receipt requested, to any person required to be notified at his last known place of business or residence, as appearing on the records of the corporation, and to any corporation at its principal office or, if a foreign corporation, at the office of its duly authorized agent in this state.

Note:—This section, which re-enacts section 3 (b) of the Banking Department Act of 1919, is intended to avoid repetition. Where the advertising of notices is required, it is provided for in the sections dealing with the particular kinds of notices.

Section 10. Fees of Public Officers. Whenever, under any of the provisions of this act, certificates or other documents are required to be filed or recorded in the office of the prothonotary of any court of common pleas or in the office of any other public official other than the Commissioner of Banking, such prothonotary or other official shall be entitled to receive therefor the same fees as are provided by law for similar services.

Note:—This is copied from section 3 (c) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 11. Preservation of Records.

(a) In General. Every bank shall preserve, in such form and manner that they may be readily produced on proper demand, all its records of original or final entry, including cards used under the card system and deposit slips or tickets for a period of twelve years from the date of making the same.

(b) Records of Dissolved Banks. In case of the voluntary or involuntary dissolution of any bank, all of its books and records relating to any moneys paid or subject to payment into the state treasury under any law of this commonwealth relating to escheats shall be delivered to the Commissioner and retained by him as part of the records of the Banking Department.

Note:—This section is new.

Section 12. Evidence from Records of Bank.

(a) Whenever any evidence shall be required in any civil suit or proceeding, in any court of this commonwealth, from the book entries or other records of any bank doing business in this commonwealth at the time of such requirement, it shall be competent, upon five days' written notice to the opposite party, to produce verified copies of such entries or other records, which shall be received in such proceeding as prima facie evidence of such entries or other records; and a bank officer shall not be compelled to produce the original book or record or attend as a witness thereto unless a party to such proceeding shall at least forty-eight hours before the trial file an affidavit that injustice will likely be done unless the original book or record is produced and serve a copy of such affidavit on the opposite party: Provided: That this section shall not apply to any suit or proceeding to which the bank is a party.

Note:—This is derived from sections 1 and 3 of the act of June 22, 1883 (P. L. 154; 2 Purd. 1509-18). The period of notice has been changed from ten days to five; the provisions have been extended to "other records" as well as "book entries;" and the provisions as to forty-eight hours notice of objection and service of copy of affidavit are new.

(b) To warrant admission in evidence of such copy it must be shown by an affidavit or the testimony of an officer of the bank that the book or other record is one of the ordinary books or records of the bank used in the transaction of its business that the entry is as was originally made at the time of its date and in the usual course of business, that there are no interlineations or erasures that the book or record is in the custody and control of the bank and that the copy has been compared with the book or record and is a correct copy of the same; and such book or record shall be open to the inspection of any interested party.

Note:—This is a revision of section 2 of the act of 1883 (2 Purd. 1509). Except for the inclusion of records other than books, the changes are in phraseology and not in substance.

Section 13. Escheats. Every bank shall comply with the provisions of the laws of this commonwealth now in force or hereafter enacted relating to escheats.

Note:—If any reference to the subject of escheats is necessary in this Code, the above would seem to be sufficient.

The act of March 6, 1847 (P. L. 222; 4 Purd. 4369), relating to annual statements of unclaimed profits and dividends and the escheat thereof, was expressly repealed by the escheat act of June 7, 1915 (P. L. 878; 5 Purd. 5306), which, with its amendments, is the law now in force.

Section 14. Foreign Banks. It shall not be lawful for any bank incorporated under the laws of any other state or county to receive any deposit or deposits or transact any banking business whatsoever in this Commonwealth. Every corporation or person who shall in violation of this section be concerned in such receipt of deposits or transaction of banking business shall be subject to a penalty of one hundred dollars for each day during which any business shall be carried on said penalty to be payable to the Commissioner and recoverable by him by action at law. In addition to said remedy a court of competent jurisdiction may on bill filed by the Commissioner issue an injunction restraining such foreign bank from continuing to receive deposits or transacting a banking business in this Commonwealth, and may make such other order or decree as equity and injustice may require.

Note:—This takes the place of the last paragraph of section 1 of the act of February 11, 1895 (P. L. 4; 1 Purd. 411), establishing the Banking Department, and of section 2 of the act of March 28, 1808 (4 Sm. L. 537; 1 Purd. 447), which provides that no company incorporated under the laws of any other state "shall be permitted to establish within this commonwealth any banking-house or office of discount and deposit." The provision of section 1 of the act of 1895, which was re-enacted in section 4 of the Banking Department Act of 1919, was that no foreign corporation should receive deposits or transact banking business without first filing in the office of the Commissioner a certified copy of the statement required to be filed with the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

The penalty and the injunction provision of the new section are similar to those relating to branch banks in section 83 clauses (c) and (d) of this Code.

ARTICLE II. BANKING DEPARTMENT.

Section 15. Banking Department; Scope of Supervision; Powers; Duties. There shall continue to be a separate and distinct department known as the Banking Department, charged with the supervision of all the corporations and persons hereinafter described, and with the duty of taking care that the laws of this Commonwealth in relation thereto shall be faithfully executed and that the greatest safety to depositors therein or therewith and to other interested persons shall be afforded.

The said supervision, duties, and powers shall extend and apply to the following corporations now or hereafter incorporated under the laws of this state or under the laws of any other state and authorized to transact business in this state; namely, all such corporations having power to receive and receiving money on deposit or for safe-keeping otherwise than as bailee including all banks, banking companies co-operative banking associations, trust, safe deposit, real estate, mortgage, title insurance, guarantee, surety and indemnity companies, savings institutions, savings banks and provident institutions. The said supervision duties, and powers shall also extend and apply to mutual savings funds, building and loan associations, and corporations doing a safe-deposit business only.

The said supervision, duties, and powers shall also extend and apply to all national banking associations, located in this state, now or hereafter incorporated under the laws of the United States, which shall, in pursuance of Federal law or regulation, be granted a permit to act or shall act as trustee, executor, administrator, registrar of stocks and bonds, guardian of estates, assignee, receiver, committee of estates of lunatics, or in any other fiduciary capacity.

The said supervision, duties, and powers shall also extend and apply to all unincorporated banks except such as are exempted by clause (c) of section 127 of this act, and to all such individuals, partnerships, and unincorporated associations, as are or shall be by law made subject to the supervision of said department, and to any individuals or associations of individuals doing business of co-operative banks or of building and loan associations, or a business in the nature of either, whether under the guise of a deed of trust or otherwise.

Note:—This re-enacts section 4 of the Banking Department Act of 1919, modifying the phraseology as to unincorporated banks, omitting the last paragraph of that section, which is covered by section 14 of this Code, and adding the reference to co-operative banks.

Section 16. Commissioner, Deputies and Employees.

(a) Commissioner. The chief officer of the Banking Department shall continue to be known as the Commissioner of Banking. He shall be appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall hold his office for the term of four years and until his successor is duly qualified. Within fifteen days from the time of notice of his appointment, he shall take and subscribe the oath of office prescribed by the constitution and file the same in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, and shall also give to the Commonwealth a bond, in the penalty of fifty thousand dollars, with two or more individual sureties, or a corporate surety, to be approved by the Governor, conditioned for the faithful performance of all his duties. He shall receive an annual salary of ten thousand dollars.

Note:—This is section 5 (a) of the Banking Department Act of 1919, the only change being an increase of the salary of the Commissioner from eight to ten thousand dollars, to conform to increases granted at the session of 1919 to other state officers.

(b) Deputies. The Commissioner shall appoint a first deputy, whose salary shall be six thousand dollars per annum, and may appoint a second and a third deputy, whose salaries shall be, respectively, five thousand and four thousand dollars per annum. The duties of all such deputies shall be such as may be assigned to them by the Commissioner, and each of them shall take, subscribe, and file the oath of office as herein prescribed for the Commissioner, and shall, whenever required by the Commissioner, give bond, in such amount and with surety as may be prescribed by the Commissioner, conditioned for the faithful performance of the duties of such deputy.

Note:—This is section 5 (b) of the Banking Department Act of 1919, except that the salaries of the deputies are increased from five, four and three thousand dollars respectively to six, five and four thousand.

(c) Deputy acting in Place of Commissioner. Whenever the Commissioner, by reason of absence or incapacity, is unable to perform the duties of his office, or if a vacancy in the office of Commissioner occurs, the duties of the Commissioner shall be performed by the deputy next in authority, until such disability is removed or the vacancy filled.

Any deputy, before entering upon the performance of such duties, shall give to the Commonwealth a bond in the penalty of fifty thousand dollars, with two or more individual sureties, or a corporate surety, to be approved by the Governor, conditioned for the faithful performance of such duties while he is acting as Commissioner.

Note:—This is section 5 (c) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

(d) Clerks, Examiners and Other Employees. The Commissioner, with the approval of the Governor, shall employ, from time to time, such clerks, examiners, special agents, and other employees, as he may need to discharge in a proper manner the duties imposed upon him by law. They shall perform such duties as the Commissioner shall assign to them, and their compensation shall be fixed by him with the approval of the Governor. Each of such employees shall take, subscribe, and file the oath of office as herein prescribed for the Commissioner and deputy commissioners. Bonds shall be given to the Commonwealth by such of said employees, in such amounts, and with such surety, as may be determined by the Commissioner, conditioned for the faithful performance of their duties.

Note:—This is section 5 (d) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

(e) Cost of Bonds. The cost of all bonds required by this section to be given by the Commissioner, the deputy commissioners, or any of the clerks, examiners, or other employees of the Banking Department, shall constitute expenses of the department and shall be paid as herein after provided for such expenses.

Note:—This is section 5 (e) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

(f) Prohibitions. Neither the Commissioner nor any of his deputies, clerks, examiners, or other employees shall be interested as officer, director, trustee, manager, or stockholder, in any corporation subject to the supervision of the Banking Department, nor interested in any way in the business of any person subject to such supervision.

No deputy commissioner or examiner shall be appointed special deputy to assist in the liquidation of any corporation or person whose books, papers, and affairs he shall have examined within one year previous to the taking of possession by the Commissioner under the provision of section 32 of this act.

No examiner shall receive a loan, nor shall the Commissioner or any of his deputies, clerks, examiners, or other employees receive a gift, directly or indirectly, of any sum of money or other valuable thing, from any corporation or person to whom this act applies, or from any director, officer, or employee thereof; and a violation of this prohibition shall constitute ground for the removal of such Commissioner, deputy, clerk, examiner, or other employee.

Note:—This is section 5 (f) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 17. Transfer of Powers and Duties to Commissioner. All powers, rights, privileges, and duties heretofore by any law of this Commonwealth conferred or imposed upon the Auditor-General or the Secretary of the Commonwealth, in relation to any of the corporations or persons who, under the provisions of this act, are subject to the supervision of the Banking Department, are hereby transferred to, and conferred and imposed upon, the Commissioner, so far as the same relate to the supervision of such corporations and persons for the purposes of this act.

Note:—This is section 6 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 18. Records and Securities to Remain in Custody of Commissioner. All books, papers, records, and securities which were formerly in the office of the Superintendent of Banking and in the office of the Auditor-General, relating to the business of corporations and persons subject to the supervision of the Commissioner, and which were delivered and transferred to the Commissioner, shall be and remain in his charge and custody.

Note:—This is section 7 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 19. Rooms at Capital; Furniture. There shall be assigned to the Commissioner by the Commissioners of Public Grounds and Buildings a suitable room or rooms, at the capital of the state, for conducting the business of the Banking Department; and the Commissioner shall, from time to time, with the approval of the commissioners aforesaid, procure the necessary furniture and other proper conveniences for the transacting of the said business, the expenses of which shall be paid, on the certificate of the Commissioner and the warrant of the Auditor-General, out of funds appropriated to the Commissioners of Public Grounds and Buildings.

Note:—This is section 8 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 20. Maintenance of Banking Department.

(a) Expenses. All moneys derived by the Banking Department from fees, assessments, charges, penalties, and otherwise, shall be paid by the Commissioner into the state treasury for safe-keeping, and shall, by the State Treasurer, be placed in a separate fund, to be available for the use of the Banking Department upon requisition of the Commissioner. All such moneys, so paid into the state treasury, are hereby specifically appropriated to the Banking Department for the purpose of paying the salaries of the Commissioner, the deputy commissioners, the examiners, and other employees of the department, and the expenses of the department, including the rental and furniture of such rooms or quarters as the Commissioner may deem necessary outside of the capital.

The Auditor-General shall, upon requisition of the Commissioner, from time to time, draw warrants upon the State Treasurer for the amounts specified in such requisitions, not exceeding, however, the amount in such fund at the time of the making of any such requisitions.

Note:—This is section 9 (a) of the Banking Department Act of 1919, omitting the temporary provisions of the first paragraph of that clause and inserting after "rental" the words "and furniture," so as to provide that the furniture of branch offices of the Banking Department shall be paid for out of the department funds and not out of the funds appropriated to the Commissioners of Public Grounds and Buildings.

(b) Assessment of Expenses upon Corporations and Individuals. All the expenses incurred in and about the conduct of the business of the Banking Department, including the cost of the regular examinations of corporations and persons under the supervision of the department, the compensation of the Commissioner, deputy commissioners, examiners, and other employees of the department, (but excluding the furniture and conveniences mentioned in section 19 of this act), together with all other general or overhead expenses of the department, shall be charged to and paid by the corporations and persons subject to the supervision of the department, in equitable proportions, at such times, and in such manner, as the Commissioner shall by general rule or regulation annually prescribe:

Provided, however, That the charge for the examination of building and loan associations shall not exceed the sum of ten dollars for each one hundred thousand dollars, or fraction thereof, of assets of said building and loan associations with a minimum charge to said building and loan associations, of fifteen dollars.

The expenses incurred in connection with any special examination or investigation of any corporation or person, including a proportionate part of the salary of any examiner or other employee of the department engaged in such examination or investigation, shall be charged to and paid by such corporation or person.

On failure or refusal of any such corporation or person, after thirty days written notice, to pay any sum lawfully assessed or charged against it or him by the Commissioner under the provisions of this clause, the Commissioner may, at his option, bring an action at law to recover the same, or may take possession of the business and property of such corporation or person as provided in section 32 of this act.

Note:—This is section 9 (b) of the Banking Department Act of 1919, except that in the proviso the amounts have been changed from five and ten dollars to ten and fifteen dollars, respectively.

Section 21. Seal. The seal now in use by the Commissioner shall continue to be the seal of the office of the Commissioner of Banking, and may be renewed when necessary. A description of the seal with the impression thereof, and a certificate of approval of the Governor, shall remain on file in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Section 22. Copies of Documents.

(a) Admissibility of Contents. Copies of all books, accounts, reports, and other papers or documents filed in the office of the Banking Department, certified under the hand and seal of the Commissioner, shall be admitted to be read in evidence in all courts of law and elsewhere in this Commonwealth, in all cases where the originals would be admitted in evidence; Provided, That in any proceedings, the court having jurisdiction may, on cause shown, require the production of the originals.

Note:—This is section 11 (a) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

(b) Fees. For every copy of any paper filed in the Banking Department, and for the certification thereof, except when such copy or certification is made for the benefit of a corporation or person subject to the supervision of the department under the provisions of this act, the Commissioner may charge such fees as he may by general rule or regulation prescribe.

Note:—This is section 11 (b) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

(c) Prima Facie Evidence of Contents.—In any proceeding under the provisions of this act, a copy, duly certified by the Commissioner, of a duly instituted examination of the corporation or person involved in such proceeding, shall be prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated.

Note:—This is section 11 (c) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 23. Disclosure of Information Forbidden; Exceptions.—Neither the Commissioner nor any deputy, examiner, or employee of the Banking Department shall, directly or indirectly, wilfully exhibit, publish, divulge, or make known, to any person or persons, any record, report, statement, letter, or other matter, fact, or thing, contained in said department, or ascertained from any of the same, or from any examination made under the provisions of this act, excepting in such manner as is expressly authorized by this act, and excepting when the production of such information in a proceeding in any court is duly required by subpoena issued by special order of the court, or other legal process; and any violation of the provisions of this section shall be a misdemeanor, upon conviction whereof the person so offending shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, and shall be dismissed from his employment in said department. Provided, however, That the Commissioner, on the written request or consent of any corporation, authorized by resolution of its board of directors, or on the written request or consent of any person, under the supervision of the Banking Department, may discuss, with an advisory committee selected by the Commissioner, or selected by such corporation or person and acceptable to the Commissioner, such matters relating to the financial condition of such corporation or person as the Commissioner may deem pertinent to the rehabilitation thereof: And provided further, That the Commissioner may, on like request or consent, furnish to the Federal Reserve Board or to the Federal Reserve Bank of the district in which the banking house or other place of business of any corporation is located, copies of any reports or parts thereof, or any information in his possession, relating to such corporation, for the use of said board or bank.

Note:—This is section 12 of the Banking Department Act of 1919, with the addition of the provision as to selection of the committee by the bank.

Section 24. Department's Power to Examine and Inspect. Every corporation and person included within the supervision of the Banking Department as set forth in section 15 of this act, together with all the property, assets, and resources of such corporation or person, shall be subject to inspection and examination by the Commissioner or his deputies, or any qualified examiner of the said department, when such examiner is authorized in writing, under the official seal of the department, by the Commissioner or a deputy commissioner, to make such examination and inspection.

Note:—This is section 13 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 25. Examinations.

(a) In General.—It shall be the duty of the Commissioner, at least once in each year, to examine or cause to be examined the books, papers and affairs of each and every corporation and person subject to the supervision of the Banking Department. The Commissioner may also, at any time, make such special investigations or examinations as, in his opinion, the exigencies of any case may require. Whenever he shall deem it necessary or proper, he shall assign a qualified examiner or examiners to make any such examination or investigation, which examiner or examiners shall have power to make a thorough examination into all the business and affairs of the corporation or person in all departments, and of all property, assets, and resources wherever situated, and, in so doing, to examine, under oath or otherwise, any of the officers, agents, employees or members of a corporation or person, or any corporation or person in possession of any assets of the corporation or person under examination. The examiner or examiners shall make a full and detailed report of the condition of the corporation or person under examination, or such special report as may be directed by the Commissioner.

Provided, That whenever any bank shall, by becoming a member of a Federal Reserve Bank, be subject to the examinations required by the Federal Reserve Act, the Commissioner may, in his discretion, accept such examinations in lieu of the examinations required by this section or by the laws of this Commonwealth.

Note:—This is section 14 (a) of the Banking Department Act of 1919, with some modification of language, except that an examination at least once every year of the books, papers and affairs of all corporations or persons subject to the supervision of the department has been substituted for an examination twice a year as to state banks, trust companies and unincorporated banks.

The proviso embodies the provisions of section 4 of the Act of July 17, 1917, P. L. 1021.

(b) Examinations under Oath.—The Commissioner and his deputies and any qualified examiner appointed by the Commissioner are hereby authorized and empowered to administer oaths or affirmations to any of the officers, agents, employees or members enumerated in clause (a) of this section, and any wilful false swearing in any inquiry thereunder shall be perjury, and subject, upon conviction thereof, to the same punishment as is or may be provided by law, for the punishment of perjury. Upon failure of any of the individuals aforesaid to make answer to any such inquiry, the Attorney General, upon the request of the Commissioner, shall make information thereof to the court, whereupon said court, after hearing, shall make such order as the occasion requires.

Note:—This is section 14 (b) of the Banking Department Act of 1919, slightly modified in wording.

Section 26. Reports to Commissioner.

(a) In General.—Every corporation and person subject to the supervision of the Banking Department, except building and loan associations doing business exclusively within this state, shall make and render to the Commissioner not less than two or more than five reports of its or his condition during each year. The number, form, and manner of such reports shall be prescribed by the Commissioner by general rule or regulation. Every such report shall be verified by the oath or affirmation of the president, cashier, treasurer, or other managing officer in the case of a corporation or association, by a member of the firm in the case of a partnership, and by an individual banker in person. It shall be attested as correct by the signatures of at least three of the directors, trustees, or other managers of a corporation or association, and by the signatures of at least two of the members of a partnership.

Each such report shall exhibit, in detail and under appropriate heads, the resources and liabilities of the corporation or person at the close of business on any past day specified by the Commissioner, and shall be transmitted to him within five days or such further time as he may in his discretion allow, after the receipt of a request or requisition therefor from him.

Abstract summaries of two of said reports, designated by the Commissioner, in each year, except the reports of building and loan associations doing business exclusively within this state, shall forthwith be published by the corporation or person in a newspaper, and proof of such publication, verified by affidavit, shall be furnished to the Commissioner.

Building and loan associations doing business exclusively within this state shall, in the manner hereinbefore provided, make and render one report during each year. No abstract summaries of such reports need be published.

The Commissioner shall also have power to call for a special report from any corporation or person under the supervision of the Banking Department, including building and loan associations, whenever, in his judgment, the same may be necessary to a full and complete knowledge of its or his condition.

The reports and publications provided for in this clause shall be in lieu of all reports and of all publications for similar purposes heretofore required by law to be made.

Note:—This is section 15 (a) of the Banking Department Act of 1919, except that, in the last line of the first paragraph, "two" is substituted for "three."

(b) Failure to Make or Publish Reports.—Any corporation or person failing to make and transmit any report, to publish any report required by this act to be published, or to furnish any proof of publication required by clause (a) of this section, shall be subject, at the discretion of the Commissioner, to a penalty of not more than one hundred dollars, payable to the Commissioner, for each day after the time, or any extension thereof, fixed for filing such report, making such publication, or furnishing such proof. In case of failure or refusal to pay such penalty, the Commissioner may maintain an action at law to recover the same.

Note:—This is section 15 (b) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 27. Commissioner's Report to Governor.—The Commissioner shall make an annual report to the Governor setting forth:

I. A summary of the state and condition of every corporation and person from whom reports have been received during the preceding year, with such other information in relation to said corporations and persons as in his judgment may be useful.

II. A statement of the corporations and persons under the supervision of the Banking Department, whose business has been closed or taken in possession by the Commissioner during the preceding year, with such information relating thereto as he may deem useful.

III. Suggestions of amendments to the laws relating to corporations and persons under the supervision of the Banking Department by which the condition of such corporations and persons may be improved.

IV. The names and compensation of the deputies, examiners, clerks, and other employees of the Banking Department during the preceding year, the whole amount of the receipts and expenditures of the department during such year, and the method and basis of assessing such expenditures adopted by the Commissioner under the provisions of this act.

Note:—This is section 16 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 28. Failure to Pay in Capital or Exercise Powers.—When any corporation under the supervision of the Banking Department: (a) has not paid in the capital as required by law; (b) has not in any manner exercised the powers conferred upon it by its letters patent within two years after the issuance thereof; or (c) has failed to exercise its corporate privileges for two years after having been liquidated, such corporation shall be returned by the Commissioner to the Attorney General, who shall proceed by quo warranto against such corporation, to the end that it may be ousted from its charter rights, and its corporate privileges be declared null and void.

Note:—This is section 17 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 29. Violation of Charter.—Whenever it shall appear to the Commissioner, from any report of condition of any corporation subject to the supervision of the Banking Department, or from any examination made by him of the condition of the affairs of such corporation, that such corporation has committed any violation of its charter, he shall, by an order under his hand and seal of office, direct the discontinuance of such illegal practice, and direct strict conformity with the provisions of the charter; and whenever any such corporation shall refuse or neglect to comply with any such order, the Commissioner shall communicate the facts to the Attorney General, who shall thereupon institute such proceedings as the nature of the case may require for appropriate relief or correction, or may proceed by quo warranto for forfeiture of the charter.

The court before which such proceedings shall be instituted shall have power to grant such orders, and, in its discretion, from time to time, modify or revoke the same, and to grant such relief and render such judgment as the facts or evidence in the case and the situation of the parties, and the interests involved shall require; or if it shall appear to the said court that the interests of the public so require, shall decree a dissolution of such corporation and distribution of its effects.

Note:—This is section 18 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 30. Jurisdiction of Courts.—Whenever it shall become the right or duty of the Attorney General to proceed against any corporation or person under the supervision of the Banking Department, pursuant to the provisions of this act, he may, in his discretion, proceed either in the court of common pleas of Dauphin county or in the court of common pleas of the county where the banking house or other place of business of such corporation or person is located.

Note:—This is section 19 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 31. Orders by Commissioner.—Whenever it shall appear to the Commissioner that any corporation or person under the supervision of the Banking Department has violated any provision of this act or any law regulating the business of such corporation or person, or is conducting business in an unauthorized or unsafe manner, or that any such corporation has an impairment of capital, the Commissioner may issue an order, under his hand and seal of office, directing such corporation or person to discontinue such violation of law or such unauthorized or unsafe practices, or directing such corporation to make good, within a time, of not less than thirty days after notice, to be fixed by the Commissioner, any impairment or deficiency of capital.

Note:—This is section 20 of the Banking Department Act of 1919, except that time for making good impairment of capital has been changed from sixty to thirty days, and the phraseology slightly revised.

Section 32. Power of Commissioner to Take Possession.—The Commissioner may, after hearing had upon notice given, with the approval and consent of the Attorney General, take possession of the business and property of any corporation or person subject to the supervision of the Banking Department, whenever it shall appear to him that such corporation or person:

I. Has violated any law regulating its or his business, and has persisted in such violation in disregard of an order duly made by the Commissioner;

II. Is conducting business in an unauthorized or unsafe manner, and has persisted in disregard of an order duly made by the Commissioner;

III. Is an unsafe or unsound condition to continue business: Provided, in such case, That the Commissioner may forthwith, without such hearing and consent of the Attorney General, take possession of the business and property of any such corporation or person receiving moneys on deposit, when and if, in his opinion, the protection of depositors and the public requires such peremptory action;

IV. Has an impairment of capital, which has not been restored or made good within the time fixed by order of the commissioner;

V. Has suspended payment of obligations;

VI. Has neglected or refused to comply with the terms of any lawfully issued order of the Commissioner;

VII. Has refused, upon proper demand, to submit the records and affairs of the business to the Commissioner, a deputy commissioner, or any duly authorized examiner or agent of the Banking Department;

VIII. Has refused to be examined upon oath or affirmation regarding such affairs;

IX. Has failed or refused, after thirty days notice, to pay any assessment or charge, as provided in this act; or X. Is in the hands of a receiver appointed by any court or in any bankruptcy proceeding, or of an assignee or trustee or creditors appointed by such corporation or person.

Note:—This is section 21 of the Banking Department Act of 1919, with the addition of clause X.

Section 33. Certificate of Taking Possession.—When the Commissioner shall have duly taken possession of the business and property of a corporation or person as provided in section 32 of this act, he shall forthwith make, under his hand and official seal, a certificate setting forth that he has so taken possession, and shall file such certificate in his office, and cause a certified copy thereof to be filed in the office of the prothonotary, who shall index the same in the judgment index under the name of the corporation or person as defendant and the name of the Commissioner as plaintiff.

From and after the filing of such certified copy in the office of the prothonotary, the Commissioner shall supersede any receiver previously appointed by any court for, or assignee or trustee for creditors appointed by, such corporation or person.

Such superseded receiver, assignee or trustee shall forthwith file his account in the court having jurisdiction thereof, and pay over and deliver to the Commissioner all moneys, securities, assets, and property of such corporation or person in his custody, possession or control. Said court shall allow credit for expenses and for the disbursements properly incurred or made prior to the taking of possession by the Commissioner, and shall allow proper compensation to said receiver, assignee, or trustee, and his counsel, which, when determined, shall be paid out of the funds of said corporation or person in the hands of the Commissioner.

Note:—This is section 22 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 34. Injunction to Restrain Commissioner.—Whenever the Commissioner takes possession of the property and business of any corporation or person, such corporation or person may, at any time within ten days, apply to the court for an order requiring the Commissioner to show cause why he should not be enjoined from continuing such possession. The Commissioner may be served personally, wherever found within the state, by leaving a copy with the deputy in charge of his office, or by serving the special deputy appointed by him in such proceeding. At the hearing, a copy, certified by the Commissioner, of any report of a duly instituted examination of such corporation or person shall be prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated; and if, from such report or reports or other evidence, there shall appear to be just cause for the taking and continuing of possession by the Commissioner, he shall not be enjoined, unless such report or reports or other evidence shall be overcome by proper proof produced by such corporation or person, in which event the court shall direct the Commissioner to refrain from further proceedings and to surrender such possession.

Note:—This is section 23 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 35. Special Agents and Assistants.—The Commissioner may, by the certificate of taking possession provided for in section 33 of this act, or by a subsequent certificate in like manner made and filed, appoint one or more special deputies as agent or agents to assist him in continuing or liquidating the business and affairs of any corporation or person in his possession. He may, from time to time, delegate to such special deputy or deputies such duties connected with such continuation or liquidation as he may deem proper. He may employ such expert assistants, and may retain such of the officers and employees of such corporation or person, as he may deem necessary in the continuation of the business or the liquidation and distribution of the assets. He shall require such security as he may deem proper from his agents and assistants appointed pursuant to the provisions of this section.

Note:—This is section 24 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 36. Notice to Parties Holding Assets.—When the Commissioner shall have taken possession of the property and business of any such corporation or person, he shall forthwith give notice in writing of such fact to all corporations and persons holding any assets thereof. No one having such notice or actual knowledge that the Commissioner has so taken possession, shall have a lien or charge against any of the assets of such corporation or person for any payment, advance, or clearance thereafter made or liability thereafter incurred.

Note:—This is section 25 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 37. Inventory of Assets.—After the Commissioner has taken possession as aforesaid, he shall make, or cause to be made, a complete inventory of the assets of such corporation or person, which inventory shall be verified by oath or affirmation, and shall forthwith file such inventory in his office.

Note:—This is section 26 of the Banking Department Act of 1919, revised by striking out, after "affirmation," the words, "and certified by an executive officer in the case of a corporation or association, by a member of the firm in the case of a partnership, and by an individual banker in person."

Section 38. Suspension or Continuance of Business.—The Commissioner is authorized, upon taking possession of the property and business of such corporation or person, to continue or suspend the business for such period as he may deem necessary to enable him to determine whether to liquidate the affairs of such corporation or person, and, during such period, to take such action as in his judgment is necessary to conserve the assets and business.

Note:—This is section 27 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 39. Surrender of Possession by Commissioner.—The Commissioner may, upon conditions approved by him, surrender possession for the purpose of permitting such corporation or person to resume business, to sell or convey its or his property and franchises, or to merge or consolidate its or his business with that of another corporation or person in accordance with the laws of this commonwealth; but he shall not authorize any decrease of capital stock by a corporation except upon compliance with the provisions of section 80 of this Act.

Whenever the Commissioner shall surrender possession under the provisions of this section, he shall forthwith issue an order, under his official seal, authorizing such corporation or person to resume business, to sell or convey its or his property and franchises, or to merge or consolidate as aforesaid, and shall file said order in his office, and cause a certified copy thereof to be filed in the office of the prothonotary, who shall thereupon cause the entries upon the judgment index made pursuant to section 36 of this act to be cancelled.

Note:—This is section 28 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 40. Status of Commissioner as Receiver.—Except as herein otherwise provided, the Commissioner shall, when he has taken possession of the business and property of a corporation or person, have all the rights, powers, and duties of a receiver appointed by any court of equity in this commonwealth; and he shall be vested, in his official capacity, with all the property of such corporation or person, including debts due, liens or securities therefor, and rights of action or redemption.

He shall be the representative of the creditors of the corporation or person, and entitled, as such, to have vacated and set aside, for the benefit of the creditors, any judgment, execution, attachment, sequestration, payment, pledge, assignment, transfer, conveyance, or incumbrance, which could have been avoided by the creditors or any of them, or by which it is attempted to give any creditor unlawful preference over another.

He may, with leave of court obtained on petition after notice to all creditors of whom he has knowledge, surrender to the corporation or person any assets, including choses in action, whether the subject of pending proceedings or not, which are burdensome and of no advantage to creditors.

Note:—This is section 29 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 41. Power of Court to Make and Enforce Orders.—The court having jurisdiction shall have power to make and enforce any and all orders necessary and appropriate to enable the Commissioner to discharge his duties in connection with the business, property, and affairs of any corporation or person taken into possession by the Commissioner under the provisions of this act.

Note:—This is section 30 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 42. Continuance of Possession; Exceptions.—When the Commissioner shall have duly taken possession of the business and property of a corporation or person as provided in section 32 of this act, he shall hold such possession until the affairs of such corporation or person have been liquidated by him, unless:

I. He shall have been directed by order of court to surrender such possession pursuant to the provisions of section 34 of this act;

II. He shall have permitted a resumption of business, or a sale or conveyance of property and franchises, or a merger or consolidation, pursuant to the provisions of section 39 of this act;

III. The stockholders of such corporation, after payment of all creditors in full, shall have elected a trustee or trustees to continue the liquidation of such corporation, or the court shall have appointed such trustee or trustees, pursuant to the provisions of section 61 of this act, and such trustee or trustees shall be duly qualified to take possession of the remaining assets of such corporation; or

IV. The depositors and other creditors of such person and the expenses of such liquidation shall have been paid in full.

Note:—This is section 31 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 43. Recording Certificate; Sales.

(a) Recording Certificate of Possession or Surrender.—When the Commissioner has taken possession of the business and property of a corporation or person, he shall, if there be any real property, file in the office of the recorder of deeds in each county of this state, or with the proper official in any other state or country, where any of such real property shall be situated, a certified copy of the certificate required by section 33 of this act, which copy shall be recorded in the deed book, and indexed in the grantor's index in the name of such corporation or person and in the grantee's index in the name of the Commissioner, and shall also be registered with the proper authority empowered to keep a register of real estate, if any there be. And when the Commissioner has surrendered possession of the business and property of a corporation or person, he shall in the same manner file a certified copy of the order provided for by section 39 of this act, which shall be in like manner recorded, and shall be indexed in the name of the Commissioner as grantor and in the name of such corporation or person as grantee, and shall also be registered as aforesaid:

Note:—This is section 32 (a) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

(b) Sales of Real and Personal Property.—The Commissioner may sell at public sale any or all of the real and personal property of such corporation or person without any order of court. He may, with leave of court, sell either real or personal property at private sale. At least ten days notice of any petition for leave to sell at private sale shall be given to all stockholders of such corporation, or to such person, and to all creditors known to the Commissioner; and such notice shall also be advertised at least once in a newspaper in the county where the banking house or other place of business is located, and, when the land is situated in a different county, at least once in a newspaper published in the latter county.

Note:—This is section 32 (b) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

(c) Sales of Real Estate Outside of the County.—When any real property of such corporation or person is situated in a county other than that where the banking house or other place of business is located, a petition for leave to sell such property at private sale shall be filed in the court having jurisdiction of the liquidation proceedings, which court, if satisfied of the propriety of such sale, shall make an order or decree authorizing the Commissioner to sell such real property or so much thereof as the court may designate. Thereupon it shall be the duty of the court of common pleas of the county wherein the real property so designated is situated, on petition of the Commissioner, to make an order for the sale of said property or so much thereof as the court having jurisdiction of the liquidation proceedings shall have designated; and the Commissioner shall in all cases make a return of the sale of the court of the county in which the real property is situated. If the same be approved by said court, it shall be confirmed, and a certified copy of the return and of the decree of confirmation shall be filed in the court having jurisdiction of the liquidation proceedings.

Note:—This is section 32 (c) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

(d) Sale of Listed Securities.—Listed securities may be sold on the stock exchange, with leave of court obtained on petition of the Commissioner, at such time or times, and in such manner, as may be determined by the court. No notice to creditors of such petition shall be necessary unless required by the court.

Note:—This is section 32 (d) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

(e) Effect of Sale upon Liens.—When any real property of such corporation or person is subject to liens which under the laws of this commonwealth would be discharged by a judicial sale, the same shall not be affected by a sale by the Commissioner unless such sale be made pursuant to an order by court directing that liens be discharged thereby and after notice to all creditors having or claiming liens; and, in such event, the proceeds of the sale shall take the place of the property sold, and be distributed to the parties entitled thereto.

If such real property is situated in a county other than where the banking house or other place of business is located, a petition for leave to sell discharged of liens shall be filed in the court having jurisdiction of the liquidation proceedings, which court, if satisfied of the propriety of such sale, shall make an order or decree authorizing the same; and thereupon it shall be the duty of the court of common pleas of the county where such property is situated to make an order for the sale thereof, discharged of liens. Return of such sale shall be made to the latter court. If the sale be approved by that court, it shall be confirmed, and a certified copy of the return and of the decree of confirmation shall be filed in the court having jurisdiction of the liquidation proceedings, which court shall also make distribution of the proceeds of such sale to the parties entitled thereto.

Note:—This is section 32 (e) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 44. Execution of Deeds and Documents.—The Commissioner may execute, acknowledge, and deliver any and all deeds, assignments, bills of sale, releases, extensions, satisfactions, and other instruments necessary and proper to effectuate any sale, lease, or transfer of real or personal property, or to carry into effect any power conferred or duly imposed upon him by this act or by order of court. Any instrument executed pursuant to the authority hereby given shall be as valid and effectual for all purposes as though the same had been executed by the officers of such corporation by authority of its board of directors, or by such person individually.

Note:—This is section 33 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 45. Compromises.—The Commissioner may, with leave of court, compound or compromise any debt or claim due to the corporation or person, and discontinue any action or other proceeding pending therefor, if done in good faith and after proper inquiry; and, upon payment of the amount due, may require all mortgages, conditional contracts, pledges and liens, of or upon any real or personal property of such corporation or person, to be satisfied, cancelled, or assigned to him, as he may deem best, or he may sell the property subject thereto.

Note:—This is section 34 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 46. Actions and Suits.—For the purpose of executing any of the powers and performing any of the duties hereby conferred and imposed upon him, the Commissioner may, in the name of the corporation or person, prosecute and defend any and all actions and proceedings at law, in equity, or otherwise, pending at the time when the Commissioner takes possession of the business and property of such corporation or person.

He may, by bill of discovery or other legal or equitable proceeding, obtain information of, and sue for and recover, any assets, debts, or damages, which such corporation or person might sue for and recover, or which any of the creditors might make available for the payment of their claims.

He may, at any time while he is in possession of the property and business of a corporation, institute and maintain against the directors, trustees, managers, or officers, any action or proceeding which is vested in such corporation or in the stockholders or creditors thereof.

He shall be liable to suit, in his representative capacity, by any person seeking to recover specific property, if such property could have been recovered as against the creditors of the corporation or person levying an execution thereon.

Note:—This is section 35 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 47. Judgments Not to Be Liens; Stay of Executions.—A lien shall not attach to any of the property or assets of the corporation or person by reason of the entry of any judgment against such corporation or person after the Commissioner has taken possession of its or his property and business and filed a certificate as required by section 33 of this act, and so long as such possession continues.

During such time, no execution or attachment shall issue against such corporation or person, nor shall any pending execution or attachment be proceeded with, except by special leave of the court.

Note:—This is section 36 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 48. Enforcement of Individual Liability of Stockholders.—Whenever the stockholders of a corporation whereof the Commissioner shall have taken possession are liable in double the amount of the value of the stock held by them, and the Commissioner has determined from his examination of the affairs of the corporation that the reasonable value of its assets is not sufficient to pay its creditors in full, he may enforce the individual liability of such stockholders to such extent as may be necessary.

If he determines to enforce such liability, he shall make demand in writing upon such stockholders by causing the same to be mailed by registered mail to the respective stockholders at their last known places of address as the same appear on the stock ledger of the corporation, or at their last known addresses if no addresses appear in such ledger. Such demand shall state the total amount assessed by the Commissioner against the stockholders, and the pro rata share assessed against the particular stockholder addressed, and the total sum to be paid by such stockholder. The demand shall also fix a date, not less than thirty days after the date of such demand, on which the stockholders shall be required to pay such assessment to the Commissioner.

If any stockholder shall fail or refuse to pay such assessment within such time, the Commissioner shall have a cause of action either at law or in equity against such stockholder, either severally or jointly with other stockholders for the amount of such assessment, together with interest from the date when the same was due and payable. In any such action, the written statement of the Commissioner, under his hand and seal of office, reciting his determination to enforce the individual liability, or any part thereof, of such stockholders, and setting forth the value of the assets of the corporation and its liabilities, as determined by him after examination and investigation, shall be prima facie evidence of such facts as therein stated.

Note:—This is section 37 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 49. Inventory and Appraisalment; Statement of Liabilities.—When the Commissioner has determined to liquidate the affairs of any such corporation or person, he shall forthwith cause an inventory and appraisalment of the assets of such corporation or person, under oath or affirmation, to be made in duplicate by two disinterested appraisers chosen by him, and shall file such inventories and appraisalments, accompanied by a complete statement, certified by him, of the liabilities of such corporation or person so far as he has been able to ascertain the same, one in his office and the other in the office of the prothonotary.

Note:—This is section 38 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 50. Procedure as to Property in Safe-Deposit.—After taking possession as aforesaid, the Commissioner may give written notice to anyone claiming, or appearing on the books of the corporation or person, to be owner of any personal property left in the possession of such corporation or person as bailee or depositary for hire, or the lessee of any safe, vault, or box, notifying such bailor or lessee to remove all such personal property within a period of not less than sixty days.

At the expiration of such period, if such property has not been removed, the Commissioner may proceed as the corporation or person might have proceeded as provided in the contract of bailment or lease, or, at his option, may cause any such safe, vault, or box to be opened in his presence or the presence of his special deputy, and of a notary public not an officer or employee of the corporation or person or of the Banking Department, and the contents, if any, of such safe, vault or box shall be sealed and marked by such notary with the name and address of the bailor or lessee in whose name such safe, vault, or box stands upon the books of the corporation, or person, and a list of the property therein shall be attached thereto. Such package, so sealed and addressed, shall be removed by the Commissioner to his office, and there preserved until delivered to the owner or otherwise disposed of in accordance with law.

After the service or mailing of the notice as aforesaid, the contract of bailment or leasing, if any, shall cease and determine upon the date for removal fixed by said notice, and the amount of unearned rent or charges, if any, paid by the bailor or lessee, shall become a debt of the corporation or person. All contracts of bailment or lease, such as aforesaid, made after the date of the approval of this act, shall be subject to the provisions of this section.

Section 51. Trust Funds.

(a) Taking Possession by Commissioner.—Whenever the Commissioner takes possession of the business and property of a corporation or person in accordance with the provisions of this act, he shall also take possession of all funds, property, and investments held by such corporation or person in any fiduciary capacity, but shall keep the same separate and apart from the assets thereof.

Note:—This is section 40 (a) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

(b) Substituted Fiduciaries.—Upon determining to liquidate the affairs of such corporation or person, the Commissioner shall forthwith give written notice to all parties interested in any such funds, property, or investments held in a fiduciary capacity, so far as such notice is practicable, requiring them within thirty days to apply to the proper court or official for the appointment of substituted fiduciaries to take the place of such corporation or person. On the failure or neglect of the parties so notified to make such application within the time designated, or in case the parties in interest can not be notified, the Commissioner shall himself apply for such appointment of substituted fiduciaries.

Note:—This is section 40 (b) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

(c) Settlement without Accounting.—In any instance where there shall be no dispute as to the amount or identity of such funds, property, or investments, and all parties in interest are sui juris and so request in writing, the Commissioner may, without the filing of an account, transfer, pay over, and deliver to such substituted fiduciary a receipt and release in full, which shall discharge the Commissioner and such corporation or person from any further liability in the premises.

Note:—This is section 40 (c) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

(d) Jurisdiction of Disputes as to Identity of Trust Fund.—In any instance where there shall be a dispute as to the identity of alleged trust funds, property or investments, either because the same have become or are alleged to have become mingled with other funds, property, or investments, or otherwise, the court having jurisdiction of the liquidation proceedings shall have exclusive jurisdiction to determine such dispute.

Note:—This is section 40 (d) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

(e) Accounting.—In all other instances, the Commissioner shall, with the least possible delay, prepare and file in the courts having jurisdiction thereof the accounts of such corporation or person in such fiduciary capacities, and shall transfer, pay over, and deliver the balances determined upon such accounts to be due in accordance with the orders and decrees of such courts.

Note:—This is section 40 (e) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

(f) Deficiencies and Surcharges.—In any instance where it shall be ascertained by any such court but there is a deficiency in any such trust funds, property, or investments for which such corporation or person is liable, or that such corporation or person is liable to surcharge in respect thereof, the amount thereof shall constitute an unpreferred claim against the general funds in the hands of the Commissioner, and the order or decree of such court shall be conclusive, subject to appeal, as to the amount of such claim. Should the existence or amount of any deficiency or surcharge of the liability of the corporation or person therefor be undetermined at the time of any distribution of such general funds, it shall be the duty of the court ordering such distribution to set apart and withhold from such distribution a sufficient amount to pay the proportionate dividend upon such undetermined claim until the same shall have been finally adjudicated.

Note:—This is section 40 (f) of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 52. Notice to Depositors and Creditors.—When the Commissioner shall have determined to liquidate the affairs of such corporation or person, he shall forthwith give written or printed notice to all depositors to produce to him their deposit or pass books for settlement, stating in such notice the amount which the books of the corporation or person show to be due to each depositor, subject to outstanding checks, and notifying such depositors that, unless a settlement of the deposit or pass books shall show a different amount to be due, or unless a depositor shall, within four months from the date of such notice, make proof, in the manner hereinafter set forth, that the amount due to him differs from the amount as shown by the books of the corporation or person, the amount last mentioned will be conclusive as to the amount of the claim of such depositor, subject, as aforesaid, to any outstanding checks.

The Commissioner shall, at the same time, give written or printed notice to all creditors other than depositors, so far as known to him, to make proof of their claims in the manner hereinafter set forth, within four months from the date of such notice, or be debarred from coming in upon the fund.

He shall also advertise such notices to depositors and other creditors in a newspaper, once a week for four successive weeks.

Note:—This is section 41 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 53. Proof of Claims of Creditors.—No claim other than the claim of a depositor shall be allowed unless the claimant, or someone for him if he cannot do so, shall furnish to the Commissioner a statement of his claim, together with a copy of any book entries pertaining thereto, or any note or other writing evidencing the same, verified by an affidavit in substantially the following form:

"I, (name of claimant), do solemnly swear (or affirm) that the above is a true statement of my claim against (name corporation or person); that there are no credits or allowances against the same except as therein set forth; that I have not directly or indirectly made or entered into any bargain, arrangement, or agreement, express or implied, to take or receive, directly or indirectly, any money, property, or consideration whatever, to or for myself, or to or for any other person, firm, or corporation whatever, other than my dividend as a creditor, and that there is no collateral security for said indebtedness, or any part thereof, held by me or by anyone else, other than as above set forth."

In case the claimant shall be a partnership or corporation, such affidavit shall be made by a member of the partnership or by the treasurer or assistant treasurer of the corporation claimant, and the form thereof shall be modified accordingly.

The provisions of this section shall not apply to the claims of cestuis que trust or others to or against trust funds or properly in the custody, possession, or control of a corporation or person, possession of whose business and property is taken by the Commissioner under the provisions of this act.

Note:—This is section 42 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 54. Proof of Claims of Depositors.—When proofs of claims by depositors are necessary under the provisions of Section 52 of this act, the same shall be in such form as the Commissioner shall prescribe, and shall, on request of any such depositor, be prepared by the special deputy in charge of the affairs of the corporation or person in question, and the affidavits thereto shall be taken by him without charge.

Note:—This is section 43 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 55. Allowance of Claims.—If such claim and affidavit, when required, are in proper form, and if the amount claimed by a depositor or other creditor agrees with the amount shown by the books of the corporation or person, or if, upon consultation with the claimant and such corporation or person, the amount is ascertained to the satisfaction of the Commissioner, the claim shall be allowed if presented within the time limited by the notice as aforesaid, unless objected to in the manner hereinafter provided.

Note:—This is section 44 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 56. Partial or Final Account; Objections.—At the expiration of the time fixed by the notice and advertisement for the presentation of claims prescribed in section 52 of this act, the Commissioner may file a partial or final account, consisting of a statement of receipts and expenditures, together with a list of the claims which have been allowed, and, separately, a list of the claims which have been objected to or are disputed, showing, as to all claimants, the names, addresses, and amounts.

If no account is filed within a year from the time when the Commissioner takes possession, any party interested may petition the court for an order on the Commissioner requiring the filing of an account.

Any account filed by the Commissioner shall be duly verified by him under oath or affirmation. Upon the filing thereof, he shall give written or printed notice, to all the depositors and other creditors known to him of such filing, and that, unless objections shall be filed within thirty days from the date thereof, the same will be confirmed absolutely. He shall also, at the same time, advertise such notice in two newspapers once a week for four successive weeks.

During such period of thirty days, any depositor, other creditor, stockholder, or anyone having any interest, may file in the court objections in writing, to said account or to the allowance of any of said claims, a copy of which objections shall forthwith be served upon the claimant whose claim is objected to, or his counsel, and upon the Commissioner, or his counsel, or the special deputy appointed by him in such proceeding.

Note:—This is section 45 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 57. Distribution.—If, at the expiration of said period of thirty days from the filing of the account, no objections shall have been filed thereto, the same shall be confirmed absolutely, and the Commissioner shall prepare and file a schedule of distribution in accordance with the priorities fixed by law. Said schedule shall be subject to the approval of the court, and in accordance therewith, when so approved, a partial or final dividend, as the case may be, shall be declared and paid by the Commissioner. In case there shall be any disputed claim or any claim to which objection shall have been duly filed, the dividend shall be calculated as if all claims were valid and approved, and, after deducting and setting apart such portion of the dividend as represents claims which are disputed or objected to, the balance shall be distributed among the other claims. If all or any of the claims disputed or objected to shall thereafter be determined to be valid, they shall then receive their portions of such dividend. If all or any of such claims shall be determined to be invalid, the portions of such dividend set apart to them shall be distributed to the valid claims.

Note:—This is section 46 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 58. Conclusiveness of Confirmation and Distribution.—The confirmation of a partial account and distribution thereunder as aforesaid shall be conclusive only as to the funds distributed, and shall not prevent the proof and allowance, out of the fund involved in any subsequent account, of claims not presented in time for allowance out of such previous fund.

Note:—This is section 47 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 59. Hearing and Decision of Matters in Controversy.—If there shall be claims disputed or objected to, or if there shall be objections to the account, the court shall itself, without delay, hear and decide the matters in controversy. The court shall fix a time and place for the hearing, of which three weeks' written notice shall be given to the Commissioner, and to the corporation or person, and to all depositors and other creditors whose claims shall have been filed as aforesaid. Said notice shall also set forth that all parties whose claims are disputed or objected to must appear at said time and place and prove their claims or be debarred from coming in upon the fund for distribution.

Note:—This is section 48 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 60. Expenses to be Paid Out of Fund.—All assessments, charges, and penalties due to the Banking Department by such corporation or person, all expenses of the taking and maintaining possession of the business and property or the continuing of the business by the Commissioner, and all expenses of liquidation under the provisions of this act, shall first be payable out of the funds of such corporation or person, including the Compensation of special deputies, assistants, and others employed by the Commissioner to assist him in such proceedings, the allowance of all such expenses to be subject to the approval of the court.

Note:—This is section 49 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 61. Distribution of Balance; Liquidating Trustees.—If, after the filing and confirmation of the final account of the Commissioner, and the payment of all creditors in full, and the return to stockholders who have paid to the Commissioner the amounts demanded pursuant to section 48 of this act, of their pro rata shares of any such amounts not necessary to pay creditors in full, there shall remain a balance in the hands of the Commissioner, he shall call a meeting of the stockholders by serving written or printed notice upon them at least thirty days before the day fixed for the meeting.

At such meeting, the stockholders shall elect by ballot a trustee or trustees for the purpose of completing the liquidation. A majority of the stock present in person or by proxy shall be necessary to elect. Should the stockholders fail or refuse to elect, the Commissioner or any stockholder may petition the court for the appointment of such a trustee or trustees, who, when appointed, shall give bond to the Commonwealth, in such amount, with surety, and on such conditions, as the court may direct.

When such trustee or trustees have been duly elected or appointed as aforesaid, the Commissioner shall then transfer, convey, and deliver to such trustee or trustees all the assets of the corporation then remaining in his hands. He shall thereupon be discharged from all further liability to such corporation and its creditors, and shall file a certified copy of the proceedings of said stockholders' meeting in his office, and cause a certified copy thereof to be filed in the office of the prothonotary. No powers subject to the supervision of the Banking Department shall thereafter be exercised by such corporation, except by permission of the Commissioner, and after compliance by such corporation with all the requirements of law as to a new corporation desiring to exercise such powers.

Note:—This is section 50 of the Banking Department Act of 1919.

ARTICLE III.—PROVISIONS RELATING TO INCORPORATED BANKS.

Section 62. Requisite Amount of Capital.—No corporation shall be organized under this act to carry on the business of a state bank with a capital of less than two hundred thousand dollars, or to carry on the business of a trust company with a capital of less than three hundred thousand dollars, except that state banks with a capital of not less than fifty thousand dollars and trust companies with a capital of not less than two hundred thousand dollars may, with approval of the Commissioner, be organized in any city, borough or township, the population of which exceeds five thousand inhabitants but does not exceed fifty thousand inhabitants, and except that state banks with a capital of not less than twenty-five thousand dollars and trust companies with a capital of not less than two hundred thousand dollars may, with the approval of the Commissioner, be organized in any borough or township, the population of which is less than five thousand inhabitants.

The population of any city, borough or township shall, for the purposes of this section, be ascertained according to the United States census last preceding the date of the application for incorporation.

Note:—This is founded on the provisions of the National Bank Act (sec. 5138 U. S. Rev. Stat., as amended in 1919), the difference being that under the Federal Act the required capital in places having a population between three thousand and six thousand inhabitants is fifty thousand dollars.

As to state banks, this section takes the place of the first part of section 5 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 400), as amended by section 1 of the act of May 3, 1919 (P. L. 412; 5 Purd. 5341). As to trust companies, a capital of not less than one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars is required for all trust companies by the present law: Proviso to section 1, act of May 9, 1889 (P. L. 159; 4 Purd. 4761; section 2, act of June 27, 1895 (P. L. 399; 2 Purd. 1672).

Section 63. Existing Banks or Trust Companies Having Capital Less than Minimum Required by This Act.—Any state bank or trust company in existence at the date of the approval of this act, the capital of which is less than the minimum required by this act for the incorporation of a state bank or trust company in the city, borough or township where the principal place of business of such state bank or trust company is located, may continue to do business with its present capital: Provided, That it shall not be entitled to any of the benefits of this act unless it shall increase its capital, out of surplus or otherwise, to an amount equal to said minimum in accordance with the provisions of section 79 of this act, or unless it shall credit to the surplus fund at the close of each dividend period one-half of its net earnings until the capital and surplus fund shall together equal twenty-five per cent. more than such minimum; and no such state bank or trust company shall declare, credit or pay any dividends to its stockholders for any dividend period until it shall have increased its capital as aforesaid or made such credit to its surplus fund for that period; and when the capital and surplus fund shall equal twenty-five per cent. more than said minimum as a result of crediting half of the net earnings to the surplus fund as aforesaid, a sufficient portion of the surplus shall be converted into capital by proceedings for increase of capital stock in accordance with section 79 of this act, to make the capital equal to the minimum.

Note:—This new section provides alternative methods by which existing banks having a capital smaller than that required by the Code may comply with the new standard and bring themselves within the benefits of this act.

Section 64. Capital Stock to be Paid in Full.—No charter shall be granted to any state bank or trust company organized under this act until the whole of its capital shall be paid in to the persons named in the certificate of incorporation as the board of directors for the first year, who shall certify such payment to the Commissioner.

Note:—This takes the place of section 9 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 401), which requires only 50 per cent. of the capital to be paid in before a bank commences business, and permits payment of the remainder in monthly installments of at least ten per cent. of the whole amount of the capital.

Section 65. Advertising Capital in Excess of Real Amount.—No bank shall advertise by newspaper, letterhead or in any other manner a larger capital than has actually been paid in; nor shall any bank, after a decrease of its capital stock, continue in any manner to represent or hold out to the public or to its customers that the amount of its capital stock remains as it was before such decrease. Any bank violating the provisions of this section shall be subject to a penalty of one hundred dollars for each day during which such advertising, representation or holding out shall continue, said penalty to be payable to the Commissioner and recoverable by him by action at law.

Note:—This section is new.

Section 66. Par value of Capital Stock.—The capital stock of every bank shall be divided into shares of a par value of not less than fifty dollars each. Any bank whose capital stock is now or hereafter may be divided into shares of a greater par value than fifty dollars may, by vote of a majority of its stockholders, decrease the par value of its shares to any desired amount not less than fifty dollars and correspondingly increase the number of shares: Provided. That the capital stock shall not thereby be increased or decreased.

Note:—The first sentence is derived from section 5 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 400), amended by section 1 of the act of May 3, 1909 (P. L. 412; 5 Purd. 5341). The remainder of the section is founded on section 1 of the act of June 4, 1879 (P. L. 84; 1 Purd. 419), which changes of wording for the purpose of clearness. Trust companies and savings banks having capital stock are included. Section 2 of the act of June 11, 1885 (P. L. 111; 4 Purd. 4829), relating to trust companies, permits the change of par value of stock to one hundred dollars per share.

Section 67. Incorporations.

(a) State Banks and Trust Companies.—A corporation for carrying on the business of a state bank or trust company may be formed, under the provisions of this act, by any number of persons, not less than three, a majority of whom shall be citizens of the United States and bona fide residents of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Note:—This is founded on the first part of section 1 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 399), with the addition of the provision as to citizenship.

The requirements of that act as to articles of association are omitted, since the certificate of incorporation, hereinafter provided for, and the filing and approval of the by-laws, make articles of association superfluous. For the same reason, that part of section 5 of the act of 1876 is omitted, which provides that "no change shall be made in the articles of association by which the rights, remedies or securities of the existing creditors of the association shall be impaired."

Trust companies, which at present are incorporated under the general corporation act of 1874 and its amendments, are hereafter to be organized under this Code in the same manner as state banks.

(b) Savings Banks.—A corporation for the encouragement of saving money, intended to be a savings bank, may be formed under the provisions of this act by any number of persons, not less than fifteen, at least two-thirds of whom shall be citizens of the United States and bona fide residents of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and of the county where the proposed bank is to be located.

Note:—This takes the place of section 1 of the Savings Bank Act of May 20, 1889 (P. L. 246; 1 Purd. 452), increasing the number of incorporators from thirteen to fifteen and adding the requirements as to citizenship. The provisions relating to articles of association are omitted for the reasons stated in the note to clause (a) of this section.

Section 68. Certificate of Incorporation.—The persons desiring to form a corporation under the provisions of this act shall, under their hands, make duplicate certificates of incorporation, which shall specify:

I. Name of the proposed corporation.

II. Location or place of business, particularly designating the county, and the city, borough or township, with the population thereof according to the last preceding United States census, together with the street number or other local designation in the city, borough or township, of the place of business.

III. In the case of a proposed bank having capital stock, the amount of the capital stock, the number of shares into which divided, the par value thereof, and that the same has all been subscribed in good faith, and a statement of all expenses connected with the organization of the bank and the sale of such stock.

IV. The term of existence of the proposed corporation, which may be perpetual.

V. The names, occupations, citizenship, places of residence and post office addresses of the incorporators and unless the corporation is to be a savings bank without capital stock, the number of shares subscribed for by each.

VI. In the case of a proposed bank having capital stock, the number of directors and the names and places of residence of the directors agreed upon for the first year; and in the case of a proposed savings bank without capital stock, a declaration that each incorporator will accept the responsibilities and faithfully discharge the duties of a trustee in such institution when authorized according to the provisions of this act.

VII. A statement that such certificate is made to enable the persons named to form a corporation for banking, trust company, or savings bank purposes under this act.

This certificate shall be acknowledged before any person authorized to take acknowledgments of deeds in this state and the acknowledgment shall be certified and authenticated by the official seal of such person.

Note:—This is founded on section 2 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 399) and part of section 2 of the Savings Bank Act of 1889. In clause II, "township" is substituted for "village" and the provision as to population added. In clause III, the words after "divided" have been added. Clause IV is new. In clause V the word "Occupations" is derived from the Savings Bank Act, the word "citizenship" is new, and "incorporators" and "subscribed for" have been substituted for "shareholders" and "held by." The first part of clause VI is new and the last part is derived from the Savings Bank Act. Clause VII is founded on clause V of the act of 1876.

Acknowledgment before anyone authorized to take acknowledgments of deeds is substituted for acknowledgment before a judge, or notary public. The provision as to filing and recording the certificate and as to certified copies thereof are covered by later sections of this Code.

Section 69. Advertisement of Application for Charter.

—When application shall be made for the incorporation of a bank by filing the duplicate certificates of incorporation with the Commissioners as provided in section 70 of this act, the persons making such application shall forthwith cause a notice thereof to be advertised in two newspapers and shall continue such advertisement, once a week, for three weeks. The notice shall specify the name and style of the proposed corporation, the location, and specific object for which it is to be created and the amount of the capital, except in the case of a proposed savings bank having no capital stock.

Note:—This takes the place of part of section 4 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 400) and of section 5 of the act of 1889 (1 Purd. 453). Provision is made for beginning the advertising when the application is made and continuing it for three weeks only, instead of advertising for three months before making the application, and for publication in the city, borough or township instead of in the county. The provisions of both acts as to the newspapers in which the notice is to be published are covered by section 8 of this act.

The provisions of section 4 of the act of 1876 as to proceedings for renewal of charter and for increase of capital are covered in later sections.

Section 70. Filing Certificate; Payment of Fee and Bonus; Investigation by Commissioner.—The duplicate certificates of incorporation, together with two certified copies of the proposed by-laws of the corporation, which by-laws shall contain proper provisions for their own amendment, shall be filed with the Commissioner for his inspection and approval; and at the same time the incorporators shall pay to the Commissioner a fee of one hundred dollars.

The Commissioner shall thereupon proceed to ascertain whether the provisions of the law have been complied with, and shall also ascertain, from the best sources of information at his command and by such investigation as he may deem necessary:

(a) Whether the name of the proposed corporation is likely to mislead the public as to its character or purpose, or is the same as one already adopted or appropriated by an existing corporation subject to the supervision of the Banking Department, or by its similarity thereto is likely to mislead the public.

(b) Whether the convenience and advantage of the public will be served by the proposed incorporation, and whether the density of the population in the neighborhood designated for the place of business of such proposed corporation and in the surrounding county affords a reasonable promise of adequate support for the enterprise.

(c) Whether the responsibility, character and general fitness for business of the persons named in such certificate are such as to command the confidence of the community and warrant belief that the business of the proposed corporation will be honestly and efficiently conducted in accordance with the intent and purpose of this act.

Note:—The first paragraph takes the place of section 2 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 399) and part of section 2 of the Savings Bank Act of 1889 (1 Purd. 453) providing for the filing of the certificate with the Auditor-General after approval by the Attorney-General. The provision as to by-laws is introduced because the articles of association required by the existing acts have been dispensed with.

The remainder of the section is partly derived from section 3 of the Savings Bank Act (1 Purd. 453) and partly new.

Section 71. Proof of Publication and Payment of Capital; Approval of Certificate by Commissioner.—After completion of the advertising required by section 69 of this act, and upon the receipt by the Commissioner of satisfactory proof of such advertising, the Commissioner, if he shall be satisfied upon the matters enumerated in section 70 of this act and approve the proposed by-laws, shall forthwith so notify the incorporators in writing. If, within thirty days after the giving of such notice, the incorporators shall pay to the State Treasurer such bonus as is or may be prescribed by law, and shall file with the Commissioner the certificate under oath of the persons named in the certificate of incorporation as the board of directors for the first year that the whole of the capital stock has been paid to them, the Commissioner shall forthwith endorse his approval on said duplicate certificates of incorporation and certified copies of the by-laws and shall transmit the same to the Governor.

In all cases, the Commissioner shall approve or disapprove said certificate of incorporation and by-laws within thirty days after the receipt by him of proof of advertisement.

Note:—This new section, with the preceding ones, is intended to enable the Commissioner to make the necessary investigation during the period of advertising, so that, at the end of the period, nothing need remain open except the proofs of advertising and payment of capital. The thirty-day limitation will give any additional time necessary. The permanent records at Harrisburg will remain in the office of the Commissioner, and the duplicates transmitted to the Governor will be returned to the corporation as provided below.

Section 72. Disapproval of Certificate by Commissioner; Appeal.—If the Commissioner shall disapprove a certificate of incorporation or proposed by-laws, he shall forthwith give notice thereof, in writing, stating his objections fully and clearly, to the proposed incorporators, who, if they so desire, may within ten days thereafter appeal from such disapproval to the Governor, who shall hear the said appeal promptly and, within thirty days after hearing, shall decide the matter and certify his decision to the Commissioner. The decision of the Governor shall be final and conclusive and not subject to review, and the Commissioner shall act in accordance therewith.

Note:—Since this Code empowers the Commissioner to approve or disapprove the incorporation of banks, some method of reviewing his action in disapproving an application seems necessary.

Section 73. Issuance of Letters Patent and Transmission of Certificate of Incorporation to Commissioner and to Recorder of Deeds.—The Governor, on receipt of said certificates and copies of by-laws, with the approval of the Commissioner, shall, if he approve the same, endorse on both of said certificates his approval with the date of the letters patent, and shall cause letters patent, under the great seal of the commonwealth, to be issued to the said corporation. The Governor shall thereupon forthwith transmit one of the said certificates of incorporation to the recorder of deeds in and for the county where the principal place of business of the corporation is to be located, shall forward to the corporation, with the letters patent, one of the copies of the by-laws, and shall return the other certificate and the other copy of the by-laws to the Commissioner, who shall file and preserve the same in his office. For the purposes of taxation, it shall be the duty of the Commissioner forthwith to furnish the Auditor-General with a certified copy of said certificate of incorporation.

Note:—This takes the place of section 3 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 400) and section 4 of the Savings Bank Act of 1889 (1 Purd. 453), which provide that the Auditor-General, on receipt of the articles of association with the approval of the Attorney-General, shall certify a copy to the Governor, who shall thereupon issue the letters patent.

The purpose of the transmission of the certificate to the recorder of deeds is shown by the section next following.

Section 74. Recording Certificate and Effect Thereof.—On receipt by said recorder of deeds of the certificate of incorporation and on payment to him by the incorporation of his fees as provided by law in similar cases, he shall forthwith record said certificate and index the same in the same books and in the same manner as charters of other corporations are or may be by law required to be recorded and indexed; and when said certificate has been so recorded, the subscribers thereto and their associates and successors shall be a corporation for the purposes and on the terms named in said certificate, from the date of the letters patent.

Note:—This is modeled on the provisions of section 3 of the General Corporation Act of 1874. It seems proper that the charters of banks as well as those of other corporations should be on record in the county where the business is carried on.

The first part of section 9 of the act of 1889, providing that before any savings bank shall be authorized to receive deposits it shall transmit to the Auditor-General the names and addresses of the officers and trustees and the place where business is to be carried on, is sufficiently covered by the provisions of the previous sections of this Code.

Section 75. Certified Copies of Certificates as Evidence.—Copies of any certificate of incorporation under this act, duly certified by the Commissioner or by the recorder of deeds, and authenticated by the seal of his office, shall be conclusive evidence, in all courts of the commonwealth, of the existence of such corporation and of every other matter or thing which could be probed by the production of the original certificate.

Note:—This is derived from the last part of section 2 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 399), substituting the Commissioner for the Auditor-General, and adding the recorder of deeds.

Section 76. Failure to Organize and Commence Business.—Any bank incorporated under this act that shall not organize and commence business within two years after the issuance of letters patent as provided in section 73 of this act, shall forfeit its rights and privileges as a corporation under this act.

Note:—This is founded on section 7 of the Savings Bank Act of 1889 (1 Purd. 454), substituting two years for one year, to conform to section 28 of this Code which prescribes the procedure to be followed by the Commissioner.

Section 77. Stock.

(a) Certificates of Stock.—All banks having a capital stock are authorized and required to issue certificates of their said stock to all stockholders, properly signed by the president or a vice-president and by the cashier or treasurer or an assistant cashier or treasurer of the bank.

Note:—This is derived from section 4 of the act of April 17, 1872 (P. L. 62; 4 Purd. 4369), which relates to savings banks only.

The act of May 2, 1919 (P. L. 109), amending section 2 of the act of May 28, 1913 (P. L. 378; 5 Purd. 5711), so as to permit trust companies to issue preferred stock, is recommended for repeal, there being no reason apparent to the Commissioners why a banking institution should issue preferred stock.

(b) Transfers of Stock.—The shares of stock of any bank shall be deemed personal property and shall be transferable on the books of the bank in such manner as may be prescribed by the by-laws thereof; and every person to whom stock shall be transferred shall, in proportion to the shares received, succeed to all rights and liabilities of the prior holders thereof subject, however, to the provisions of section 78 of this act relating to individual liability of stockholders.

Note:—This is derived from section 5 of the act of 1876, amended by section 1 of the act of May 3, 1909 (P. L. 412; 5 Purd. 5341), omitting after "by-laws" the words "and articles of association." It covers also a part of Article X of section 10 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 427).

Section 4 of the act of April 17, 1872 (P. L. 62; 4 Purd. 4371), relating to savings banks, provides that "certificates transferred by the party holding the same, or his duly authorized attorney in the presence of the president, secretary or treasurer, shall be a valid and legal transfer of the said stock." This is now left to be regulated by the by-laws.

Section 21 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 405), providing that no stockholder shall sell or transfer his stock, without the consent of a majority of the directors, so long as he is indebted to the bank, and that he shall not be entitled to receive any dividends or profits so long as any liability of his to the bank shall be overdue, is recommended for repeal, as is also the similar provision of Article X, section 10 of the act of 1850. Stock in corporations in general is no longer subject to these restrictions and there seems to be no reason why they should be continued as to banks.

Section 78. Individuality Liability of Stockholders.

(a) In general.—The stockholders of every bank shall be individually responsible, equally and ratably, but not one for the other, for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such bank to the amount of their stock therein, at the par value thereof, in addition to the par value of such shares.

Stockholders who shall have transferred their shares or registered the transfer thereof within thirty days next before the date of the failure of such bank to meet its obligations, or with knowledge of such impending failure, shall be liable to the same extent as if they had made no such transfer, to the extent that the subsequent transferee fails to meet such liabilities; but this provision shall not be construed to affect in any way any recovery which such stockholder might otherwise have against those in whose names such shares are registered at the time of such failure.

Any agreement made by a bank with its depositors, whereby the liability of stockholders imposed by this section shall in any manner be sought to be waived, shall be void.

Note:—The first paragraph is derived from section 5 of the act of 1876, amended by section one of the act of May 3, 1909 (P. L. 412; 5 Purd. 5341). Section 32 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 442), dealing with individual liability in cases of insolvency and the method of enforcement thereof, is covered by section 48 of this Code.

Section 1 of the act of May 11, 1874 (P. L. 135; 1 Purd. 443), imposing double liability on stockholders of "banks, banking companies, saving fund institutions, trust companies, and all other incorporated companies doing the business of banks, or loaning and discounting moneys as such in this commonwealth," has been construed not to apply to trust companies incorporated under the General Corporation Act of 1874 and its supplements, since such companies are not "doing the business of banks." De Haven vs. O'Rourke, 223 Pa. 663, affirming 17 Dist. Rep. 445. The present section is drafted, so as to include all trust companies.

The second paragraph of the clause follows the provisions of section 23 of the Federal Reserve Act of December 23, 1913, except that the period is made thirty days instead of sixty. The last paragraph is new.

(b) Proceedings by Commissioner or Creditors.—In case the Commissioner shall have taken possession of the business and property of a bank pursuant to law, all actions or proceedings to enforce the liability of stockholders under this section shall be taken and prosecuted only by the Commissioner as provided in section 48 of this act, unless the Commissioner shall refuse to take or prosecute such action or proceeding on proper request in writing made by a creditor of the bank, or shall fail or neglect to commence such action or proceeding or to prosecute the same within sixty days after the receipt of such request, in either of which events such action or proceeding may be taken by any creditor of the bank, who shall have recovered a judgment against the bank, execution whereon shall have been returned unsatisfied in whole or in part.

Any action to enforce the liabilities of stockholders under this section must be brought within six years after the cause of action has accrued.

Note:—This clause is new.

Section 11 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 402), relating to the collection of unpaid stock subscriptions, is recommended for repeal except as to banks in existence at the date of approval of this Code. The section can have no application to banks incorporated under the Code, whose capital stock is required to be paid in full before the charter issues; and after the approval of the Code, the section can apply only for a period of five months after the date of incorporation of the last bank under the old law, and for a period of one year from the last increase of capital stock under the old law.

Section 79. Increase of Capital Stock.

(a) In General.—Any bank may, with the approval of the Commissioner, increase its capital stock, from time to time, in accordance with the provisions of this section, but not otherwise, provided a majority of the stockholders shall so determine; but no such increase, unless made from surplus or undivided profits, shall be approved by the Commissioner until the entire amount thereof shall have been subscribed and paid for, or until the corporation, if in existence before the approval of this act, shall have filed a certificate accepting the provisions of this act and of the constitution of the commonwealth, as provided by section 6 of this act.

The stockholders may, by majority vote, direct the sale of stock issued pursuant to such increase for such price per share, not less than par, as they may designate; Provided, That every stockholder shall be entitled to a like option with all other stockholders of taking shares so issued in proportion to his interest in the corporation, and that all moneys thus received, beyond the par value of the shares, shall be applied as directed by the stockholders, who may also direct the sale of options not taken, after a reasonable time shall have been given for electing to take or refuse the same.

Note:—This and the following clauses take the place of the first part of section 10 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 401), which contemplates provisions as to increase of capital in the articles of association, limits the increase to the amount there specified, provides for certification to the Auditor-General, and allows a year for payment.

The general scheme of the present section is the same as that of the general act of February 9, 1901 (P. L. 1; 1 Purd. 808).

The provisions as to issuance of an increase of stock at a price above par is substantially the same as that of section 1 of the act of April 15, 1891 (P. L. 11; 2 Purd. 1947), relating to insurance companies.

Section 2 of the act of June 11, 1885 (P. L. 111; 4 Purd. 4829) provided that trust companies might increase their capital stock "according to the forms prescribed by law," and limited the amount after such increase to two million dollars. This limitation has been impliedly repealed by subsequent legislation relating to corporations in general.

(b) Resolution of Board of Directors.—Any bank desiring to increase its capital stock shall, by resolution of its board of directors, adopted by a majority of the entire number thereof, declare such purpose and thereupon by resolution, similarly adopted, direct that the question of such proposed increase be submitted to the stockholders either at a regular annual meeting or any adjournment thereof, or at a special meeting called for that purpose.

(c) Notice of Stockholders' Meeting.—Notice of any such meeting of stockholders to vote on the question of a proposed increase of capital stock shall be given to all stockholders of record, in writing, at least sixty days before the date of such meeting, and be advertised once a month for two months in one newspaper, the first advertisement to be published at least sixty days before the date of such meeting.

The notice and advertisement shall specify the name and style of the bank, its location, the amount of its capital stock, and the amount of the proposed increase thereof; and if it be proposed to issue the new stock at a price above par, such purpose shall also be specified.

Note:—This is derived partly from the act of 1901 and partly from section 4 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 400). The method of service of the notices and the designation of the newspaper are covered by sections 8 and 9 of this Code.

(d) Conduct of Stockholders' Meeting.—At such meeting, or any adjournment thereof, an election of the stockholders shall be taken for or against such increase, which election shall be conducted in the same manner as is provided by clauses (e) and (f) of section 85 of this act for the holding of elections of directors. The judges of election shall, when the election is closed, count the number of shares voted for and against such increase, and declare whether the holders of a majority of the stock of such bank have consented or refused to consent thereto, and shall make out duplicate returns of said election, stating the number of shares of stock voted for such increase and the number voted against such increase, and subscribe and deliver the same to one of the chief officers of said bank.

Note:—Clause (b) of section 2 of the act of 1901 contains provisions as to judges of election, ballots, proxies, etc. Since these provisions are equally applicable to any election of directors or other stock vote, it seems better to cover them in the later section dealing with those matters.

(e) Certificates and Return.—It shall be the duty of such bank, if the consent to the proposed increase, to file in the office of the Commissioner, within thirty days after the meeting of stockholders, the certificate of the chairman and secretary of said meeting, with a certified copy of the resolutions of the board of directors, and proofs of notice to stockholders and publication in accordance with the provisions of clause (c) of this section.

Note:—This is founded on section 3 of the act of 1901, but substitutes the Commission for the Secretary of the Commonwealth, and ignores the distinctions between annual and special meetings and between actual and authorized increase.

(f) Approval by Commissioner; Bonus.—The Commissioner shall thereupon proceed to ascertain whether the provisions of the law have been complied with and shall also ascertain from the best sources of information at his command and by investigation as he may deem necessary whether the convenience and advantage of the public will be served by the proposed increase of capital stock. If he shall be satisfied on said points, he shall so notify the bank in writing, whereupon the bank shall, within thirty days, furnish to the Commissioner proof satisfactory to him that the amount of such increase of capital stock, if issued for cash, has been actually paid in, or, if such increase be in the nature of a stock dividend, that it is justified by the surplus or undivided profits of the bank. On receipt of such proof, the Commissioner shall endorse his approval on said certificate of the chairman and secretary and shall notify the bank thereof, whereupon the bank shall forthwith pay to the State Treasurer such bonus on said increase as is or may be prescribed by law.

For the purposes of taxation, it shall be the duty of the Commissioner, at the same time he notifies the bank of his approval, to furnish the Auditor-General with a certified copy of the return of the cashier or treasurer of the bank.

Note:—This clause is new.

(g) Pending Proceedings.—Any proceeding for increase of capital stock, begun under existing law prior to, and not completed at the date of approval of this act, shall be consummated under the provisions of the law existing prior to the approval of this act.

Note:—This takes the place of the first proviso to section 4 of the act of 1901.

Section 80. Decrease of Capital Stock.

(a) In General.—Any bank may, with the approval of the Commissioner, decrease its capital stock from time to time, in accordance with the provisions of this section, but not otherwise, either by reducing the number of its shares or by reducing the par value of each share or by both methods, to any sum not below the minimum required by law for such bank, provided a majority of the stockholders shall so determine, and provided that the liability of the stockholders for the contracts, debts or engagements of the bank for which they are liable at the time when such decrease is made shall continue for one year thereafter.

No such decrease shall be approved by the Commissioner until the corporation, if in existence before the approval of this act, shall have filed a certificate accepting the provisions of this act and of the constitution of the commonwealth, as provided by section 6 of this act.

Note:—This follows the form of clause (a) of section 79, relating to increase of capital stock, and takes the place of part of section 10 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 402), section 1 of the act of June 11, 1879, (P. L. 133; 1 Purd. 417) and section 1 of the act of June 22, 1883 (P. L. 155; 1 Purd. 402).

The last part of the first paragraph has been changed by striking out, after "provided that," the words "no such decrease shall affect or destroy," and by adding at the end of the sentence the words "shall continue for one year thereafter."

The act of 1876 requires a vote of two-thirds of the stockholders but the later acts require a majority only. The act of 1883 provides "that for all deposits received by banking corporations after such decrease, the stockholders shall only be liable for the indebtedness of such banking company as the charter provides." The necessity for re-enacting this provision is not apparent.

(b) Resolutions of Board of Directors; Stockholders' meeting.—The procedure for decrease of capital stock, so far as relates to the resolution of the board of directors declaring the purpose, the resolution directing that the question be submitted to the stockholders, the notice of the stockholders' meeting and the conduct of the meeting, shall be the same as is prescribed by clauses (b), (c) and (d) of section 79 of this act, relating to increase of capital stock.

Note:—This takes the place of sections 3 and 4 of the act of June 11, 1879 (P. L. 133; 1 Purd. 418) and Article III of section 10 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 423).

(c) Certificate; Approval by Commissioner.—It shall be the duty of such bank, if consent is given to the proposed decrease, to file in the office of the Commissioner, within thirty days after the meeting of stockholders, the certificate of the chairman and secretary of said meeting, with a certified copy of the resolutions of the board of directors and proofs of notice to stockholders.

The Commissioner shall thereupon proceed to ascertain whether the provisions of the law have been complied with and shall also ascertain from the best sources of information at his command whether the interests of depositors or other creditors of such bank, or of the public, will be injuriously affected by the proposed decrease of capital stock. If he shall be satisfied upon said points, he shall endorse his approval on said certificate of the chairman and secretary and shall notify the bank thereof.

Note:—The first paragraph is founded in part on section 5 of the act of 1879 (1 Purd. 418). The Commissioner is substituted for the Secretary of the Commonwealth and the provisions as to proofs of notice and approval by the Commissioner are new.

The second paragraph corresponds to clause (f) of section 79 of this Code.

(d) Notice of Approval by Commissioner; Return; Actual Decrease.—Upon notification by the Commissioner that such decrease has been approved by him, and upon the actual making of such decrease, it shall be the duty of the president and the cashier or treasurer of the bank, within thirty days thereafter, to make a return to the Commissioner, under oath, of the amount of such decrease; and in case of neglect or omission so to do, such decrease shall be void.

The Commissioner shall cause said return to be recorded in a book kept for that purpose and shall forthwith furnish a certified copy of the same to the Auditor-General; and thereupon, the directors of such bank shall alter and change the number or the par value of the shares of stock thereof, or both, to conform to the decrease and shall issue new certificates of stock representing the decreased number of shares or the decreased par value, or both, signed by the proper officers of the bank, and deliver the same to the shareholders entitled thereto, on the surrender of their former stock certificates, which shall be cancelled by said officers, before the payment of any dividends declared after such decrease.

Note:—This takes the place of part of section 5 of the act of 1879 (1 Purd. 418), with some changes of wording and the substitution of the Commissioner for the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Section 2 of the act of June 22, 1883 (P. L. 155; 1 Purd. 402), provides that when stock certificates have been issued subject to assessment for unpaid portions of the subscription price, the bank may decrease its capital to the amount paid in and issue new certificates, full paid and non-assessable; but that no bank shall so decrease its capital to less than $200,000, nor any trust company or savings institution to less than $50,000. This cannot apply to banks incorporated under this Code, since their entire capital stock must be paid in before they are chartered; but its repeal should be so qualified as not to apply to banks in process of organization at the date of approval of the act.

(e) Excess of Capital Created by Decrease of Stock.—Any excess of capital created by a decrease of the capital stock of a bank in accordance with the provisions of this section shall forthwith be transferred to the surplus fund of the bank or, with the written approval of the Commissioner, may be returned to the stockholders in proportion to their holdings.

Note:—This clause is new.

(f) Pending Proceedings.—Any proceeding for decrease of capital stock, begun under existing law prior to, and not completed at the date of approval of this act, shall be consummated under the provisions of the law existing prior to the approval of this act.

Note:—This conforms to clause (g) of section 79 of this Code, relating to increase of capital stock.

Section 18. Corporate Powers in General.—A bank organized under the provisions of this act shall, from the date of the letters patent, issued as provided in section 73 of this act, be a body corporate; but it shall transact no business, except such as may be incidental to its organization, until the recording of its certificate of incorporation in the office of the recorder of deeds as provided in section 74 of this act.

It shall have power:

(a) To adopt a corporate seal and have succession by the name designated in its certificate of incorporation perpetually or for the term limited in said certificate, from the date of the letters patent, unless dissolved as provided by law.

(b) To contract, sue and be sued, complain, prosecute and defend actions and suits as fully as a natural person; and process against such corporation shall be served in the same manner as process against corporations of this commonwealth in general is or may be required by law to be served.

(c) To exercise under this act the powers of a state bank, a trust company or a savings bank, as specified in the certificate of incorporation, but shall not carry on any kind of business not so specified.

Note:—This section deals with the general powers common to all corporations under the act—what may be designated as "corporate powers" as distinguished from "banking powers." The section is founded on the first part of section 6 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 400) and the first part of section 6 of the Savings Bank Act of 1889 (1 Purd. 453). The wording has been changed, reference to the articles of association has been omitted, the method of service of process has been made uniform with that for other corporations, and those parts of the act of 1876 as to powers of the directors and the place where business is to be transacted have been transferred to other sections.

The enumeration of the powers of banks as such in the act of 1876 and of the powers of savings banks in the act of 1889 are covered by Articles IV and V of this Code.

The present section provides for either a perpetual or a limited charter and includes the general corporate powers of trust companies and savings banks as well as state banks. Clause (c), so far as it provides for the carrying on of the kind of business specified in the certificate of incorporation, is new.

Section 82. Place of Business.

(a) In General.—No bank shall transact any banking or trust company business except at the place designated in its certificate of incorporation and at such branch or branches as may lawfully be established in accordance with the provisions of section 83 of this act, unless such place of business shall be lawfully changed in the manner hereinafter set forth.

Note:—This takes the place of the last part of section 8 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 400), which provides that the usual business of the bank shall be transacted at an office or banking house in the place specified in the certificate of association.

(b) Change of Place of Business.—Any bank may, by resolution of its board of directors, remove the location of its principal place of business to any other place in the same city, borough or township, upon filing with the Commissioner a certified copy of such resolution and, if the bank was in existence before the approval of this act, a certificate accepting the provisions of section 6 of this act.

Any bank may, with the consent of the Commissioner, remove the location of its principal place of business to any other place within the same county, but outside the city, borough or township, by the vote of the holders of two-thirds of the stock of such bank at a meeting of stockholders called for the purpose, thirty days' notice of which meeting and of the purpose thereof shall be given to all stockholders. A certified copy of the minutes of such meeting, with proof of the notice thereof and a certificate accepting the provisions of this act and of the constitution of the commonwealth as aforesaid, shall be filed with the Commissioner; and the change of location shall not be made until the Commissioner shall be satisfied that such change will serve the convenience and advantage of the public, that the density of the population in the neighborhood designated for the new place of business for such bank and in the surrounding country affords a reasonable promise of adequate support for the enterprise, and that the capital of the bank equals or exceeds the minimum capital required by law for the incorporation of a new bank located in the place to which the place of business is proposed to be removed, or until the Commissioner shall have issued his certificate of approval of such removal.

When any change of location of place of business of a bank is made under the provisions of this clause, the Commissioner shall forthwith notify the Auditor-General thereof.

Note:—This clause is new. Section 10 of the Savings Bank Act (1 Purd. 454), authorizes change of location within the limits of the city or town with the written approval of the Auditor-General, and permits the sale of the old property and the purchase of the new one.

The second paragraph is founded on section 2 of the Act of Congress of May 1, 1886, relating to national banks, and covering change of name as well as change of place of business. The removal there provided for is to any place in the same state, not more than thirty miles distant.

Change of name is covered in this Code by the section relating to amendments of the charter in general.

(c) Different Institutions Not to Occupy Same Room.—No two or more of the following corporations or persons, namely, a state bank, a trust company, a savings bank, a co-operative bank, an unincorporated bank, and a national bank, shall do business or be located in the same room or rooms, or in rooms so connected and arranged, as to be to all intents and purposes one banking room: Provided, That the provisions of this clause shall not apply to conditions of occupancy existing at the date of the approval of this act, but that when any material change shall be made in the arrangement of any existing banking room or rooms, of the materiality of which change the Commissioner shall be the sole and final judge, the provisions of this clause shall apply.

Note:—This clause is new. It is recommended by the Commission for obvious reasons connected with examinations by the Department.

Section 83. Branches.

(a) Within the State.—With the approval of the Commissioner whose decision in the matter shall be final, any bank may establish and maintain, in the county in which its principal place of business is located, one or more branches, at which all or any of the kinds of business which may be transacted by such bank at its principal place of business may be carried on; but no bank having capital stock shall be permitted to establish any such branch or branches unless its capital shall at least equal the total minimum capitals that would be required under this act if it and its branch or branches were incorporated as separate banks, or, if the bank was in existence before the approval of this act, until it shall have filed with the Commissioner a certificate accepting the provisions of this act and of the constitution of the commonwealth, as provided by section 6 of this act.

Note:—This takes the place of the act of July 28, 1917 (P. L. 1235), which permits sub-offices or sub-agencies for the purpose only of receiving and paying out moneys, requires daily reports and daily transfer of assets to the main office, and does not permit branch offices for the transaction of the general business of the bank.

Section 50 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 446) prohibited the establishment or maintenance of any branch or agency and imposed as a penalty forfeiture of the charter of the bank and payment, during the period of continuance of any branch or agency, of four times the amount of all taxes chargeable to the bank in the current year.

(b) Outside the State.—With the approval of the Commissioner, whose decision in the matter shall be final, any bank having a combined capital and surplus of one million dollars or more may establish and maintain a branch office or branch offices in one or more places located outside the state of Pennsylvania, either in the United States of America, any territory, possession or dependency thereof, or in any foreign country: Provided, That no such branch shall be established or maintained unless the bank, if in existence before the approval of this act, shall have filed with the Commissioner a certificate accepting the provisions of this act and of the constitution of the commonwealth, as provided by section 6 of this act.

Note:—This clause is new. Section 25 of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended by the act of September 7, 1916, authorizes national banks, having a capital and surplus of one million dollars or more, to apply to the Federal Reserve Board for permission to establish branches in foreign countries or dependencies or insular possessions of the United States.

(c) Penalty for Unauthorized Branches.—Any bank which shall establish or maintain a branch, either within or without the state of Pennsylvania, without the approval of the Commissioner, or in violation of the provisions of this section, shall be subject to a penalty of one hundred dollars for each day during which any such branch shall be open or occupied. Said penalty shall be payable to the Commissioner and, in case of failure or refusal of such bank to pay the same, the Commissioner may maintain an action at law for the recovery thereof.

Note:—This clause is new. The act of 1917 provides no penalty; and the penalty of the act of 1850, set forth in the note to clause (a) of this section, is unduly severe.

(d) Injunction.—In addition to the remedy provided by clause (c) of this section, a court of competent jurisdiction may, on bill filed by the Commissioner, issue an injunction restraining any bank from opening, operating or maintaining a branch without the approval of the Commissioner or in violation of the provisions of this section, and may make such other order or decree as equity and justice may require.

Note:—This new clause provides a remedy which, in some instances, may be more effective than the penalty imposed by the preceding clause.

Section 84. Officers.

(c) In General.—Every bank shall, by its board of directors or trustees, elect annually a president, a vice-president or vice-presidents, a cashier or treasurer, and such other officers as may be prescribed by the by-laws, and shall fix the compensation of all officers, whether members of the board of directors or trustees or not, but not the compensation of the directors as such, and may dismiss any of such officers at pleasure and appoint others to fill vacancies caused by such dismissal or otherwise.

The officers shall exercise such powers and perform such duties as shall be prescribed by the by-laws.

Note:—This takes the place of section 6 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 400), the provisions being extended to trust companies and savings banks. The word "annually" has been inserted and the provision of section 6 as to bonds is covered in clause (d) of this section. The reference to the by-laws and the provision for appointments to fill vacancies other than those caused by dismissal are new.

Section 2 of the act of May 7, 1885 (P. L. 508; 1 Purd. 425), authorizing directors to elect a vice-president and assistant cashier and confer certain powers upon them, with provision for ten days notice in a newspaper of the election of such officers, is recommended for repeal, as are also section 1 of the act of April 13, 1859 (P. L. 613; 1 Purd. 425), relating to salary of Vice-president, and section 15 of the act of March 29, 1851 (P. L. 295; 1 Purd. 425), amended by the act of May 6, 1854 (P. L. 595; 1 Purd. 425 n.), so far as it relates to the election of cashiers and solicitors in Philadelphia.

(b) Eligibility of Cashier or Treasurer; Restrictions on Engaging in Other Business.—No judge of any court of record nor any person holding any office under this commonwealth in the Banking Department, the Treasurer Department or the Auditor-General's Department, nor any person authorized to receive and account for the public moneys of this commonwealth, nor the treasurer of any county, city or other municipal sub-division of this commonwealth, shall be eligible, at the same time, as cashier or treasurer of any bank.

No cashier or treasurer of any bank shall, without the consent of a majority of the board of directors of said bank duly evidenced by resolution recorded upon the minutes, engage in any other profession, business, occupation or calling, either directly or indirectly, than that of the duties appertaining to the office of cashier or treasurer, save that such cashier or treasurer may manage his own real estate or personal property, as heretofore, if such private property be not vested in mercantile, mechanical, manufacturing or mining operations.

If such cashier or treasurer shall, directly or indirectly, engage in any other profession, business, occupation or calling than that of his duties as cashier or treasurer, except as herein provided, without such consent, or shall, directly or indirectly, engage in purchasing and selling on margin stocks or other securities or commodities, he shall forfeit his office and shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, upon conviction whereof he shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars.

Note:—The first paragraph is founded on section 3 of the act of January 27, 1819 (7 Sm. L. 148; 1 Purd. 422), as amended by section 2 of the act of April 18, 1885 (P. L. 258; 1 Purd. 423). The act of 1819 relates to directors as well as cashiers and the act of 1885 permits justices of the peace to be directors. The new wording as to the state departments is substituted for "the accounting or treasury department or in the land offices," and the provision as to treasurers of counties, etc. is new.

The clause is extended to trust companies and savings banks. Section 4 of the act of April 22, 1854 (P. L. 468; 1 Purd. 451), provides that all general laws relating to cashiers of banks shall apply to the cashiers or treasurers of savings institutions.

The second and third paragraphs are founded on part of section 18 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 404), part of Article V of section 10 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 424), as amended by the acts of April 18, 1855 (P. L. 258; 1 Purd. 425), May 7, 1855 (P. L. 208; 1 Purd. 425) and April 18, 1856 (P. L. 403; 1 Purd. 425 n.), and section 64 of the act of March 31,

1860 (P. L. 382). The provisions as to consent of directors are new; the word "mining" has been added; and the provision as to dealing in stocks, etc. on margin has been substituted for "engage in the purchase of stocks."

In the recent case of Solomon v. Meyer, 71 Pa. Superior Ct. 4, it is held that the act of 1860 refers to a general occupation by which one usually gets his living, and not to a single transaction.

(c) Oaths.—Every officer of a bank elected by the stockholders or by the board of directors or trustees shall, within thirty days after his election and before assuming the duties of his office, take an oath or affirmation that he will give the business of the bank his care and attention and, so far as the duty devolves on him, diligently and honestly administer the affairs of the bank, and faithfully perform the duties of his office in accordance with the law, so long as he continues therein; that he will never use the moneys of the bank in his private transactions, nor engage in private financial operations through his office; that he will render true accounts of all his transactions; and that he will not knowingly violate or willingly permit to be violated any of the provisions of law applicable to such bank.

Such oath or affirmation shall be subscribed by the officer making it and immediately transmitted to the Commissioner, by whom it shall be filed.

Note:—This is derived from section 15 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 425), section 18 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 404), relating to the agreement to be entered into by an officer with the bank, and the act of June 3, 1911 (P. L. 652; 7 Purd. 7698), relating to the oath of directors.

(d) Bonds. The officers and employes of every bank, before entering upon the performance of their duties, shall furnish bonds to the bank in such amount as the board of directors shall require, with surety approved by the board of directors, conditioned for the faithful performance of their duties.

The Commissioner shall have power at any time to require any such officer or employe, during the term of his office or employment, to furnish a bond in a greater amount than that required by the board of directors, or with new or additional sureties.

Note:—This clause takes the place of section 13 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 404) and Article V of section 10 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 424), as amended, relating to state banks, and section 14 of the Savings Bank Act of 1889 (1 Purd. 455).

The provisions of the act of 1876 as to articles of agreement are covered in part by clause (c) of this section and the provisions as to approval of bonds by the court and recording in the office of recorder of deeds are omitted. The provisions as to the Commissioner of Banking are new.

Section 85. Directors.

(a) Term of Office; Qualifications.—The affairs of every state bank and trust company shall be managed by not less than five directors, who shall be elected by the stockholders for such term, not exceeding three years, as shall be provided by the by-laws; and such state bank or trust company may provide in its by-laws for the division of its board into two or three classes, and the election thereof at its annual meetings in such manner that the members of one class only shall retire, and their successors be chosen, each year.

One of the directors shall be the president and another the vice-president or one of the vice-presidents.

Every director shall, during his term of service, be a citizen of the United States; and two thirds of the directors shall, during their terms of service, be bona fide residents of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Every director shall own, in his own right, unpledged shares of the capital stock of the corporation having a par value of not less than five hundred dollars; and every person elected as a director, who, after such election shall hypothecate, pledge or cease to be the owner of his own right of the amount of stock aforesaid shall forthwith cease to be a director of the corporation and his office shall be vacant and he shall not be eligible for re-election as a director for a period of one year from the date of the next succeeding annual meeting.

Note:—The provision that directors shall be elected is derived from section 6 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 400), the classification provision being new. The remainder of the clause is founded on part of section 12 of that act (1 Purd. 403), amended by the act of July 19, 1917 (P. L. 1101), which provides that no cashier, clerk or teller shall be eligible as a director and requires a director to own at least ten shares of the stock.

The provision vacating the office in case a director pledges his stock, etc., is new.

Section 15 of the act of March 29, 1851 (P. L. 295; 1 Purd. 425), amended by the act of May 6, 1854 (P. L. 595; 1 Purd. 425 n.), relating to Philadelphia only, requires that one elected as a director shall have been a stockholder for three months.

Section 1 of the act of April 17, 1861 (P. L. 342; 1 Purd. 422) permits the stockholders to fix the number of directors at not less than five nor more than thirteen and provides that when the number is seven or less a majority shall be necessary to constitute a quorum. This may well be left to regulation by the by-laws.

Section 8 of the act of April 18, 1843 (P. L. 311; 1 Purd. 423) provides that directors shall be eligible for only three years out of any four, except that the president shall always be eligible, and provides for removal and fine in quo warranto proceedings by any stockholder.

(b) Powers of Board.—The board of directors shall have power, in any manner not inconsistent with the provisions of this act or with the by-laws, to designate and regulate the manner in which the stock shall be transferred, directors and officers elected or appointed, the property of the bank transferred, and the general business conducted; and all the privileges granted by this act to any bank shall be exercised and enjoyed by the board of directors, except as herein otherwise provided.

Note:—This is derived from the last part of section 6 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 400), with the addition of the provisions as to inconsistency with this act or with the by-laws, and the phrase "except as herein otherwise provided."

(c) Time and Notice of Elections.—The directors of any bank, first elected, shall hold office until their successors shall be elected and qualified.

All subsequent elections of directors shall be held annually at the principal place of business of the bank, on the second Tuesday of January of each year; or within ten days thereafter. Notice of the time and place of holding the annual stockholders' meeting for the election of directors and for action upon such other matters as may be brought before such meeting shall be given, in writing, to the stockholders at least two weeks prior to the date of such meeting.

The directors elected at such meeting shall hold office for such term as is provided by the by-laws and until their successors shall be elected and qualified.

Note:—This takes the place of the first part of section 13 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 403), which provides for election on such days as may be specified in the articles of association. The method of serving notice of the annual meeting is covered by section 9 of this act, advertising being thus eliminated and notice by personal service or registered mail substituted.

The last part of section 13 of the act of 1876, providing for advertisement when the election is not held at the time appointed and for fixing the date of election in the by-laws or by vote of the stockholders, is recommended for repeal as unnecessary.

(d) Filling Vacancies in Board.—Any vacancy in the board of directors, caused by the death, resignation or disqualification of any director, shall be filled by election by a majority of the whole board, and any director so elected shall hold office until the next annual election.

Note:—This takes the place of so much of section 13 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 403), as provides for the filling of vacancies.

(e) Votes at Elections.—In all elections for directors, each stockholder shall be entitled to one vote on each share of stock held by him, and each ballot shall have endorsed thereon the number of shares thereby represented.

No share or shares transferred within thirty days prior to any election for directors shall entitle the holder or holders thereof to vote at such election.

Each stockholder shall be entitled to as many votes as shall equal the number of his shares of stock multiplied by the number of directors to be elected, and may cast all of such votes for a single director or may distribute them among the number to be voted for, or any two or more of them, as he may see fit, which right, when exercised, shall be termed cumulative voting.

Stockholders may vote by proxy, but no proxy shall be received or entitle the holder to vote, unless the same shall bear date and have been executed within two months next preceding the meeting at which such proxy is offered; and no officer or employee of the bank shall act as a proxy.

Note:—This takes the place of section 14 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 403), omitting the provision that "no shareholder whose liability is past due shall be allowed to vote." The clause is derived in part from section 4 of the act of June 11, 1879 (P. L. 133; 1 Purd. 418), relating to decrease of capital stock. The period for transfer has been changed from sixty to thirty days and the limitation of proxies from three months to two months. The provision as to cumulative voting has been made more definite.

The last part of the last paragraph covers the provision of Article V of section 10 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 424), making it unlawful for the president, cashier, teller or clerk of a bank to act as a proxy.

The Commissioners recommend for repeal Article IV of section 10 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 424), providing that stock may not be voted unless held for three months before the election or unless held by the person in whose name it appears absolutely and bona fide, etc., that only females may vote by proxy, etc.; and section 2 of the act of April 17, 1861 (P. L. 342; 1 Purd. 423), providing that stockholders shall have one vote per share up to ten shares, one vote for two shares from ten to twenty, one vote for five shares from twenty to one hundred, and one vote for ten shares above one hundred.

(f) Conduct of Election.—Every election for directors shall be conducted by three judges, stockholders but not directors of the bank, appointed by the board of directors to hold said election, and if one or more of said judges be absent, the judge or judges present shall appoint a person or persons to fill the vacancy or vacancies. The said judges shall respectively take and subscribe an oath or affirmation, before any officer authorized by law to administer the same, well and truly and according to law to conduct such election to the best of their ability.

The bank shall furnish to such judges the stock ledger or a statement of the amount of its capital stock, with the names of the holders thereof and the numbers of shares held by each respectively, which statement shall be signed by the president, cashier or treasurer of the bank, with an affidavit thereto annexed that the same is true and correct to the best of his knowledge and belief.

Such judges shall decide upon the qualifications of voters, and when the election is closed shall determine whether the persons who shall have the greatest number of votes are qualified to be elected directors, and shall decide and declare who are elected directors.

Note:—This follows in general the provisions of Clause (b) of section 2 of the act of February 9, 1901 (P. L. 1; 1 Purd. 808), relating to increase of capital stock by corporations in general.

(g) Eligibility of Directors.—No judge of any court of record, nor any person holding any office under this commonwealth in the Banking Department, the Treasury Department or the Auditor-General's Department, nor any person authorized to receive and account for the public moneys of this commonwealth, nor the treasurer of any county, city, or other municipal subdivision of this commonwealth, shall be eligible, at the same time, as a director of any bank.

Note:—This is derived from section 3 of the act of January 27th, 1819 (7 Sm. L. 148; 1 Purd. 422), which applies to cashiers as well as directors. See the note under Clause (b) of section 84 of this act.

(h) Oaths.—Each director shall, within thirty days after his election, and before assuming the duties of his office, take an oath or affirmation that he will, so far as the duty devolves on him, diligently and honestly administer the affairs of the bank, and will not knowingly violate or willingly permit to be violated, any of the provisions of law applicable to the bank; that he is the owner, in good faith and in his own right, of shares of the capital stock of the bank of a par value of at least five hundred dollars, subscribed by him or standing in his name on the books of the bank, and that said stock is not hypothecated or in any way pledged as security for any loan or debt; and, in case of re-election, that such stock was not hypothecated or in any way pledged as security for any loan or debt during his previous term.

Such oath or affirmation shall be subscribed by the director making it and immediately transmitted to the Commissioner, by whom it shall be filed.

Note:—This is derived from section 15 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 425) and the act of June 3, 1911 (P. L. 653; 7 Purd. 7698), with the addition of the thirty day limitation and the provision as to re-election.

(i) Meetings of Board; Committees.—Within fifteen days after the annual meeting of stockholders, the directors duly qualified shall hold a meeting at which they shall organize and elect such officers as are provided for by the by-laws.

The directors of every bank shall hold a regular meeting at least once each month. They may, by resolution duly adopted, delegate to a committee or committees of their number the powers of the board in regard to the ordinary operations of the business of the bank between the dates of the monthly meetings. All such committees shall keep full minutes of all business transacted by them and shall make full reports of all such transactions at each monthly meeting of the board.

Full reports of all transactions of the bank shall also be rendered by the officers of the bank to the board of directors, as and when the same may be required by the board.

Note:—This new clause is intended to take the place of Article VII of section 10 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 426). The matter of quorum is left to be regulated by the by-laws.

(j) Records.—The books, papers and correspondence, and the funds of every bank shall at all times be subject to the inspection of the directors.

The board of directors shall keep fair and regular entries of their proceedings, in a book provided for that purpose; and on any question, when a director shall require it, the yeas and nays shall be inserted on their minutes, which minutes shall, on demand, be produced to the stockholders, at any general meeting on request of the holders of a majority of the stock represented at the meeting, and shall be subject also, together with the other books and papers, to the inspection of the Commissioner.

Note:—Except for the substitution of the Commissioner instead of the committee of the Legislature, a change from two directors to one in requiring the yeas and nays, and the requirement of a majority vote of stockholders, this is a reenactment of section 20 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 405), which is substantially the same as Article XV of section 10 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 426).

(k) Examinations and reports by board.—The board of directors of every bank shall, at least once in each year, make or cause to be made by at least three of its members or by accountants employed for the purpose, a full examination of the books, papers and affairs of the bank, and the loans and discounts thereof, and particularly the loans and discounts made directly or indirectly to its officers or directors, or for their benefit, or for the benefit of other corporations, partnerships or unincorporated associations of which any officers or directors of the bank are also officers, directors, or members or stockholders having an interest equal to ten per cent. of the capital thereof, or in which they have a beneficial interest as creditors or otherwise, with the special duty of ascertaining the safety and present value of the loans and discounts of the bank and the value of the collateral security, if any, held in connection therewith, and into such other matters as the Commissioner may require. The board of directors shall have power to employ such assistance in making such examinations as they may deem necessary.

As soon as any such examination is completed, a full, written report thereof, signed by the directors or other persons making the same, shall be placed on file in the bank.

Note:—The clause makes compulsory in all banks a practice which is generally followed in well-managed institutions.

(l) Compensation.—Any bank, by vote of the holders of a majority of the stock represented at any annual meeting, or by provision in its by-laws, may allow and pay to its directors compensation for their services as such.

Note:—This is in line with the act of May 17, 1917 (P. L. 228), relating to corporations in general.

Article VI of section 10 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 425), provides: "No director, except the president, shall be entitled to any emolument unless the same shall have been allowed by the stockholders at a general meeting."

(m) List of Stockholders.—The directors of every bank shall cause to be kept, at all times, at the principal place of business of the bank, a full and correct list of the names and residences of the stockholders and the number of shares held by each.

A copy of such list, verified by the president and the cashier or treasurer of the bank, shall at any time be furnished to the Commissioner on demand.

Note:—This is section 15 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 403), with the following changes: The section is extended to all banks; the provision that the list shall be subject to inspection of shareholders, creditors, and officers authorized to assess taxes is omitted as unnecessary with regard to stockholders and tax officers, and undesirable as to creditors; and the requirement as to furnishing a list to the Commissioner is substituted for a provision that a copy shall be sent to the Auditor-General on the first Monday of June of each year.

(n) Statement at Annual Meeting.—At each annual meeting of the stockholders of any bank, the directors shall lay before them a general and particular statement of the affairs of the bank: Provided, That this shall not so be construed as to compel the directors to lay before the stockholders a statement of any private account.

Note:—This is derived from Article IX of section 10 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 427), which also provides that a general meeting of the stockholders shall be held on the first Tuesday of November in each year.

(o) Communications from Banking Department.—Every official communication directed by the Commissioner or by one of his deputies to a bank or to any officer thereof, shall be submitted by the officer receiving it to the board of directors at the next meeting of such board, and shall be duly noted in the minutes of such meeting.

This clause is new.

Section 86. Meetings of Stockholders.

(a) Special Meetings.—The board of directors of any bank, or any twenty stockholders thereof, being together the owners of one-twentieth part of the capital stock, or the holders of a majority of the capital stock, may at any time call a meeting of the stockholders for any purpose relative to the business of the bank, giving at least four weeks' written notice, specifying the time, place and object or objects of such meeting.

Note:—This is derived from Article VIII of section 10 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 427). The method of service of notice is covered by section 9 of this act, advertising being thus eliminated and notice by personal service or registered mail being substituted.

(b) Stock Votes.—Whenever, at any meeting of stockholders of a bank, a stock vote shall be taken on any question, the same shall be controlled by the provisions of clauses (e) and (f) of section 85 of this act, relating to elections of directors, so far as applicable.

Note:—This new clause is framed so as to avoid repetition of the provisions of section 85, clauses (e) and (f), relating to votes, proxies, judges of election, etc.

Section 87. Amendment of Charter.

(a) Procedure.—When any bank shall desire to amend or alter its charter or articles of association, otherwise than by changing the location of its place of business or increasing or decreasing the capital stock, such bank shall proceed in the following manner:

After the adoption of a resolution authorizing such application by a majority of the board of directors, ratified by a vote of a majority of the stockholders at a regular annual meeting or at a special meeting called for the purpose, or the adoption of such resolution by a majority of the trustees or managers, where there are no stockholders, the bank shall give notice of the intention to apply for such amendment by publication once a week for three weeks in two newspapers, setting forth briefly the character and objects of the desired amendment or amendments.

The bank shall prepare duplicate certificates, under its corporate seal, setting forth the character and objects of the desired amendment or amendments, acknowledged by the president and the cashier or treasurer of the bank before any person authorized to take acknowledgments of deeds in this state, which certificates, together with proof of publication of notice as aforesaid, shall then be produced to the Commissioner and there shall be paid to him by the corporation a fee of fifty dollars. The Commissioner shall thereupon examine said certificates and said proof of publication, and if he shall find them to be in proper form, and that such amendment or amendments will be lawful and beneficial and not injurious to the community, and in accord with the purposes of the charter or articles of association, he shall approve thereof and endorse his approval thereon, and transmit the same to the Governor.

The Governor, if he shall approve the same, shall endorse his approval on both of said certificates, with the date of the letters patent, and shall cause letters patent, under the great seal of the commonwealth, reciting said amendment or amendments, to be issued to the bank. The Governor shall thereupon forthwith transmit one of said certificates to the recorder of deeds in and for the county where the principal place of business of the bank is located and shall return the other certificate to the Commissioner, who shall file and preserve the same in his office and shall forthwith transmit to the Auditor-General a certified copy thereof.

On receipt of said recorder of deeds of the certificate of amendment and on payment to him of his fees as provided by law in similar cases, he shall forthwith record said certificate and index the same in the same book and in the same manner as charters of banks are by law required to be recorded and indexed, and shall also note upon the margin of the record of the charter of such bank, if the same be recorded, a reference to the book and page where such certificate of amendment is recorded. When said certificate has been so recorded, the same shall be deemed and taken to be part of the charter or articles of association of the bank, to all intents and purposes, as if the same had originally been made a part thereof.

Note:—This is modeled to some extent on the act of June 13, 1883 (P. L. 122; 1 Purd. 782), relating to amendment of charters of corporations of the second class. The Commissioner has been substituted for the Secretary of the Commonwealth and his approval made necessary. Resolutions of the board of directors and of the stockholders, or of the trustees or managers, are provided for and other changes have been made to bring the clause into conformity with the provisions of this Code relating to incorporation. The provision as to nothing an amendment on the margin of the record of the charter is new.

(b) Method Exclusive; Acceptance of Act and Constitution.—No bank shall be permitted to amend or alter its charter or articles of association, otherwise than by changing the location of its place of business or increasing or decreasing the capital stock, except in the manner provided by clause (a) of this section; and no such amendment or alteration shall be approved by the Commissioner until the bank shall have filed with him a certificate accepting the provisions of this act and of the constitution of the commonwealth, as provided by section 6 of this act.

Note:—This clause is new. The exception of amendments changing location or increasing or decreasing capital stock is made because those subjects are covered by other sections of this Code.

In this connection, it is recommended that the act of April 22, 1903 (P. L. 252; 1 Purd. 784), relating to change of corporate name, be repealed so far as it relates to banks.

Section 83. Merger and Consolidation.

(a) Authority to Merge or Consolidate.—Any state bank or trust company incorporated under this act or accepting the provisions thereof may merge its corporate rights, franchises, powers and privileges, with and into those of any other state bank or trust company so incorporated or accepting, so that by virtue of this act any two or more state banks, any two or more trust companies, or any state bank or state banks and any trust company or trust companies may consolidate and so that all the property, rights, franchises and privileges then by law vested in either or any of such corporations so merged shall be transferred to and vested in the corporation into which such merger shall be made.

Note:—Except for the provisions of clauses (c) and (f), which are new, this section is founded on the act of April 18, 1919 (P. L. 84), relating to electric light, heat and power companies. The act of 1919 follows the provisions of the general act of May 3, 1909 (P. L. 408), as amended by the act of April 29, 1915 (P. L. 205).

The act of May 28, 1913 (P. L. 357) relates to the bonus to be paid when a trust company is merged with another trust company, a bank or a savings institution, but contains the following proviso: "That nothing contained in this act shall be construed to authorize the merger of trust companies with banks, banking companies or savings institutions."

(b) Agreement of Merger and Consolidation.—Said merger or consolidation shall be made under the conditions, provisions and restrictions, and with the powers, herein set forth, namely:

1. The directors of each corporation may enter into a joint agreement, under the corporate seal of each corporation, for the merger and consolidation of said corporations, prescribing the terms and conditions thereof, the mode of carrying the same into effect, the name of the new corporation, the number and names of the directors and other officers thereof and who shall be the first directors and officers and their places of residence, the number of shares of capital stock, the amount or par value of each share and the manner of converting the capital stock of each of said corporations into stock of the new corporation, and how and when directors and officers shall be chosen, with such other details as they shall deem necessary to perfect the said consolidation and merger; but said agreement shall not be effective until the same shall be approved by the stockholders of each corporation in the manner hereinafter provided.

2. Said agreement shall be submitted to the stockholders of each of said corporations, at separate special meetings, of the time, place and object of which respective meetings due notice shall be given by publication in at least one newspaper once a week for two successive weeks before said respective meetings. At said meetings the said agreement shall be considered and a vote of the stockholders on the question of adoption or rejection of said agreement shall be taken by ballot in the manner provided by section 85, clauses (e) and (f), of this act. If a majority in amount of the entire capital stock of each of said corporations shall vote in favor of said agreement, then that fact shall be certified by the cashier or treasurer of each corporation, under the seal thereof, and said certificates, together with said agreement or a copy thereof, shall be filed in the office of the Commissioner.

(c) Examination by Commissioner; Approval or Disapproval.—Upon the filing of said certificates and agreement or copy of agreement as aforesaid, and upon the payment to the Commissioner of a fee of one hundred dollars, the Commissioner shall cause to be made an examination of each corporation to determine whether the interests of the depositors, creditors and stockholders thereof are protected and whether such consolidation and merger is made for legitimate purposes; and his consent to or disapproval of such consolidation and merger shall be based upon such examination. No such consolidation or merger shall be made without the approval of the Commissioner; and if his approval be refused, an appeal may be taken therefrom in the same manner as is provided in section 72 of this act.

(d) Issuance of Letters Patent; Recording of Certificate.—If the Commissioner shall approve such consolidation and merger, he shall forthwith notify each of the merging corporations thereof and transmit to the Governor a copy of the agreement of merger and consolidation with his approval certified thereon. Upon the filing by each of the merging corporations with the Secretary of the Commonwealth of a certificate from the Auditor-General setting forth that all reports required by the Auditor-General have been duly filed and all taxes due the commonwealth have been paid by each of said corporations, and upon the payment to the State Treasurer of a bonus of one-third of one per centum on all the corporate stock of the consolidated corporation in excess of the amount of the capital stock of the constituent corporations upon which the bonus required by law has been theretofore paid, the Governor, if he shall approve, shall issue to the consolidated corporation new letters patent and shall transmit to the recorder of deeds of the county or counties where said corporations have their principal places of business the certificate of approval of the Commissioner, endorsed with the date of the letters patent, which certificate shall be recorded and indexed by said recorder or recorders in the manner provided by section 74 of this act, for the recording and indexing of certificates of incorporation.

(e) Effect of Merger in General.—When said certificate shall have been recorded as provided in clause (d) of this section, the merger shall be deemed to have taken place and the merging corporations to be one corporation under the name adopted in and by said agreement, possessing all rights, privileges and franchises theretofore vested in each of them; and all the estate and property, real and personal, of each of said corporations shall be deemed and taken to be transferred to and vested in the said new corporation without any further act or deed: Provided, That all rights of creditors and all liens upon the property of each of said corporations shall continue unimpaired, and all debts, duties and liabilities of each of said constituent corporations shall thenceforth attach to said new corporation and may be enforced against it to the same extent and by the same process as if said debts, duties and liabilities had been contracted by it.

(f) Effect of Merger on Trusts.—Whenever a trust company or a state bank possessed of trust company powers shall merge or consolidate with another trust company or state bank under the provisions of this section, all the estate and property, real and personal, held by either of such merging corporations in any trust or fiduciary capacity, shall be deemed and taken to be transferred to and vested in the consolidated corporation, without any further act or deed or any order or decree of any court or other tribunal, and the consolidated corporation shall have and hold the same as fully as the same was possessed and held by the constituent corporations from which it was, by operation of the provisions of this clause, transferred, and said consolidated corporation shall succeed to all the relations, obligations and liabilities, and shall execute and perform all the trusts and duties devolving upon it, in the same manner as though it had itself assumed the relation or trust: Provided, That if, within thirty days after notice to any person or corporation interested in any such trust of the consolidation and merger, such person or corporation shall file a written objection with said consolidated corporation, and shall apply to the proper court or other tribunal having jurisdiction of such trust estate for the appointment of a substituted trustee or other fiduciary, such court or tribunal shall have power to make the appointment of a substituted trustee or other fiduciary and to order said consolidated corporation forthwith to file an account of such trust estate and to pay over and transfer the assets and property thereof to the substituted trustee or fiduciary so appointed.

Note:—This new clause covers the merger of trust companies or banks having trust company powers and makes it optional with the beneficiaries in trust estates to obtain the appointment of new fiduciaries should they object to the consolidated company's continuing the act.

(g) Dissenting Stockholders.—If any stockholder of a corporation which shall become a party to an agreement of merger and consolidation as provided in this section shall be dissatisfied with or object to such merger and consolidation and shall not have voted in favor of the same at the stockholders' meeting, it shall be lawful for such stockholder, within thirty days after the adoption of said agreement by the stockholders as herein provided, to give written notice to the president, cashier or treasurer of the corporation of his desire to surrender his stock upon receiving the value thereof as of the date of said stockholders' meeting; and he shall thereupon be entitled to receive from the corporation the amount of such value, to be ascertained, if it cannot be agreed upon, by an appraisal made by three persons, one to be selected by such stockholder, one by the board of directors, and the third by the first two. In case the value so fixed shall not be satisfactory to such stockholder or to the board of directors, the dissatisfied party may apply to the court of petition to appoint an assessor or assessors to make a re-appraisal, which, when confirmed by the court, shall be final and binding. In such case application is made to the court, all expenses and costs of the appraisals and of the application shall be paid by the unsuccessful party.

Note:—The method of ascertaining the value of stock of a dissenting stockholder conforms to that provided in clause (c) of section 94 of this Code, relating to state banks becoming national banks, and is substituted for the provisions of the act of 1919 as to appointment of assessors by the court of common pleas in the first instance.

Section 89. Alteration or Revocation of Charter.—The legislature reserves the power to alter, revoke or annul the charter of any bank organized under this act or accepting its provisions, whenever, in the opinion of the legislature, it may be necessary for the public welfare, in such a manner, however, that no injustice shall be done to its stockholders.

Note:—This covers the provisions of section 31 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 406) and section 53 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 417).

Section 90. Voluntary Dissolution.—Any bank having capital stock may be dissolved and go into liquidation in the following manner:

(a) Call of Stockholders' Meeting.—The board of directors, or any twenty stockholders of the bank, being together the owners of one-twentieth part of the capital stock, or the holders of a majority of the capital stock may at any time call a meeting of the stockholders for the purpose of inquiring into the expediency of dissolving the corporation and liquidating and winding up its affairs, giving at least thirty days written notice to all stockholders, specifying the time, place and object of such meeting. Proof by affidavit or return registry receipts of due service of such notice shall be filed in the office of the bank before or at the time of such meeting.

Note:—This and the two following clauses take the place of section 25 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 406), section 29 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 441), and the act of April 1, 1822 (7 Sm. L. 541; 1 Purd. 441).

(b) Vote of Stockholders; Certificate and Advertisement.—At such meeting, the stockholders shall vote upon the question whether or not the corporation shall be dissolved, the bank closed and the business wound up. The meeting shall be conducted and the vote taken in the manner provided by clauses (e) and (f) of section 85 of this act, relating to elections of directors, so far as applicable.

If the owners of at least two-thirds in amount of the entire capital stock shall vote in the affirmative on such question, it shall be the duty of the board of directors to cause a copy of the minutes of such meeting, verified by the chairman and secretary of the meeting, together with a certified copy of the resolution of the board of directors calling such meeting or of the call issued by stockholders, as the case may be, forthwith to be filed with the Commissioner, and to cause notice thereof to be served upon all depositors and other creditors of the bank so far as known to the board of directors, and to be advertised in a newspaper once a week for four successive weeks, calling upon such depositors and other creditors to present their claims for payment.

(c) Certificate of Dissolution; Distribution of Assets.—Upon the completion of such advertising and the presentation to the Commissioner of satisfactory proofs of publication, the Commissioner shall forthwith issue to the bank a certificate of dissolution, whereupon the bank shall cease to do business and the board of directors then in office shall thenceforth act as liquidating trustees of the bank, and shall proceed to collect all its assets and distribute the same in accordance with the provisions of section 92 of this act: Provided, That no distribution among stockholders shall be made until the liquidating trustees shall have produced to the Commissioner satisfactory proof that all debts of the bank have been paid, and the Commissioner shall have made an order authorizing distribution among stockholders.

Section 91. Dissolution on Expiration or Forfeiture of Charter.—Whenever the charter of a bank shall expire by limitation or shall be forfeited, the affairs of such bank, unless the case be one in which the Commissioner shall be authorized to take possession under the provisions of Article II of this act, shall be liquidated, if the bank be one having capital stock, in accordance with section 90 of this act, or, in the case of a savings bank having no capital stock, in accordance with section 125 of this act.

Note:—This takes the place of sections 1, 2, 3, 6 and 7 of the act of April 1, 1822 (7 Sm. L. 641; 1 Purd. 441-2), which provides for the election of liquidating trustees by the stockholders.

Section 92. Distribution of Assets.—In case of any distribution of the money, funds, property or other assets, whatsoever, of any bank, in the course of its liquidation, whether voluntary or involuntary, distribution shall (subject to the provisions of section 118, clauses (f) and (h) of this act as to title insurance reserve) be made and preferred in the following order, namely:

First. To the payment of all depositors, whether the deposits be subject to immediate check or only payable after specified notice, or at the expiration of affixed period, whether or not such notice has been given or such period has expired at the time of such distribution. Bona fide holders for value of certified checks on such bank, or of certificates of deposit issued by it, or of its checks or drafts given in exchange for or in payment of checks or drafts of its depositors drawn on it, not exceeding the balance to the credit of the depositor, shall also be treated and considered as depositors within the meaning of this section. Bona fide holders of outstanding checks drawn by depositors on such bank and not certified shall be subrogated to the rights of the depositors whose checks they hold, but only to the extent of the balances to the credit of such depositors.

Second. To the payment and discharge of all the remaining liabilities of such bank.

Third. The residue, if any, shall be distributed to the shareholders of the bank according to their respective legal rights.

Provided, however, That where trust moneys and property are held by the bank, they shall be kept separate as provided by section 51 of this act and distributed to the beneficiaries accordingly.

Note:—This is founded on section 1 of the act of May 8, 1907 (P. L. 192), as amended by the act of May 23, 1913 (P. L. 354; 7 Purd. 7697), relating to trust companies, and supplies section 28 of the State Bank Act of 1876.

The new provision as to holders of uncertified checks has been inserted because such holders are fairly entitled to the same priority as the depositors on whose accounts the checks have been drawn.

Section 93. National Banking Associations Becoming Banks under State Laws.

(a) Authority.—Any banking association organized under the laws of the United States and doing business in this state may become a state bank or trust company with all the powers and subject to all the obligations and duties of a state bank or trust company organized under the provisions of this act, provided such banking association has authority by virtue of any law of the United States to dissolve its organization as a national banking association.

Note:—This section is new, there being no similar provision in the existing laws of Pennsylvania.

(b) Procedure.—A national banking association desiring to become a state bank or trust company shall proceed in the following manner:

1. It shall take such action, in the manner prescribed or authorized by the laws of the United States, as shall make its dissolution as a national banking association effective at a future date certain.

2. A majority of its directors shall thereafter, and before the time when its dissolution becomes effective, subscribe and acknowledge in duplicate, upon the authority in writing of the owners of at least two-thirds of its capital stock, the certificate of incorporation required by section 68 of this act, and attach thereto copies of the said written authority of the stockholders and the resolution fixing the date at which its dissolution as a national banking association shall become effective, executed in the same manner as said certificate.

3. It shall thereupon, and before the time when its dissolution becomes effective, submit such duplicate certificates, with the authority of stockholders and resolution attached thereto, to the Commissioner, and shall pay the Commissioner a fee of one hundred dollars.

4. If the Commissioner shall endorse his approval on the certificate of incorporation as provided in section 71 of this act, and the bank shall within thirty days after notice thereof pay to the State Treasurer such bonus as is or may be prescribed by law, the Commissioner shall thereupon transmit the same to the Governor, who, if he approves the same, shall cause letters patent to be issued as soon as the dissolution of such corporation as a national banking association becomes effective; and its corporate existence as a state bank or trust company shall date from the issuance of such letters patent; but such bank shall transact no business, other than that relating to its organization, until the conditions precedent to commencing business prescribed by sections 73 and 74 of this act, relating to the recording of the certificate of incorporation, shall have been complied with.

(c) Property to Vest in State Bank or Trust Company; Directors to Continue.—At the time when the corporate existence of said bank as a bank of this state begins, all the property of the dissolved national banking association shall immediately, by act of law and without any conveyance or transfer, be vested in and become the property of such state bank or trust company. The directors of the dissolved corporation at the time of such dissolution shall be the directors of the state bank or trust company created in pursuance hereof, until the first annual election of directors thereafter, and shall have power to take all necessary measures to perfect its organization and to adopt such regulations concerning its business and management as may be proper and not inconsistent with law.

(d) Effect on Trusts.—When a national banking association authorized under the laws of the United States to act as a fiduciary or do any other trust company business becomes a state bank or trust company in accordance with the provisions of this section, all the estate and property held by such national banking association in any trust or fiduciary capacity shall be deemed and taken to be transferred to and vested in such state bank or trust company, in the same manner and subject to the same conditions and limitations as are provided in clause (f) of section 8 of this act, relating to consolidation and merger of state banks and trust companies.

Note:—Since national banks may under federal law obtain the right to do a trust company business, and since state banks have the same right, it is necessary to make specific provisions for the transfer of trust property, duties and liabilities; and the method adopted in the case of merger and consolidation is appropriate here.

Section 94. Banks under State Laws Becoming National Banking Associations.

(a) Notice to Commissioner; Certificate of Approval.—Whenever any bank shall have become a corporation for carrying on the business of banking under the laws of the United States, it shall notify the Commissioner of such fact and shall file with him a copy of its authorization as a national banking association, certified by the Comptroller of the Currency, and shall also record a copy of such authorization, so certified, in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county where the place of business of the bank is located. Upon compliance with these provisions, and upon the issuance by the Commissioner of a certificate of approval, showing that the bank has complied with the laws of this commonwealth, such bank shall cease to be a corporation under the laws of this commonwealth. Whenever the Commissioner shall issue such a certificate of approval, he shall forthwith file with the Auditor-General a certified copy thereof.

Note:—This section takes the place of the act of April 26, 1889 (P. L. 58; 1 Purd. 449-50), changes having been made as noted under the various clauses.

In clause (a), the provisions as to recording, approval by the Commissioner and notice to the Auditor-General are new; and the proviso as to continuance of the corporate existence for three years has been omitted as unnecessary.

(b) Stockholders' Meeting; Advertisement.—At the meeting of stockholders called for the purpose of determining whether a bank shall become a national association, the vote shall be taken in the same manner as votes are taken at elections for directors of a bank, as provided in clauses (e) and (f) of section 85 of this act. When, at such meeting, the bank has voted to become a national association, and the directors have procured the authority of the owners of two-thirds of the capital stock to make the certificate required therefor by the laws of the United States, the cashier or treasurer of the bank shall publish notice thereof once a week for four weeks in one newspaper and shall give written or printed notice to each stockholder.

Note:—The first sentence covers the detailed provisions of section 3 of the act of 1889 as to number of votes, proxies, etc.

The remainder of the clause takes the place of section 2 of the act of 1889, omitting the provision that the stockholders shall select the newspaper, and leaving the method of serving notices to be covered by the provisions of section 9 of this act.

(c) Dissenting Stockholders.—If, within the period of four weeks notice, any stockholder, who has not joined in giving authority to the directors to make such certificate, shall give written notice to the president cashier or treasurer of the bank of his desire to surrender his stock upon receiving the value thereof as of the date of said stockholders' meeting, he shall be entitled to receive such value, to be ascertained, if it cannot be agreed upon, by an appraisal made by three persons, one to be selected by such stockholder, one by the board of directors, and the third by the first two. In case the value so fixed shall not be satisfactory to such stockholder or to the board of directors, the dissatisfied party may apply to the court by petition to appoint an appraiser or appraisers to make a re-appraisal, which, when confirmed by the court, shall be final and binding. In case such application is made to the court, all costs and expenses of the appraisals and of the application shall be paid by the unsuccessful party.

Note:—This takes the place of section 4 of the act of 1889, which provides for an appraisement by auditors appointed by the court of common pleas, whose meeting is to be advertised in the newspapers. The clause is modeled to some extent on section 5 of the Act of Congress of July 12, 1882 c. 290, 22 Stat. at L. 162, relating to national banks whose charters are extended.

(d) Value of Fractional Shares.—In adjusting the shares of any stockholder to the value of the shares of the national association, the value of fractional shares of the bank shall be taken to be the same as shall have been ascertained to be the actual value of the shares of refusing stockholders at the time the certificate is filed with the Commissioner, or, if there be no refusing stockholders, then such value shall be ascertained in the manner directed in clause (c) of this section; and on payment of such value, the owner of such fractional shares shall deliver the certificate thereof and transfer such fractional shares to the bank.

If the directors and the holders of fractional shares shall agree upon the value thereof, the payment of such value shall have the same effect as if the value had been ascertained as aforesaid.

Note:—This is derived from section 5 of the act of 1889, with some changes of wording.

It has been considered unnecessary to re-enact the provisions of section 4 that the valuation of the stock shall be its fair market value at the time of paying the last dividend and that the stockholders shall receive such valuation with interest from the time of paying said dividend.

Section 6 of the act of 1889 provides for reduction of capital stock to the extent of the par value of the shares and fractions surrendered, and for its further reduction by purchase and cancellation of shares or by reducing par value. The selection also provides that instead of reducing capital stock, the bank may dispose of shares and fractional shares surrendered to any person or persons at par. This whole section has been omitted because, when the bank has become a national association, the reduction of its capital stock is not a matter for regulation by state law.

(e) Publication by Commissioner.—When a bank shall have furnished to the Commissioner satisfactory evidence, by the oaths or affirmations of the president and the cashier or treasurer, and by the exhibition of its books or otherwise, that all the requirements of this section have been complied with, that the bank has become a national association and that the national association has assumed all the debts and liabilities of the bank as provided in clause (f) of this section, the Commissioner shall forthwith cause notice thereof to be published at the expense of the bank in one newspaper once a week for at least four weeks; and upon the completion of such advertisement and the issuance of a certificate of approval by the Commissioner as provided in clause (a) of this section, the charter of the bank shall be deemed to be surrendered.

Note:—This is derived from section 9 of the act of 1889. The Commissioner has been substituted for the Auditor-General and the Governor; the period of advertising has been changed from three to four weeks; and the provisions as to assumption of liabilities by the national association and the certificate of approval are new.

(f) Property to Vest in National Association; Liabilities to be Assumed.—When the charter of a bank shall be surrendered as provided in clause (e) of this section, all its assets, real and personal, shall immediately, by act of law and without any conveyance or transfer, be vested in and become the property of the national association, which shall file with the Commissioner an agreement duly executed and in form approved by the Commissioner, assuming all debts, obligations and liabilities of said bank. Thereafter, such national association may be substituted as plaintiff or defendant in any pending action or proceeding by or against said bank. Such change of a bank to a national association shall not, however, release the bank from its obligations to pay and discharge all liabilities created by law or incurred by it before becoming a national association, or any tax imposed by the laws of this commonwealth up to the date of its becoming a national association, in proportion to the time which has elapsed since the last preceding payment of such a tax, or any assessment, penalty or forfeiture imposed or incurred under the laws of this commonwealth up to the date of its becoming a national association.

Note:—This takes the place of sections 8, 10 and 11 of the act of 1889. The provisions as to assumption of debts and liabilities and substitution in pending suits are new.

Section 7 of the act of 1889, requiring the directors to deliver up all plates and dies to the court of quarter sessions, is obsolete.

ARTICLE IV.—STATE BANKS: BANKING POWERS. LIMITATIONS AND REGULATIONS, IN GENERAL.

Section 95. Powers of State Banks.—Every state bank incorporated under the provisions of this act or accepting its provisions as provided by section 6 of this act, shall, in addition to the general corporate powers enumerated in section 81 of this act, have the following powers, to-wit:

(a) Deposits.—To receive money on deposit and to allow interest thereon.

(b) Borrowing Money.—To rediscount, to borrow money, bonds or other securities, and to pledge collateral therefor.

(c) Lending Money.—To lend money on the security of real or personal property.

(d) Dealing in Commercial Paper and Evidences of Debt.—To discount, buy, sell, negotiate and assign promissory notes, drafts, bills of exchange, trade and bank acceptances, bonds, and other evidences of debt.

(e) Exchange.—To buy and sell exchange, coin and bullion.

(f) Interest on Loans.—To charge for the loan or use of money such rate of interest as is now or may hereafter be fixed by the laws of this commonwealth, and to receive and retain in advance the interest on loans and discounts made.

(g) Purchasing and Holding Real Estate.—To purchase, hold and convey real estate as follows:

1. Such as shall be necessary for its present or prospective accommodation in the transaction of its business.

2. Such as shall be mortgaged to it in good faith as security for debts or conveyed to it in satisfaction of debts previously contracted in the course of its business.

3. Such as it shall purchase at sales under judgments, decrees or mortgages held by it, or shall purchase to secure debts due to it.

(h) Improving and Leasing Real Estate.—To improve any real estate held by it for its accommodation in the transaction of its business by erecting a building or buildings or by renewing or replacing any building or buildings thereon with a new or additional structure; to use such portion thereof for the transaction of its business as may be suitable and convenient for that purpose; and to lease and let, from time to time, such portion and apartments of such building or buildings as it may not require for its business and to receive rents for the use thereof.

(i) Sale of Property; Dealings with Collateral.—To sell and dispose of real or personal property owned by it; and to purchase, collect, adjust and dispose of any property held as security for obligations due to it.

(j) Acceptances and Letters of Credit.—To accept for payment at a future date drafts drawn upon it and to issue letters of credit authorizing the holders thereof to draw drafts upon it or its correspondents.

(k) Membership in Federal Reserve Bank.—To become a member of a Federal Reserve Bank as created and established by the act of Congress approved December 23, 1913, entitled the "Federal Reserve Act," and its supplements and for that purpose to purchase and hold so much of the capital stock of such Federal Reserve Bank as will qualify it for such membership. Any bank which shall become a member of a Federal Reserve Bank shall have and exercise all powers, not in conflict with the laws of this commonwealth, which are conferred upon any such member bank of the "Federal Reserve Act" and its supplements; but such bank and its officers, directors and stockholders shall continue to be subject, nevertheless, to all liabilities and duties imposed upon them by this act or by any law of this commonwealth.

(l) Safe Deposit Business.—To receive, upon terms and conditions to be prescribed by it, upon deposit for safe keeping, bonds, mortgages, jewelry, plate, stocks, securities and valuable papers of any kind, and to let out receptacles for the deposit thereof.

(m) Holding Stock in Banks Engaged in Foreign Business.—To invest, when a state bank has a capital and surplus of not less than one million dollars, an amount not exceeding in the aggregate ten per cent. of its capital and surplus in the stock of one or more banks or corporations chartered or incorporated under the laws of the United States or of any state thereof and principally engaged in international or foreign banking, or banking in a dependency or insular possession of the United States, either directly or through the agency, ownership or control of local institutions in foreign countries or in such dependencies or insular possessions, but only by and with the previous written consent of the Commissioner and under such terms and conditions as he shall prescribe.

(n) Holding Stock in Real Estate Companies.—To acquire and hold, when a state bank has a capital and surplus of not less than one million dollars, the whole, but not less than ninety per cent. of, the capital stock of a corporation formed for the purpose of taking and holding title to real estate and erecting or maintaining thereon a building or buildings to be used in whole or in part for the accommodation and transaction of the business of such state bank and of any branch or branches thereof.

(o) Incidental Powers; Not to Engage in Trade or Commerce.—To exercise any and all such incidental powers as shall be necessary to carry on its business; but no state bank shall employ its moneys, directly or indirectly, in trade or commerce, by buying or selling goods, wares, merchandise or commodities, by owning or operating industrial plants, or otherwise howsoever, except as authorized by this act.

Note:—This entire section is intended to bring into one orderly arrangement the banking powers of corporations chartered under or accepting this Code.

Clause (a), so far as it relates to interest on deposits, takes the place of the provisions of the act of June 10, 1897 (P. L. 138; 1 Purd. 429), as amended by the act of May 23, 1913 (P. L. 338; 5 Purd. 5350) and extends them to trust companies. Section 7 of the act of 1876 provided that no interest should be paid on deposits except on daily balances of foreign correspondents in other states; and section 30 of that act provided that banks chartered under the act should not pay interest on call deposits, on penalty of a forfeiture of the charter.

Clauses (b) to (e) inclusive take the place of that part of section 6 of the act of 1876 which provides that banks formed under that act shall have "all such power as shall be necessary to carry on the business of banking, by loaning money, discounting, selling, buying or negotiating promissory notes, drafts, coin and bullion, bills of exchange and all other written evidence of debt and specialties."

Clause (f) is founded on section 1, clause 2 of the trust company act of May 9, 1889 (P. L. 159; 4 Purd. 4761), which is recited verbatim in section 1 of the act of June 27, 1895 (P. L. 399; 2 Purd. 1669). The act of 1895 was an amendment of section 29 of the general corporation act of 1874, and apparently repealed the act of May 24, 1881 (P. L. 22).

Clause (g) is derived from the first part of section 8 of the act of 1876, amended by the act of April 19, 1901 (P. L. 79; 1 Purd. 401). Clause (h) is founded on section 1 of the act of May 21, 1901 (P. L. 288; 1 Purd. 401), relating to state banks only.

Clause (i) takes the place of the provision of section 7 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 401), that a bank may purchase, collect and adjust collateral securities and dispose thereof.

Clause (j) is new.

Clause (k) is derived from sections 1 and 2 of the act of July 17, 1917 (P. L. 1021). The provisions of sections 3 and 4 of that act, relating to examinations and reserve requirements, are covered in the sections of this Code dealing with those subjects.

Clause (l) takes the place of clause 3 of section 1 of the act of May 9, 1889 (P. L. 159; 4 Purd. 4761) and the first paragraph of section 1 of the act of June 11, 1885 (P. L. 111; 4 Purd. 4828), relating to trust companies, and permits state banks to do business of this character. Section 45 of the act of April 29, 1874 (P. L. 95; 4 Purd. 4351), provides that safe-deposit companies shall have power to receive upon deposit for safekeeping, jewelry, plate, stocks, bonds, notes, and valuable property of every kind, upon terms to be prescribed by the by-laws of such corporation, which by-laws shall, at all times, be posted up in the place or places of business of such corporation. This should not be repealed, since corporations organized to do a safe deposit business only, if there be any such, are not covered by this Code.

Clause (m) resembles section 25 of the Federal Reserve Act, but leaves the details of regulation to the Commissioner.

Clause (n) provides a method whereby a bank may organize a separate corporation to hold title to the real estate used in the bank's business. It is so framed as to oblige the bank to maintain control of such a company in its own hands.

The first part of clause (o) takes the place of the provision in section 6 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 400), that a bank shall have power to "transact all such other business as shall appertain to the business of banking." The last part covers the similar provision of Art. XIII of section 10 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 428).

Section 96. Restrictions on loans, Investments and Total Liabilities of a Person or Corporation.

(a) Limitation of Loans to a Person or Corporation.—

1. In General.—A state bank shall not directly or indirectly lend to any corporation, person or body politic an amount which, including therein any extension of credit by means of letters of credit or by acceptance of drafts for, or the discount or purchase of the notes, bills of exchange or other obligations of, such corporation, person or body politic, will exceed fifteen per cent. of the capital and surplus of the state bank: Provided, That the restrictions of this clause shall not apply (a) to loans to the United States, the state of Pennsylvania, or any county, city borough or township of this state, or (b) to the discount of drafts or bills of exchange drawn in good faith against actual existing values, or (c) to the discount of trade acceptances or other commercial or business paper actually owned by the person negotiating the same to the state bank and endorsed by such person without limitation, or (d) to the discount of notes secured by shipping documents, warehouse receipts or other such documents conveying or securing title covering readily marketable non-perishable staples, including livestock, for any one person or corporation or the several members thereof for not more than six months in any consecutive twelve months, when the actual market value of the property securing the obligations is not at any time less than one hundred and fifteen per cent. of the face amount of the notes secured by such documents and when such property is fully covered by insurance: And provided further, That the total liabilities to a state bank of any corporation, person or body politic may equal but not exceed thirty per cent. of the capital and surplus of the state bank if such liabilities in excess of fifteen per cent. of such capital and surplus are secured by collateral consisting of bonds of the United States or of the state of Pennsylvania or of any county, city, borough, township or school district of this state, having an ascertained market value of at least ten per cent. more than the amount of the liabilities so secured.

In computing the total liabilities of any individual to a state bank there shall be included all liabilities to the state bank of any partnership or unincorporated association of which he is a member and any loans made for his benefit or for the benefit of such partnership or association, and all liabilities to the state bank of any corporation of which he owns more than fifty per cent. of the capital stock, or of which he is a director or officer owning more than ten per cent. of the capital stock thereof.

In computing the total liabilities of any partnership or unincorporated association to a state bank there shall be included all liabilities to the state bank of the individual members of such partnership or association and all loans made for the benefit of such partnership or association or any member thereof.

In computing the total liabilities of any corporation to a state bank there shall be included all loans made for the benefit of the corporation and all loans to or for the benefit of any individual who owns more than fifty per cent. of the capital stock thereof, or who is a director or officer owning more than ten per cent. of the capital stock thereof.

Note:—This new clause is derived in part from section 5200 U. S. Rev. Stat. as amended by Acts of Congress of June 22, 1906, September 24, 1918, and October 22, 1919, relating to national banks.

2. Stock of Bank or Trust Company as Collateral.—A state bank shall not take or hold at any one time more than twenty-five per cent. of the total capital stock of another state bank or trust company as collateral security for loans.

Note:—This new clause is intended to prevent large advances on the security of stock of another banking institution.

3. Limitation on Loans Secured by Stock or Obligations of Corporations and Subsidiaries.—A state bank shall not take or hold loans or discounts secured by the stock or obligations of any one corporation or of the subsidiary companies of the same corporation which loans exceed in the aggregate at any one time thirty per cent. of the capital and surplus of such state bank.

Note:—This clause is new and guards against large advances on the securities of one corporation or group of corporations.

(b) Limitations as to Investments in or Loans on Mortgages and Ground Rents—

1. Mortgage or Ground Rent Must be First Lien.—A state bank shall not purchase and hold for investment mortgages on real estate or ground rents issuing out of real estate unless the mortgage or ground rent so purchased is a first lien on said real estate or unless all prior liens against said real estate are already owned by said state bank.

Note:—This takes the place of the provisions of section 1 of the act of July 10, 1901 (P. L. 639; 1 Purd. 447), amended by the act of July 24, 1913; (P. L. 972; 5 Purd. 5350) and of section 1 of the act of April 21, 1858 (P. L. 412; 1 Purd. 814), relating to trust companies, that investments may be made in mortgages on "unincumbered real estate" and ground rents issuing out of such real estate.

2. Limitation on Total Amount of Such Investments or Loans.—A state bank shall not hold at any one time investments in or loans secured by mortgages on real estate or ground rents issuing out of real estate to an amount exceeding twenty-five per cent. of the total assets of the bank: Provided, That the limitations of this clause shall not apply to the investment of funds held by a state bank in any fiduciary capacity.

Note:—This is derived from the sources referred to in the last preceding note.

(c) Limitations as to Real Estate.—A state bank shall not

1. Title to Real Estate.—Hold or carry title to any real estate owned by it in the name of any person or corporation, unless specially authorized by the board of directors.

2. Real Estate for Accommodation of bank.—Invest in any real estate for its own present prospective accommodation in the transaction of its business, or partly so used and partly leased to others, a sum of money exceeding in the aggregate at any time fifty per cent. of its capital and surplus, without the previous written approval of the Commissioner.

3. Five Year Limitation.—Hold possession of any real estate by virtue of a mortgage, or the title and possession of any real estate purchased by it, except such as may be necessary for its present or prospective accommodation in the transaction of its business or partly so used and partly leased to others, for a longer period than five years, without the written approval of the Commissioner.

4. Stock of Real Estate Company.—Invest in the capital stock and obligations of a corporation or corporations owning the real estate used in whole or in part for the transaction of the business of such state bank or any branch or branches thereof an amount exceeding in the aggregate fifty per cent. of the capital and surplus of the state bank, nor acquire and hold any of the capital stock and obligations of any such corporation or corporations if the total amount of the capital stock and obligations of such corporation or corporations exceeds in the aggregate fifty per cent. of the capital and surplus of the state bank, without the written approval of the Commissioner. The capital stock of such a corporation or corporations held by a state bank shall not be sold or transferred except as a whole and shall not be pledged without the written approval of the Commissioner, all sales, transfers or pledges in violation hereof being hereby declared to be void.

Note:—These limitations are derived from section 8 of the act of 1876, amended by the act of April 19, 1901 (P. L. 79; 1 Purd. 401) and section 1 of the act of May 21, 1901 (P. L. 288; 1 Purd. 401), except as to sub-clause 4, which is new.

(d) Limitations as to Acceptances and Letters of Credit.—A state bank shall not

1. Acceptance of Drafts or Bills of Exchange.—Accept for payment at a future date drafts or bills of exchange drawn upon it unless the same have not more than six months sight to run and grow out of transactions involving the importation or exportation of goods or out of transactions involving the domestic shipment of goods and provided shipping documents conveying or securing title are attached at the time of acceptance, or which are secured at the time of acceptance by a warehouse receipt or other such document conveying or securing title covering readily marketable staples, though such documents may be detached after acceptance.

Note:—This is derived from section 13 of the Federal Reserve Act as amended, the language being modified so as to make it clear that the documents may be detached after the acceptance, this being in accordance with the existing practice under said act.

2. Issuance of Letters of Credit.—Issue letters of credit in any transaction involving the importation, exportation or domestic shipment of goods and authorizing the holders thereof to draw upon it or its correspondents, unless there is a bone fide contract for the shipment of goods within a specified reasonable time and the existence of such contract is certified in the acceptance agreement.

Note:—This is derived from section 13 of the Federal Reserve Act as amended.

3. Limitation as to Amount.—Accept drafts or bills of exchange or issue letters of credit for any one person or corporation to an amount at any one time in the aggregate equal to more than fifteen per cent. of the capital and surplus of such state bank, unless it is secured either by attached documents or by some other actual security growing out of the same transaction as the acceptance; and a state bank shall not accept drafts or bills of exchange or issue letters of credit to an amount equal at any time in the aggregate to more than fifty per cent. of its capital and surplus, except that a state bank acting under a general authorization by the Commissioner and subject to such regulations as he may generally provide, may accept drafts or bills of exchange or issue letters of credit to an amount not exceeding in the aggregate at any one time one hundred per cent. of its capital and surplus.

Note:—This is derived from section 13 of the Federal Reserve Act as amended.

(e) Limitations as to Dealings in Bank's Own Stock.—A state bank shall not

1. Purchase or Holding.—Purchase or hold any of the shares of its own capital stock.

2. Loans on Security of Stock.—Make any loan or discount on the security of shares of its own capital stock.

3. Loans to Enable Purchase of Own Stock.—Lend, knowingly, directly or indirectly, any money or property for the purpose of enabling any person to pay for or hold any shares of its capital stock, unless the loan is made upon security having an ascertained or market value of at least ten per cent. more than the amount of the loan.

Note:—Sub-clauses 1 and 2 are derived from section 2 of the act of June 14, 1901 (P. L. 561; 1 Purd. 448), which is substantially the same as section 23 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 405).

Sub-clause 3, which is new, is directed at the practice of evading the prohibition of loans on the security of the bank's own stock by making loans on unsecured notes for the purpose of facilitating the purchase of stock of the bank.

(f) Protection against Loss on Previous Loan or Investment.—No restriction imposed by this section shall be construed to prevent a state bank, in order to protect itself from loss upon a loan or investment previously made in good faith, from taking and holding any kind of property or security. Any of its own capital stock so acquired shall be sold within one year, and any other property so acquired, which it is not otherwise lawful for the bank to hold, shall be sold within five years, unless the Commissioner shall give written consent to a longer holding.

Note:—This clause is new.

(g) Property or Securities Acquired before Approval of Act.—No restriction imposed by this section shall be construed to render unlawful the continued holding of any loans, stock, real estate or securities lawfully acquired prior to the date of the approval of this act.

Note:—This new clause prevents unnecessary disturbance of existing conditions.

Section 97. Limitations on Loans to Officers, Directors and Employees.—No officer, director or employee of any state bank shall borrow, directly or indirectly, from such bank any sum of money without the previous affirmative vote or written assent of a majority of the whole board of directors, or by the previous affirmative vote or written assent of a majority of the duly authorized finance or executive committee of the board of directors, exclusive, in either case, of any director or directors directly or indirectly interested in obtaining such loan; and if an officer, director or employee of the bank shall be a director of any other corporation and the owner of more than ten per cent. of the capital stock thereof, or shall own more than fifty per cent. of the capital stock thereof, or shall be a member of any partnership or unincorporated association, a loan to such corporation, partnership or association shall be considered, for the purpose of this section, as a loan to such officer, director or employee.

Any officer, director or employee of a bank violating the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be subject to imprisonment not exceeding one year and to a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or either, at the discretion of the court, and to repay forthwith to the bank the amount borrowed in violation of this section, and shall forever thereafter be disqualified from acting as an officer, director or employee of any bank in this state.

Note:—This takes the place of section 1 of the act of June 14, 1901 (P. L. 561; 1 Purd. 405), which repealed the first clause of section 21 of the act of 1876. The penalty is derived in part from section 22 of the Federal Reserve Act, relating to loans to bank examiners.

The limitations upon the total loaned to officers, directors and employees, contained in the act of 1901, section 23 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 426), as amended by section 51 of the same act, and section 1 of the act of April 17, 1861 (P. L. 342; 1 Purd. 426) are recommended for repeal, the subject being sufficiently covered by the provisions of section 96 (a) 1. of this code, limiting the amount of loans to one person or corporation.

Section 98. Purchases and Sales from and to Directors.—Any state bank may contract for or purchase from any of its directors or from a firm of which any of its directors is a member any securities or other property, when such purchase is made in the regular course of business upon terms not less favorable to the bank than those offered to others, and when such purchase is authorized by the affirmative vote or written assent of a majority of the board of directors of such bank not interested in the sale of such securities or property.

Any state bank may sell securities or other property owned or held by it to any of its directors or to a firm of which any of its directors is a member in the regular course of business on terms not more favorable to such director or firm than those offered to others, when such sale is authorized by the affirmative vote or written assent of a majority of the board of directors of such bank not interested in the purchase of such securities or property.

In any transaction between a state bank and any of its directors, the Commissioner may at any time require full disclosure of all details relating to such transaction, together with a full statement as to commissions received or profits realized by any director or directors in connection therewith.

Note:—This follows section 22 of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended in 1918.

*Section 99. Purchases of Evidences of Debt below Face Value.—No state bank, nor any director, officer, employee or attorney of any state bank, shall be interested, directly or indirectly, in the purchase of any promissory note or other evidence of debt issued by such bank for less than its face value.

Note:—The provisions of this section are new. Their necessity is obvious.

Section 100.—Deposits—

(a) Receipts for Deposits.—Every state bank shall furnish each depositor with a receipt in full, by pass-book or otherwise, for all moneys received as deposits, which deposits, until refunded, shall constitute a liability upon the part of the bank, and a record thereof shall be kept in proper form in books prepared for that purpose.

Any officer or employee of a state bank violating any of the provisions of this clause shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof, shall be subject to a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

On discovery of any such violation, it shall be the duty of the Commissioner to institute proceedings against the officer or employee guilty thereof.

Note:—The first paragraph is derived from section 1 of the act of June 12, 1907 (P. L. 525; 6 Purd. 7492), which applies to all corporations under the supervision of the Commissioner and to moneys received as dues or on account of installments for any trust or investment as well as to deposits. For the sake of clearness, the word "deposits" has been inserted before "until refunded," and the words "a record thereof" before "shall be kept."

The second and third paragraphs are derived from sections 4 and 5 of the act of 1907. Sections 2 and 3 of that act relate to reports to the Commissioner or other authorities, concealment of assets, etc. These subjects are covered elsewhere in this Code.

(b) Receipts for Money Deposited for Transmission.—Every state bank shall give a receipt to every person depositing money for transmission to a foreign country, which receipt shall show the name and address of the bank, the date of receipt of the money, the name and address of the person to whom the money is to be transmitted and the date not later than which the money is to be transmitted. All moneys received by a state bank for transmission to a foreign country shall be forwarded to the person designated to receive the same within five days after the receipt thereof, unless a later date be fixed in such receipt.

Note:—This corresponds to sections 6 and 7 of the Private Bank Act of 1911, but omits the penal provision of the latter section and permits the fixing in the receipt of a period for transmission longer than five days.

(c) Deposits by or for Minors.—Any state bank may, at its discretion, receive deposits by or on behalf of a minor and provide for the payment of such money, or any part thereof, or any interest accruing thereon, on the check, proper receipt or order of such minor, without the assent or approbation of the parent or guardian of such minor; and it shall not be lawful for such parent or guardian to attach or in any manner interfere with any such deposit.

Note:—This takes the place of section 1 of the act of May 15, 1874 (P. L. 193; 1 Purd. 429), the provisions of that section as to married women being omitted as unnecessary.

(d) Death of One Making Deposit as Trustee.—When a deposit shall be made with a state bank by any person describing himself in making such deposit as trustee for another, and no other or further notice of the existence and terms of a legal or valid trust than such description shall have been given in writing to the bank, in the case of the death of the person making such a deposit, and upon the production to the bank of satisfactory proof of such death, by certificate of a physician or undertaker or otherwise, it shall be the duty of the bank forthwith to report such death to the register of wills of the proper county, in order that such register may take action to secure the payment to the commonwealth of any collateral or direct inheritance tax which may accrue. Unless, within ten days after such notice, the bank shall be notified to the contrary by said register of wills, it may pay over such deposit or any part thereof and any interest accrued thereon to the person for whose benefit the deposit was stated to have been made, and the receipt of such person shall be a sufficient acquittance to the bank therefor. If, within such period of ten days, said register of wills shall notify the bank not to pay to such person, the bank shall make payment only on the joint check, order or receipt of such person and the executor or administrator of the depositor.

Note:—This new clause covers a subject not dealt with by any existing law in Pennsylvania. The Banking laws of New York, Missouri and California contain somewhat similar provisions.

(e) Joint Deposits.—When a deposit shall be made with a state bank in the names of two or more persons, other than husband and wife, the bank shall not be required to pay the same or any part thereof or any interest accruing thereon, except upon the proper check, order or receipt of both or all of such persons. In case of the death of one of such persons, and upon the production to the bank of satisfactory proof of such death, by certificate of a physician or undertaker or otherwise, it shall be the duty of the bank forthwith to report such death to the register of wills of the proper county. Thereafter, the bank may pay over such deposit or any part thereof and any interest accrued thereon to the survivor or survivors of the depositors, whose receipt shall be a sufficient acquittance to the bank therefor.

When a deposit shall be made with a state bank in the names of two or more persons, and said deposit shall be marked at the direction of the depositors as payable upon check or order of either or any of said depositors, the bank may pay such deposit upon the check or order of either or any of said depositors notwithstanding the fact that one or more of said depositors may be dead; but when the bank acquires actual knowledge of the death of any one of such depositors, it shall be the duty of the bank forthwith to report such death to the register of wills of the proper county.

Note:—This clause is also new and is drawn in conformity with the next preceding clause.

(f) Liability for Non-Payment Checks.—State banks shall be liable to a depositor because of the non-payment, through mistake or error and without malice, of a check which should have been paid, unless the depositor shall allege and prove actual damage by reason of such non-payment, and, in such event, the liability shall not exceed the amount of damage so proved.

Note:—This re-enacts the act of June 12, 1919, (P. L. 453).

Section 101. Banks as Court Depositaries.—Every court in the State of Pennsylvania, into which money may be paid by parties, or be brought by judgment or decree, may, by order, direct the same to be deposited with any state bank; but no state bank shall be authorized to act as depositary of any such money unless it shall first enter into a bond, in such form and amount as may be prescribed by the court, and with one or more sureties approved by the court, conditioned for the proper application of such money, or unless it shall first furnish such other security as may be satisfactory to the court for the proper application of such money.

Note:—This is derived in part from section 2 of the act of May 29, 1895 (P. L. 127; 4 Purd. 4762), relating to trust companies. The latter part of the section is new.

Section 102. Business after Noon on Saturday.—Nothing in any law of this commonwealth shall, in any manner whatsoever, affect the validity of, or render void or voidable, the payment, certification or acceptance of a check or other negotiable instrument of a state bank, because done, performed or transacted on any Saturday between twelve o'clock noon and midnight, provided such transaction would be valid if done or performed at or before twelve o'clock noon on Saturday; and nothing in any law of this commonwealth shall be construed to prevent any state bank from keeping open its doors or transacting its business on any Saturday after twelve o'clock noon, if by a vote of its directors it shall elect so to do.

No state bank which by law or custom ceases to transact business at twelve o'clock noon on any Saturday shall be required to keep open for the transaction of business, or to perform any of the acts or transactions aforesaid on any Saturday after such hour; but all such transactions shall be at the option of such bank.

Note:—This is derived from the act of July 18, 1917 (P. L. 1067), with some changes of wording and the addition of the last clause of the first paragraph, which is part of the proviso to section 1 of the act of February 16, 1911 (P. L. 3; 5 Purd. 6359), which amended the act of June 23, 1897 (P. L. 188; 2 Purd. 1839).

Section 103. Reserve Fund.—All state banks are hereby required to create and maintain a reserve fund, which, in amount and manner, shall be as follows, the Commissioner being hereby authorized to make and enforce rules governing the manner in which the amount of the reserve fund shall be ascertained:

(a) Reserve Against Demand Liabilities.—Every state bank receiving deposits of money subject to check or payable on demand shall, at all times, have on hand a reserve fund of at least fifteen per centum of the aggregate of all its immediate demand liabilities, which liabilities shall include total deposits (demand deposits being hereby defined to comprise all deposits payable within thirty days), all amounts due to banks, the amount due on certified and cashier's checks, and for unpaid dividends, less the following items:

1. Total time deposits, as defined in clause (b) of this section.

2. The amounts due it on demand from banks other than its reserve depositaries, including foreign exchange balances, credited to it and subject to draft.

3. The excess due it from reserve depositaries over the amount required to maintain its total reserves.

The whole of such reserve fund may, and at least one-third thereof must consist of either lawful money of the United States, gold certificates, silver certificates, notes or bills issued by any lawfully organized national banking association or federal reserve bank.

One-third, or any less part thereof, may consist of bonds which are the absolute unpledged property of the state bank at the date of the approval of this act and are issued by the United States or the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or issued in compliance with law by any county, city, borough, township or school district of this commonwealth, computed at their market value, not exceeding their par value.

The balance of said reserve fund, over and above the part consisting of any of the items hereinbefore enumerated, may consist of moneys on deposit, subject to call, in any state bank, trust company or national bank in the state of Pennsylvania or in any other state, which depositary shall have been approved by the Commissioner.

Note:—This is derived from sections 1 and 2 of the act of May 8, 1907 (P. L. 189; 6 Purd. 7491), amended by the act of July 11, 1917 (P. L. 791). The definition of demand deposits is taken from section 19 of the Federal Reserve Act as amended; national banks have been added to the list of depositaries; and some changes in phraseology have been made.

(b) Reserve Against Time Deposits.—Every state bank receiving time deposits of money (which are hereby defined to comprise all deposits payable after thirty days, all savings accounts and certificates of deposit which are subject to not less than thirty days notice before payment, and all postal savings deposits) shall, at all times, have on hand a reserve fund of at least seven and one-half per centum of the aggregate of all its time deposits. Such reserve fund shall be made up in the manner provided by clause (a) of this section for the reserve against demand liabilities.

Note:—This takes the place of section 3 of the act of May 8, 1907 (6 Purd. 7482), as amended by the act of July 11, 1917 (P. L. 791). The definition of time deposits is taken from section 19 of the Federal Reserve Act as amended.

(c) No Reserve Against Government Deposits Secured by Pledge.—No reserve fund shall be required against deposits made by the federal or state government or by any municipality of this state, which are secured by the pledge of securities by the state bank, provided such securities are of kinds which might legally constitute part of the reserve fund of the bank under the provisions of this section, or are approved by the Commissioner.

Note:—The propriety of this new provision is evident.

(d) Deficiency in Reserve Fund.—If the total reserve fund of any state bank shall be less than the amount required by this section, such bank shall not, while such deficiency exists, increase its liabilities or make purchases of any character otherwise than by dealing in bills of exchange payable at sight.

The Commissioner shall notify any such state bank to make good its reserve fund. If the total reserve fund remains one per cent. or more below the amount required for a period exceeding ten days, the Commissioner may levy an assessment upon the state bank during the period for which the deficiency exists at the rate of six per cent. per annum of any such deficiency not exceeding two per cent. of the deposits, eight per cent. per annum of the amount of any additional deficiency not exceeding three per cent. of such deposits, ten per cent. per annum of the amount of any additional deficiency not exceeding four per cent. of such deposits, and twelve per cent. per annum of the amount of any additional deficiency above four per cent. of such deposits.

Note:—This is founded in part on section 5 of the act of 1907 (6 Purd. 1494). The provisions as to assessments are new.

Section 5 of the act of 1907 provides that if the bank shall fail for thirty days to make good the reserve fund, the Commissioner may proceed against it as provided in section 9 of the act of February 11, 1895, creating the Banking Department, namely, by a receivership.

Section 6 of the act of 1907 provided for the creation of the reserve fund in fractional parts at dates named. No similar provision is necessary in this Code.

(e) Membership in Federal Reserve Bank.—Any state bank becoming a member of a Federal Reserve Bank, as provided in clause (k) of section 95 of this act, and complying with the reserve requirements of the "Federal Reserve Act" and its supplements shall be relieved from compliance with the provisions of this section.

Note:—This is the substance of section 3 of the act of July 17, 1917 (P. L. 1021).

Section 104. Deposits in Other Banks.

(a) Unauthorized Deposits to Constitute Loans.—The deposits of funds by a state bank in any other bank, not duly designated as a depository by the board of directors of the depositing bank and approved as such by the Commissioner, shall be held to be a loan, and, as such, subject to the restrictions of section 96 of this act.

(b) Limitation of Deposits.—No state bank shall deposit as a reserve or otherwise in any bank an amount in excess of fifty per cent. of the capital and surplus of such depository bank, except pursuant to a resolution of the board of directors of the depositing bank.

(c) Selection of Reserve Depositories.—Whenever a state bank selects and other bank as a depository for its reserve, such selection shall be evidenced by the approval in writing, or by a vote of a majority of the directors, spread upon the minutes of the depositing bank. In case any director of such bank is an officer or director owning ten per cent. or more of the capital stock of the proposed depository bank, he shall not be qualified to vote in favor of the selection of such depository.

Note:—This section is new.

Section 105. Liabilities and Assets.

(a) Limitation.—No state bank shall at any time be indebted or in any way liable to an amount exceeding the amount of its capital stock at such time actually paid in and remaining undiminished by losses or otherwise, except on account of demands of the nature following:

1. Moneys deposited with or collected by the bank.
2. Bills of exchange or drafts drawn against money actually on deposit to the credit of the bank, or due thereto.
3. Liabilities created by the endorsement of accepted bills of exchange, actually owned and discounted by the endorsing bank.
4. Liabilities to the stockholders of the bank for dividends, surplus and undivided profits.
5. Rediscounts or borrowing of money during any continuous period not exceeding three months in any year; and, if the state bank is a member of the federal reserve system, liabilities incurred under the provisions of the "Federal Reserve Act."

Note:—This is derived from section 5202 of the Revised Statutes as amended in 1918 and 1919. It takes the place of section 17 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 435) and sections 1 and 2 of the act of April 22, 1854 (P. L. 467; 1 Purd. 435).

(b) Reports and Accounts.

1. Liabilities to be Set Out in Full.—In all reports furnished to the Commissioner, the courts of law or other supervisory authorities, the aggregate of the liabilities of a state bank to depositors shall be set out in full; and it shall not be lawful to reduce the same for the purpose of concealing unadjusted losses, overdrafts, expense charges, or loans, all of which shall be set out in accounts, separate and apart, on the books and reports until adjusted or charged off, and not debited, in any manner whatever, against deposits, or other credits for which the state bank may be liable.

Note:—This is derived from section 2 of the act of June 12, 1907 (P. L. 525; 6 Purd. 7492), limiting the application to banks only.

2. Loans to be Set Out in Full.—Whenever any state bank shall borrow money, the amount of such liability, together with assets assigned or guaranteed for a loan or sale of rediscounts, shall be set out in full on the books and in all reports required by law.

Note:—This is founded on a part of section 3 of the act of 1907 (6 Purd. 7492).

3. Concealment of Assets.—It shall not be lawful for any state bank to conceal any of its assets in any manner whatsoever, but a true record shall be kept of the same. No state bank shall by any system of accounting or any device of bookkeeping, directly or indirectly, enter any of its assets on its books in the name of any other person or corporation, or under any title or designation that is not truly descriptive thereof.

Note:—The first sentence is derived from part of section 3 of the act of 1907 (6 Purd. 7492). The second sentence is new.

4. Book Value of Real Estate.—No state bank shall, except with the written approval of the Commissioner, enter or at any time carry on its books any real estate owned by it at a valuation exceeding its actual cost to the bank.

Note:—This and the next sub-clause are new. The penal provisions of sections 4 and 5 of the act of 1907 (6 Purd. 7492-3), for violations of provisions of the act, are recommended for repeal so far as they relate to banks.

5. Methods of Bookkeeping.—Every state bank shall conform its methods of keeping its books and records to such general rules and regulations and such special orders as the Commissioner may from time to time make and promulgate in conformity to law.

Note:—This clause is new.

Section 106. Amortization of Securities.—The securities purchased by a state bank shall be entered on its books at the actual cost thereof, and for the purpose of calculating the undivided profits applicable to the payment of dividends, such securities shall not be estimated at a valuation exceeding their present cost as determined by amortization, that is, by deducting from the cost of any such security purchased for a sum in excess of the amount payable thereon at maturity, and charging to profit and loss, a sufficient sum to bring the security to par at maturity, or by adding to the cost of any such security purchased at less than the amount payable thereon at maturity, and crediting to profit and loss, a sufficient sum to bring the security to par at maturity; provided the market value of such securities is equal to their present cost as determined by amortization. Nothing herein contained shall prevent a state bank from carrying such securities on its books at their market value.

Note:—This section is new.

Section 107. Surplus Fund.—Every state bank shall create a fund to be known as a surplus fund, which fund may be created or increased by contributions, or by transfers from undivided profits, or from net earnings. such fund, up to twenty-five per centum of the capital of the bank, shall be used only for the payment of losses in excess of undivided profits.

Note:—This section is new.

Section 108. Dividends.

(a) Determination of Gross Earnings.—To determine the amount of gross earnings of a state bank for any dividend period, the following items may be included:

1. All earnings actually received during such period, less interest accrued and unpaid included in the last previous calculation of earnings.

2. Interest accrued and unpaid upon debts owing to it secured by collateral, upon which no default of more than one year exists, and upon bonds or other interest-bearing obligations owned by it, upon which no default of more than six months exists.

3. The sums added to the cost of securities purchased for less than par as a result of amortization, provided the market value of such securities is at least equal to their present cost as determined by amortization.

4. Any profits actually received during such period from the sales of securities, real estate or other property owned by it.

5. Sums recovered on items previously charged off, and any amount allowed by the Commissioner on account of assets previously allowed and charged off.

6. Provided the Commissioner shall have approved, and only to the extent of such approval, any actual increase over the book value of real estate owned by it.

Note:—This and the clause next following are new.

(b) Determination of Net Earnings.—To determine the amount of net earnings of a state bank for any dividend period, the following items shall be deducted from the gross earnings:

1. All expenses paid or incurred, both ordinary and extraordinary, in the transaction of its business, the collection of its debts and the management of its affairs, less expenses incurred and interest accrued upon its debts deducted at the last previous calculation of net earnings for dividend purposes.

2. Interest paid or accrued and unpaid upon debts owing by it.

3. The amounts deducted through amortization from the cost of bonds or other interest-bearing obligations purchased above par, in order to bring them to par at maturity.

4. All losses sustained by it. In the computation of such losses, there shall be included such assets as shall have been disallowed by the Commissioner or by the board of directors of the bank.

The balance thus obtained shall constitute the net earnings of the state bank for such period.

(c) Determination of Undivided Profits.—When the net earnings of a state bank have been determined at the close of a dividend period, as provided in clause (b) of this section, if the surplus fund does not equal twenty-five per centum of the capital of the bank, one-tenth of such net earnings shall be credited to the surplus fund, or so much of such net earnings, less than one-tenth, as will make such surplus fund equal twenty-five per centum of such capital. The balance of such net earnings, or the entire amount if such surplus fund equals twenty-five per centum of the capital, may be credited to the profit and loss account of the bank; or, if its expenses and losses for such dividend period exceed its gross earnings, such excess shall be charged to its profit and loss account. The credit balance of such account shall constitute the undivided profits at the close of such dividend period, and shall be available for dividends.

Note:—This clause is new.

(d) Declaration and Payment of Dividends.—The directors of any state bank may annually, semi-annually or quarterly in each year, but not more frequently, declare such dividends as they shall judge expedient from the undivided profits ascertained as provided in clause (c) of this section, and pay the same to the stockholders, on demand, at any time not exceeding thirty days after any such dividend is declared.

No state bank shall declare, credit or pay any dividend to its stockholders except out of undivided profits ascertained as above provided; and in case the reserves required by law to be maintained by such bank against deposits are not in hand, no dividend shall be declared until such reserves shall have been made good.

If the directors of any state bank shall declare, credit or pay any dividend in violation of the provisions of this clause, the directors consenting thereto shall be jointly and severally liable in an action of assumpsit or bill in equity, in their individual capacities, to the bank, for the amount of such dividends; and each director present at the meeting when any such dividend shall be declared shall be adjudged consenting thereto, unless he shall forthwith cause his protest to be entered on the minutes of the board and give notice to the Commissioner.

Note:—The first paragraph is derived from section 16 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 403), with a change from fifteen to thirty days for the time of payment. The second paragraph and part of the third are new and the remainder of the third paragraph is derived from section 16 of the act of 1876, with changes of language and the substitution of notice to the Commissioner for public notice to the stockholders.

This and the preceding clause take the place of section 24 of the act of 1876 (1 Purd. 405) and Article XII of section 10 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 428), so far as they relate to dividends.

(e) Statement by Cashier or Treasurer.—On each dividend day, the cashier or treasurer of every state bank shall furnish to the board of directors a full and explicit statement, certified by him to be correct, of the condition of the bank as it shall be on the last day of the period for which a dividend is to be declared, and showing all items required by this section to be considered by the board of directors in determining whether a dividend is to be declared and the amount thereof.

Note:—This takes the place of section 17 of the act of 1876 (Purd. 404), which enumerates the items to be shown in the cashier's statement.

ARTICLE V. TRUST COMPANIES.

Section 109. General Powers, Limitations and Regulations.—A trust company incorporated under the provisions of this act or accepting its provisions as provided in section 6 of this act shall have the general corporate powers enumerated in section 81, and shall have the powers and privileges and be subject to the limitations and regulations given to and imposed upon state banks by the provisions of Article IV of this act.

Note:—So far as the banking business is concerned, this section puts trust companies on an equal footing with state banks, including the discount privilege. Under the Code, trust companies will, to all intents and purposes, be state banks with the additional powers conferred by the subsequent sections of this Article.

Section 110. Powers of Trust Companies in Addition to Those of State Banks.—A trust company incorporated under the provisions of this act, or accepting its provisions as provided in section 6 of this act, shall have the following powers in addition to those conferred by Article IV of this act:

(a) To act as Fiduciary.—To act as assignee, receiver, guardian, committee, executor, administrator or trustee, and take, accept and execute trusts of every description and act in any fiduciary capacity not inconsistent with the laws of this state or of the United States.

(b) To act as Agent for Fiduciary.—To act as agent for any executor, administrator, guardian, trustee or other fiduciary in the business of the trust estate.

(c) To act as Registrar of Stock, Etc.—To act as agent for the purpose of issuing, countersigning or registering the certificates of stock, bonds or other obligations of any corporation, association or municipality, state or public authority, and to receive and manage any sinking fund thereof on such terms as may be agreed upon.

(d) To become Surety on Fiduciary Bonds.—To become sole surety in any case where by law one or more sureties are or may be required for the faithful performance of the duties of any assignee, receiver, guardian, committee, executor, administrator, trustee or other fiduciary.

(e) To become Surety on Court Bonds.—To become sole surety upon any writ of error or appeal, or in any proceeding instituted in any court of this commonwealth, in which security is or may be required: Provided, That nothing in this clause shall be construed to dispense with the approval of any court or officer now or hereafter required by law to approve such security.

(f) To Act as Agent or Attorney-in-Fact.—To act as agent or attorney-in-fact in the purchase and sale of real estate, in the collection of rents and the management thereof, and in the making of investments in stocks, bonds or other securities, the custody thereof, the collection and disbursement of principal and income therefrom, and the sale, transfer or other disposal thereof.

(g) To Issue Debentures and Guarantee Mortgages.—To execute and issue its debentures payable at a future date and pledge for the payment thereof bonds secured by mortgages on real estate; and to guarantee the payment of principal and interest of bonds secured by mortgages upon real estate, and to make and execute such contracts and policies as may be required therefor.

(h) To Hold Stocks of Other Corporations.—To hold stocks in corporations when such stocks are taken and received by the trust company in payment for services rendered or as part consideration in the purchase of the obligations of such corporations.

(i) To hold Stocks of Title Insurance and Surety Companies.—To hold, when a trust company has a capital and surplus of not less than one million dollars, stock of

1. A company organized to engage chiefly in the insurance of owners of real estate, mortgagees and others interested in real estate from loss by reason of defective titles, liens and encumbrances.

2. A company organized to engage chiefly in the insurance of the fidelity of officials and employees.

3. A company organized to engage chiefly in guaranteeing the payment of the principal and interest on bonds secured by mortgages upon real estate.

(j) Incidental Powers.—To exercise any and all such incidental powers as shall be necessary to carry on the business of a trust company.

Note:—This takes the place of the following acts and parts of acts which enumerate the powers of title insurance and trust companies: Section 1 of the act of June 11, 1885 (P. L. 111; 4 Purd. 4828); Section 1 of the act of May 9, 1889 (P. L. 159; 4 Purd. 4761); Section 1 of the act of May 29, 1895 (P. L. 127; 4 Purd. 4762); Section 1 of the act of June 27, 1895 (P. L. 399; 4 Purd. 4829-30-32); Section 1 of the act of April 21, 1903 (P. L. 223; 4 Purd. 4830-32).

The title insurance business is covered by Sections 117-118 of this Article, the power to act as surety is restricted to fiduciary bonds and court bonds; and clause (i) is new.

Section 111. Restrictions on Powers, Loans and Investments.—

(a) Limitation of Power to Become Surety.—A trust company heretofore incorporated under any general or special act of assembly or hereafter incorporated under this act shall not become surety except as specified in clauses (d) and (e) of section 110 of this act.

(b) Limitation of Investment in Stocks of Certain Corporations.—Such trust company shall not hold at any one time investments of more than ten per cent. of its capital and surplus in the stocks of any or all of the following corporations:

1. A company organized to engage chiefly in the insurance of owners of real estate, mortgagees and others interested in real estate from loss by reason of defective titles, liens and encumbrances.

2. A company organized to engage chiefly in the insurance of the fidelity of officials and employees.

3. A company organized to engage chiefly in guaranteeing the payment of the principal and interest of bonds secured by mortgages upon real estate.

(c) Certain Stocks Not to be Held More than Five Years.—Such trust company shall not hold for a longer period than five years, without the written approval of the Commissioner, the stock of any corporation which has been acquired by the trust company as compensation for services or as part consideration in the purchase of the obligations of such corporations.

(d) Limitations of Debentures and Guarantees of Mortgages.—Such trust company shall not at any one time have issued and outstanding its debentures secured by mortgages upon real estate or its guarantees of the payment of bonds secured by mortgages on real estate:

1. To an amount exceeding three times the amount of its capital and surplus.

2. The maturities of which falling due in any one calendar year exceed twenty-five per cent. of the amount of its capital and surplus.

3. To an amount at any time exceeding the face value of mortgages pledged for the payment of such debentures.

(e) Limitation of Investment in Mortgages.—No such trust company shall be permitted to invest to an amount exceeding twenty-five per cent. of its total assets, except with the written approval of the Commissioner, in mortgages other than such as are pledged by it to secure its outstanding debentures: Provided, That this restriction shall not prevent a trust company from making and holding in its own name mortgages upon real estate, to any amount, when such loans are for the amount of trust estates managed by such company.

(f) Restrictions Not Retroactive.—No restriction imposed by this section shall be construed to render unlawful the continued holding by any trust company of any stocks, securities or real estate lawfully acquired prior to the date of the approval of this act.

(g) Protection against Loss on Previous Loan or Investment.—No restriction imposed by this section shall be construed to prevent a trust company, in order to protect itself from loss upon a loan or investment previously made in good faith, from taking and holding any kind of property or security. Any of its own capital stock so acquired shall be sold within one year, and any other property so acquired, which is not otherwise lawful for the trust company to hold, shall be sold within five years, unless the Commissioner shall give written consent to a longer holding.

Note:—This section follows, in general, the plan of Section 96 of this Code relating to state banks.

Section 112. Estoppel to Deny Power to Execute Surety Bonds.—No trust company having signed a bond, undertaking or obligation as surety, shall be permitted to deny its corporate power to execute such instrument or incur such liability, in any proceeding to enforce liability against it thereunder.

Note:—This is founded on section 4 of the act of June 26, 1895 (P. L. 343; 4 Purd. 4522), relating to surety companies, with some modification of the language.

Section 113. Capital Taken as Security.—Whenever a trust company shall receive and accept the office or appointment to act in any fiduciary capacity or be directed to execute any trust whatever, the capital of such company shall be taken and considered as the security required by law for the faithful performance of its duties, and shall be absolutely liable in case of any default whatever; and no other or further form of bond or obligation shall be required to be given by it.

Note:—This is Clause II of the act of June 27, 1895 (P. L. 401; 4 Purd. 4831), with some changes in wording and the addition of the last clause.

Section 114. Officers Qualified to Make Oath.—In all cases where a trust company is or shall be charged with the execution of any trust, the president, vice-president, trust officer, assistant trust officer, secretary, assistant secretary, or treasurer or assistant treasurer of such company shall be empowered to make the usual oath or affirmation directed to be taken by private persons in like cases.

Note:—This follows the provisions of the act of February 16, 1877 (P. L. 3; 4 Purd. 4923), omitting the word "actuary," since this position does not exist in modern trust companies, and adding the assistants. The act of 1877 was repealed by the Fiduciaries Act of 1917 so far as it related to trusts within the jurisdiction of the orphans' court. It may now be repealed absolutely.

Section 115. Trust Funds to be Kept Separate.—Every trust company, national bank or other corporation doing a trust company business or acting in any fiduciary capacity in this commonwealth shall keep all trust funds and investments separate and apart from the assets of such corporation; and all investments made by it as fiduciary shall be so designated that the trust to which each such investment belongs shall be clearly known: Provided, That every such corporation shall have the right to clear receipts and payments of trust moneys in the regular course of business in the same manner as other funds held by it; And Provided Further, That participation in a general trust fund of legal trust investments may be assigned by such corporation to various estates; in which case it shall be a sufficient compliance with the provisions of this section for the corporation to designate clearly on its records the securities composing such general trust fund, the names of the trust estates participating therein and the amounts of the respective participations; and in such case no estate so participating shall be deemed to have individual ownership in any specific security in such fund, and the corporation shall have the right at any time to repurchase at market value, but not less than cost price, and in the case of mortgages not less than face value, any such securities from such fund with the right to substitute therefor other legal trust investments at market prices.

Note:—The first part of this section is derived from clause V of Section 1 of the act of June 27, 1895 (P. L. 399; 4 Purd. 4832). The first proviso, which is new, is in accord with the practice which has been followed for years as the simplest method of handling such matters, in order to prevent undue publicity being given to the affairs of trust estates. The second proviso, which is also new, is in accord with a practice recognized by the courts, and enables trust companies to handle investments to the advantage of the trust estates in a way not possible if absolutely separate investments must be made for each trust.

Section 116. Supervision by Court.—Whenever any court shall appoint a trust company, a national bank or any other corporation to act in any fiduciary capacity, such court shall have the right to make or cause to be made an audit or examination of the affairs of any specific trust in the care of such fiduciary: Provided, however, That such court may at any time at its discretion issue under its seal a mandate to the Commissioner, directing him to forward to said court a certified copy of the last report of such corporation filed in his office, which copy shall be filed and kept in the records of the judges of the court, not in the public records, as confidential information for the guidance of the judges; or, at the time any court shall approve any corporation generally to act in fiduciary matters under the control of such court, the court may in its discretion issue under its seal a mandate to the Commissioner directing him to forward to the court such certified copy of the last report of such corporation filed in his office, or requiring him as Commissioner to make or cause to be made through his department and investigation of the affairs and management of such corporation, and to report to the court the manner in which its investments are made and the security afforded to those by or for whom its engagements are held. Any such reports shall be filed and kept in the records of the judges of the court, not in the public records, as confidential information for the guidance of the judges.

Any and all expense of such examination or the preparation of such certified copies of reports shall be defrayed by the corporation so examined or reported upon.

Note:—This takes the place of Clause IV of the act of June 27, 1895, amended by the act of June 7, 1907 (P. L. 454; 7 Purd. 7697). The feeling of the Commission is that since trust companies are under the supervision of the Banking Department, the examination of their assets in order to determine the security afforded by the capital of such companies in lieu of the bonds required of individuals can properly be secured by the courts from the Commissioner, but that the copies of reports should not be made parts of the public records of the courts.

Section 117. Powers as to Title Insurance.—Every trust company which at the date of the adoption of this act lawfully possesses the power of insuring owners of real estate, mortgagees, and others interested in real estate from loss by reason of defective title, liens and encumbrances shall continue to possess such power; but no other trust company shall hereafter have or exercise such power.

Note:—The Commissioners are of opinion that the business of insuring titles should not, in future, be carried on by companies acting as fiduciaries. The right of existing trust companies to continue to do a title insurance business is expressly preserved by this section; and a method by which new trust companies may carry on that business by means of a separate corporation is indicated in clause (1) of section 110 of this Code.

By the repeal of the acts giving trust company powers to title insurance companies incorporated under the act of 1874, while leaving in force the original provisions of the act of 1874, this Code does not interfere with the future incorporation of companies to do a title insurance business only.

Section 118. Title Insurance Reserve.

(a) Reserve Fund Required.—All companies heretofore or which may hereafter be incorporated for the insurance of owners of real estate, mortgagees and others interested in real estate from loss by reason of defective titles, liens and encumbrances, as well as all title insurance and trust companies heretofore incorporated and authorized by charter or by law to carry on said business, shall from and after the approval of this act establish and maintain a reserve fund for the protection of policy holders, in the manner herein provided.

(b) Establishment and Maintenance of Fund.—Said reserve shall be established by setting aside a sum equal to twenty-five per cent. of the premium, (that is, the sum charged for insurance over and above examination fees) paid on each policy of insurance which such company may hereafter issue. Said twenty-five per cent. of each premium shall be known as the reserve, and the aggregate of said reserves of all policies issued and outstanding shall be known as the reserve fund. The reserve of each policy issued shall be maintained so long as liability on said policy shall be outstanding.

(c) Custody; Supervision by Commissioner.—The custody of said reserve fund shall be retained by the company and the fund shall be kept separate and apart from the other assets of the company in the manner hereinafter provided. The Commissioner is hereby required from time to time to make investigation to ascertain that a reserve fund equal to twenty-five per cent. of the premiums of all policies outstanding is so maintained. Should any company neglect or refuse to establish or maintain such reserve fund as herein provided, the Commissioner shall by an order under his hand and seal of office direct said company either to comply with the provisions of this section or to discontinue doing a title insurance business.

(d) Investment of Reserve Fund.—Said title insurance reserve fund shall be invested by such companies in first mortgages or other securities designated by law as legal investments for trust funds, and such investment of any accumulated reserve shall be made not less frequently than once in each calendar month.

Said mortgages or other such securities so held shall be carried at cost price, but in no case at less than market price, and in case there shall be a depreciation in the market price of any such securities, such company shall make good any such depreciation by the addition of other securities of like kind, so that the said fund may always be maintained at the full amount required by clause (a) of this section. Such companies shall have the right to withdraw from said fund any mortgages or other securities so held therein by crediting the fund the amount at which such mortgages or securities are valued therein, provided there are immediately substituted therefor other first mortgages or other securities designated by law as legal investments for trust funds.

The securities constituting a reserve shall be ear-marked and kept separate and apart from the other assets of the company.

(e) Cancellation of Policy.—Whenever any policy of title insurance hereafter issued is surrendered by the holder, cancelled or liability thereon completely discharged, the Commissioner is authorized to permit the company to withdraw the reserve therefor, or to credit the same against reserves that may be due.

(f) Reserve Fund to be a Trust Fund.—It is the intent and purpose of this section that the reserve fund hereby directed to be set aside shall constitute a separate and distinct trust fund for the protection of policy holders and shall not be subject to distribution among depositors or other creditors, until all policy holders have been paid in full or the liability on the policies, contingent or actual, has been completely discharged.

(g) Reinsurance by Commissioner.—In the event of the Commissioner's taking possession of and winding up any company, the Commissioner is authorized, if it shall seem advisable and practicable to him, to use the entire reserve fund to purchase reinsurance for the liabilities represented by the policies outstanding against such fund. Acceptance of the policy of the reinsuring company shall operate as a complete discharge of liability under the policy of the insolvent company. Should any policy holder refuse to accept the policy of the reinsuring company, he shall only be entitled to receive the pro rata portion of his reserve that shall remain upon distribution as set forth in clause (h) of this section.

(h) Distribution of Reserve Fund.—The reserve fund in the custody of the Commissioner shall be liable only to the following claims.

1. To pay all outstanding claims of indemnity that have arisen by virtue of any policies of insurance.

2. For the purchase of reinsurance to indemnify and protect the remaining outstanding policies.

3. To distribute among policy holders upon cancellation of their policies the proportionate share of the reserve to which they are entitled, which shall in no case exceed the proportion which the premium paid for any such policy may bear to the whole amount of title insurance then outstanding.

Note:—This section is drafted in accordance with suggestions received by the Commission at their meeting at Pittsburgh. Under the present law, if a title insurance company becomes insolvent, the policy holders are merely general creditors and as such postponed to depositors. It seems, therefore, only proper that some provision should be made to safeguard policy holders, at least to the extent of a portion of the premium paid by them for protection. The suggestion of some title companies that liability on these policies is remote because doubtful titles are not insured is answered by the fact that within the past few years, both in Philadelphia and in Pittsburgh, defects in titles have arisen, due in some cases to negligent examination of title, and in others to failure to discharge liens.

The New York plan, requiring each title company to set aside as a reserve two-thirds of its capital and surplus, would not be practical in Pennsylvania, where most of the title companies transact a banking business, and so large a proportion of their capital and surplus could not be withdrawn without crippling their right to do banking. New York has taken the farther step of placing title insurance companies under the supervision of the Insurance Commissioner.

Section 119. Acquisition of Trust Company Powers by State Banks.—Any state bank incorporated prior to the date of the approval of this act, accepting the provisions of this act and of the constitution of the commonwealth as provided in section 6 hereof, and any state bank incorporated under the provisions of this act, if it has a capital at least equal to the capital required by section 62 of this act for the incorporation of a trust company in the city, borough or township where the principal place of business of such state bank is located, may, by special permission of the Commissioner, obtain all the powers and become subject to all the restrictions, limitations and regulations of this Article relating to trust companies.

Such special permission may be obtained upon compliance with such rules and regulations as the Commissioner may prescribe; and no trust company powers shall be exercised by any such bank until after a certified copy of such permission shall have been recorded in the office of the recorder or deeds in the manner provided by section 87, clause (a) of this act, relating to amendments of charters.

Note:—This takes the place of the act of July 17, 1919 (P. L. 1032), the repeal of which is recommended.

Section 120. Trust Companies Not to Draft Wills, Etc.—

(a) Company Not to Act as Fiduciary Under Documents Prepared by it.—No trust company or other corporation doing or authorized to do a trust company business or acting or authorized to act in any fiduciary capacity in this Commonwealth, shall be qualified or have power to act in any fiduciary capacity when the will, deed or other instrument appointing it shall have been prepared, written, drafted or transcribed by any officer, agent or employee of such trust company or bank.

(b) Officers, etc., Forbidden to Prepare Such Documents.—No officer, agent or employee of any such trust company or other corporation shall prepare, write, draft or transcribe, directly or indirectly, any will, deed or other instrument, wherein such trust company or other corporation, is appointed, or named as executor, guardian trustee, assignee, or in any other fiduciary capacity. Any person violating the provisions of this clause shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be subject to a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars and to imprisonment, in default of payment of fine, not exceeding one month.

(c) Exceptions.—The provisions of clauses (a) and (b) of this section shall not be construed to apply to the will of any officer, agent or employee of such trust company or other corporation, nor to any deed or other instrument executed by such officer, agent or employee, nor to any will, deed or other instrument executed prior to the date of the approval of this Act, nor to any will, deed or other instrument drafted by a practising attorney-at-law, retained or employed by a client for whom the instrument is drawn.

Note:—This section resembles similar legislation in the banking codes of New York, Missouri and other states. While the court in Gauler vs. Trust Company, 28 W. N. C. 208, 9 Pa. C. C. 634, expressly decided that title and trust companies "had no right whatever to do conveyancing, draw deeds, write wills or the like and their conduct in this respect was a usurpation on the Commonwealth," no effective method would seem to exist under the present law to stop that practice except, perhaps, quo warranto which, it is submitted, is too extreme a punishment.

ARTICLE VI. SAVINGS BANKS.

Section 121. General Powers.—A savings bank incorporated under the provisions of this act or accepting its provisions as provided in section 6 of this act shall, in addition to the general corporate powers enumerated in section 81, have the following additional powers:

(a) To receive money on deposit and to invest the same.

(b) To purchase and hold for investment:

1. Bonds or other interest-bearing obligations of the United States or those for which the faith of the United States is pledged to provide payment of the principal and interest thereof.

2. Farm loan bonds issued by Federal Land Banks.

3. Bonds or other interest-bearing obligations of the state of Pennsylvania or of any state of the United States.

4. Bonds or other interest-bearing obligations of any county, city, borough, township or school district of the state of Pennsylvania.

(c) To purchase and hold for investment bonds and mortgages on unincumbered improved real estate situated in the state of Pennsylvania and ground rents issuing out of such real estate.

(d) To make loans on the security of bonds and mortgages on unincumbered improved real estate situated in the state of Pennsylvania.

(e) To purchase, hold and convey real estate as follows:

1. Such as shall be necessary for its accommodation in the transaction of its business.

2. Such as it shall purchase at sales under judgments, decrees or mortgages held by it.

(f) To improve any real estate held by it for its accommodation in the transaction of its business by erecting a building or buildings or by renewing or replacing any building or buildings thereon with a new or additional structure; to use such portion thereof for the transaction of its business as may be suitable and convenient for that purpose; and to lease and let, from time to time, such portion and apartments of such building or buildings as it may not require for its business and to receive rents for the use thereof.

(g) To purchase and hold bankers' acceptances and bills of exchange of the kind and maturities made eligible by law for rediscount with Federal Reserve Banks.

(h) To exercise any and all such incidental powers as shall be necessary to carry on the business of a savings bank.

Note:—Clause (a) is derived from section 15 of the Savings Bank Act of May 20, 1889 (P. L. 246; 1 Purd. 455), and clause (b) from section 17 of that act, with the addition of farm loan bonds and the omission of bonds of municipalities outside of Pennsylvania. The limitation of investments in bonds of other states to those states which have not within ten years made default in payment of principal or interest is also omitted as unnecessary. Clause (c) is also derived from section 17, with the addition of ground rents.

Clause (d) permits loans on mortgage. Clause (e) follows the provisions of section 8 of the act of 1889, omitting the second clause of that section which is covered by clause (d).

Clause (f) corresponds to the similar provision as to state banks in section 95, clause (h) of this Code. Clause (g) is new; and clause (h) is derived from section 6 of the act of 1889.

Section 122. Restrictions on Loans, Investments and Real Estate Holdings.

(a) Loans on Commercial Paper.—Except as provided in clause (g) of section 121 of this act, no savings bank shall lend the money deposited with it, or any part thereof, upon notes, bills of exchange or drafts, or discount any such notes, bills of exchange or drafts.

Note:—This is the first part of section 19 of the act of 1889, except as modified by the provision as to section 121, clause (g) of this Code permitting the purchase of bankers' acceptances and bills of exchange.

(b) Loans on Mortgage.—A savings bank shall not purchase and hold for investment mortgages, or loan to any one person or corporation upon the security of mortgage, upon real estate of any one person or corporation to an amount exceeding at any time five per cent. of the total amount of deposits of such savings bank at the time such a purchase or loan is made.

A savings bank shall not loan upon the security of real estate or purchase a mortgage secured upon real estate unless a bond accompanying the same shall be given by the borrower or the owner of the property, and all the expenses of searches, examinations, certificates of title, appraisal of value or title insurance, and of drawing, perfecting and recording papers shall be paid by such borrower.

Whenever buildings are included in the valuation of any such real estate, they shall be insured against fire by the borrower in a company or companies approved by the savings bank, and the policy or policies of insurance shall be duly assigned to the savings bank or the loss made payable to it as its interest may appear. The savings bank may renew such policy or policies from year to year, or for a longer or shorter time, in case the borrower or the owner of the property shall neglect to do so, and may charge the amount paid to said borrower or owner. All necessary charges and expenses so paid by the savings bank shall be repaid to it by the borrower or the owner of the property and shall be a lien upon the property mortgaged, recoverable with interest from the time of payment as part of the money secured to be paid by such mortgage. The amount of insurance to be carried as aforesaid shall be equal to eighty per cent. of the valuation of such buildings, provided such amount does not exceed the amount of the mortgage.

Note:—This is derived from sections 19 and 20 of the act of 1889, except as to the first two paragraphs, which are new.

(c) Investments in and Title to Real Estate.—A savings bank shall not,

1. Hold or carry title to any real estate owned by it in the name of any other person or corporation.

2. Invest in any real estate for its own accommodation in the transaction of its business, or partly so used and leased to others, a sum of money exceeding in the aggregate at any one time fifty per cent. of the amount of its surplus fund without the written approval of the Commissioner.

3. Hold possession of any real estate by virtue of a mortgage at any one time fifty per cent. of the amount of its by it, except such as may be necessary for its accommodation in the transaction of its business, or partly so used and partly leased to others, for a longer period than five years without the written approval of the Commissioner: Provided, That this restriction shall not apply to any real estate held by any savings bank before the date of the approval of this act.

Note:—This follows the provisions of the first three sub-clauses of section 96, clause (d) of this Code, except that, in sub-clause 2, fifty per cent. of the surplus fund is substituted for fifty per cent. of the capital and surplus.

(d) Purchases of Acceptances and Bills of Exchange:

1. A savings bank shall not purchase and hold bankers' acceptances and bills of exchange unless the same are accepted by a state bank or trust company incorporated under the laws of this commonwealth or by a national banking association having its principal place of business in this commonwealth.

2. A savings bank shall not purchase and hold bankers' acceptances or bills of exchange in an amount exceeding at any one time twenty per cent. of the total amount of deposits of such savings bank.

3. A savings bank shall not purchase and hold the acceptances of any state bank, trust company or national banking association to an amount exceeding at any one time twenty-five per cent. of the paid-up capital and surplus of such acceptor.

Note:—This new clause limits the power given by clause (g) of section 121 of this Code.

(e) Protection against Loss on Previous Loan or Investment.—No restriction imposed by this section shall be construed to prevent a savings bank, in order to protect itself from loss upon a loan or investment previously made in good faith, from taking and holding any kind of property or security. Any property so acquired, unless of a character to be a legal investment for such savings bank, shall be sold by it within five years, unless the Commissioner shall give written consent to a longer holding.

Note:—This corresponds to clause (g) of section 96 of this Code, relating to state banks.

(f) Property or Securities Acquired before Approval of Act. No restriction imposed by this section shall be construed to render unlawful the continued holding of any loans, securities or real estate lawfully acquired prior to the date of the approval of this act.

Note:—This corresponds to clause (h) of section 96 of this Code, relating to state banks.

Section 123. Trustees.

(a) Incorporators to be First Board of Trustees. The persons named in the certificate of incorporation of a savings bank, as provided by clause (b) of section 67 of this act, shall be the first trustees of such savings bank and shall have the entire management and control of all its affairs, subject to the provisions of this act.

Note:—This is derived from section 9 of the act of 1889.

(b) Filling Vacancies; Eligibility. All vacancies in the board of trustees of a savings bank by death, resignation or otherwise, shall be filled by the board as soon as practicable at a regular meeting after such vacancies occur.

No person shall be elected to fill such a vacancy unless he shall be a citizen of the United States and a bona fide resident of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania; and removal from the state by any trustee so elected shall vacate his office.

Note:—The first paragraph is derived from section 11 of the act of 1889, and the second from section 28 of that act, with the addition of the provision as to citizenship.

(c) Change in Number of Trustees.—Subject to the approval of the Commissioner, the board of trustees of any savings bank may, by resolution adopted by a majority of the board, a copy whereof shall be filed with the Commissioner, reduce the number of trustees named in the certificate of incorporation to any number not less than fifteen, such reduction to be effected gradually by the occurrence of vacancies by death, resignation or otherwise.

The number of trustees may be increased, by resolution, similarly adopted, to any number designated in the resolution, with the approval of the Commissioner.

Note:—This is derived from section 26 of the act of 1889, the Commissioner being substituted for the Auditor-General.

(d) Conduct of Trustees; Compensation. No trustee of any savings bank shall have any interest whatsoever, direct or indirect, in the gains or profits thereof, otherwise than as a depositor, nor shall he directly or indirectly receive any pay or emolument for his services, except as hereinafter provided; and no trustee or other officer of any savings bank shall, directly or indirectly, for himself or as the agent or partner of others, borrow any of its funds or deposits or in any manner use the same except to make such current and necessary payments as are authorized by the board of trustees; and any trustee violating any of the provisions of this paragraph shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be subject to imprisonment not exceeding one year and to a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or either, at the discretion of the court, and to repay forthwith to the savings bank any amount received or borrowed in violation of any of the provisions of this paragraph.

No trustee or other officer of any savings bank shall become an endorser or surety or in any manner an obligor for moneys loaned by or borrowed from such savings bank.

Trustees of the savings bank, acting as officers of the same, whose duties require and receive a regular and faithful attendance at the institution, may receive such compensation as in the opinion of a majority of the board of trustees shall be just and reasonable; but such majority shall be exclusive of any trustee to whom such compensation shall be voted.

Any savings bank, by a vote of a majority of its trustees, may allow and pay to its trustees compensation for their services as such, with the approval of the Commissioner.

Note:—This is derived from sections 12 and 27 of the act of 1889. The penalty of the first paragraph is modeled upon that of section 97 of this Code. Section 27 declares that it shall not be lawful to pay trustees as such for attendance at meetings of the board; but in view of the general act of May 17, 1917 (P. L. 223), it has been considered proper to follow the provisions of clause (1) of section 85 of this Code, adding the requirement that the approval of the Commissioner shall be obtained.

(e) Disqualification of Trustees.—Whenever a trustee of any savings bank shall become a trustee, officer, clerk or employee in any other savings bank, or upon his borrowing directly or indirectly any of the funds of the savings bank of which he is a trustee, or becoming a surety or guarantor for any money borrowed of, or a loan made by such savings bank, or upon his failure to attend the regular meetings of the board or to perform any of the duties devolving upon him as trustee, for six successive months without having been previously excused by the board for such failure, the office of such trustee shall thereupon immediately become vacant, but a trustee vacating his office by failure to attend meetings or to discharge his duties may, in the discretion of the board, be eligible for re-election.

Note:—This is derived from section 13 of the act of 1889 with slight changes of wording.

(f) Liability of Trustees upon Insolvency. — If the insolvency of any savings bank be occasioned by the fraudulent conduct of the trustees, those trustees by whose acts or omissions the insolvency was in whole or in part occasioned shall each be liable to the depositors and creditors of the savings bank for his proportional share of the losses, the proportion to be ascertained by dividing the whole loss among the whole number of directors liable for its reimbursement.

Note:—This is the last paragraph of section 11 of the act of 1889, slightly modified in phraseology.

Section 124. Deposits.

(a) Interest: Surplus Fund.—It shall be lawful for a savings bank to credit and pay interest on deposits. The trustees shall regulate the rate of interest, not to exceed five per centum per annum upon the deposits, in such manner that the depositors shall receive, as nearly as may be, all the profits of the savings bank after deducting necessary expenses and reserving such amount as the trustees may deem expedient as a surplus fund for the security of depositors, which to the amount of fifteen per centum of the deposits, the trustees are hereby authorized gradually to accumulate and hold to meet any contingency or loss in the business, from the depreciation of securities or otherwise.

The trustees of any savings bank may classify its depositors according to the character, amount and duration of their dealings with the savings bank, and regulate the interest allowed in such manner that each depositor shall receive the same ratable proportion as all others of the same class. It shall be unlawful for the trustees to declare or allow interest on any deposit for a longer period than the same has been deposited; and no interest shall be declared, credited or paid except by the authority of a vote of a majority of the board of trustees, duly entered upon their minutes, whereon shall be recorded the years and days upon each vote; and whenever any interest shall be declared and credited in excess of the interest or profits earned and appearing to the credit of the savings bank, the trustees so voting for such interest shall be jointly and severally liable to the savings bank for the amount of such excess, so declared and credited.

It shall be the duty of the trustees of any savings bank, whose surplus amounts to fifteen per centum of its deposits, at least once in three years to divide, equitably, the accumulation beyond such authorized surplus as a dividend to depositors in excess of the regular interest hereinbefore provided.

A notice posted conspicuously in the banking room of a change in the rate of interest shall be equivalent to a personal notice.

Note:—The first sentence is derived from section 15 of the act of 1889, omitting the words "per annum" after "fifteen per centum," as misleading; and the remainder of the clause from section 22 of that act.

(b) Regulation and Repayment.—Deposits, together with the interest credited thereon, shall be repaid to the depositors respectively, or to their legal representatives, after demand in such manner, at such times, after such previous notices, and under such regulations as the board of trustees shall prescribe.

The regulations shall be printed in the passbooks or other evidences of deposits furnished by the savings bank, and shall be evidence between the savings bank and depositors holding the same of the terms upon which deposits therein acknowledged are made.

Every savings bank shall have the right to limit the aggregate amount which any one person or corporation may deposit to such sum as the board of trustees may deem it expedient to receive, and may refuse to receive a deposit, and may at any time return all or any part of any deposit; and the aggregate amount of deposits to the credit of any one person or corporation shall not at any one time exceed five thousand dollars exclusive of accrued interest.

Note:—This conforms to the provisions of section 15 of the act of 1889.

Section 125. Voluntary Dissolution.

(a) Resolution of Trustees; Notice to Depositors and Creditors.—Whenever the trustees of any solvent savings bank shall deem it necessary and expedient to close the business thereof, they may, by affirmative vote of not less than two-thirds of the whole number of trustees, at a meeting to be called for that purpose, of which all the trustees shall have notice, declare by resolution the determination of the savings bank to close its business and pay the money to the depositors and creditors and surrender the corporate franchise. The vote upon such resolution shall be taken by yeas and nays, and the resolution and the votes thereon shall be recorded in the minutes of the board, and a copy of the record of such proceedings, certified by the president and secretary of the savings bank, shall be filed with the Commissioner. The trustees shall thereupon give notice to all the depositors and creditors of the adoption of such resolution by publication thereof in two newspapers and by written or printed notices to the depositors and creditors.

Note:—This is the first part of section 30 of the act of 1889.

(b) Certified of Dissolution; Distribution of Assets.—Upon the completion of such advertising and the presentation to the Commissioner of satisfactory proofs of publication and to service of notices, the Commissioner shall forthwith issue to the savings bank a certificate of dissolution, whereupon the bank shall cease to do business and the board of trustees then in office shall thenceforth act as liquidating trustees of the bank, and shall proceed to collect all its assets and distribute the same in accordance with the provisions of section 92 of this act: Provided, That when distribution has been made as aforesaid and said trustees have complied with the laws of this Commonwealth relating to escheats, the franchise of such savings bank shall be deemed to have been surrendered and the existence thereof terminated.

Note:—This takes the place of the last part of section 30 of the act of 1889. Except for the proviso, it follows the provisions of clause (c) of section 90 of this Code.

Section 126. Matters Not Specifically Covered by this Article.—Savings bank shall be subject to the provisions of sections 87, 100, 102, 103, and 106 of this act, so far as the same are not in conflict with the provisions of this article.

Note:—This section has been drafted to avoid repeating in this Article the sections covered by the cross references.

ARTICLE VII. UNINCORPORATED BANKS.

Section 127. Right to Do Business.

(a) No New Unincorporated Banks. From and after the date of approval of this act, no new unincorporated bank shall be established, and no individual, partnership or unincorporated association shall engage, directly or indirectly, in the business of banking or of receiving deposits of money for safe keeping or for the purpose of transmission to another, or for any other purpose, except as provided in clause (c) of this section.

(b) Existing Unincorporated Banks. Unincorporated banks lawfully engaged at the date of the approval of this act in a banking business and actually transacting the same may continue in such business at the places where they are now located, under and subject to the provisions of this act.

(c) Exemptions.—None of the provisions of this article shall apply to any express company or telegraph company receiving money for transmission; nor to any hotel-keeper who shall receive money for safe keeping from a guest; nor to any individual, partnership or unincorporated association licensed under the laws of this commonwealth to do a brokerage business, holding a membership in a lawfully incorporated brokerage exchange, and not doing any banking business as defined by this act.

None of the provisions of this article except those of sections 128, 131, 132, 134, 135, 138, 140, 141 and 147, shall apply to any individual, partnership or unincorporated association engaged in business as a private banker or private bankers on the 19th day of June, 1911, if such individual, partnership or unincorporated association and his or their predecessor or predecessors, or one or more of the members thereof, had continuously and in the same locality conducted the business since a date not less than seven years prior to the 19th day of June, 1911, and such individual, partnership or unincorporated association was not, on the 19th day of June, 1911, engaged in the sale, as agent or otherwise, of railroad or steamship tickets: Provided, That any unincorporated bank exempted by this section may upon application to the Commissioner and on acceptance of all the terms of this act become subject to all of its provisions.

Note:—This Article takes the place of the act of June 19, 1911 (P. L. 1060; 5 Purd. 5350-54). The changes will be noted under the various sections.

Clause (a) of the present section forbids the establishment of any new private banks and therefore involves the repeal of all provisions of the act of 1911 relating to the granting of licenses.

Clause (b) permits private banks now lawfully in business to continue.

Clause (c) embodies such of the exceptions contained in section 8 of the act of 1911 as it is necessary to re-enact. The provision of that section for exemption from supervision by filing a bond or depositing securities is omitted.

Section 128. Changes in Partnership.—Neither death nor withdrawal of a partner nor the admission of a new partner shall change the status of any existing unincorporated bank as a partnership under the provisions of this act, nor work a dissolution of such partnership if all the remaining partners elect to continue the same and assume or discharge all of its obligations.

In case of any change in the partnership by death, sale or otherwise, a new statement, in accordance with section 130 or section 131, as the case may be, shall forthwith be filed with the Commissioner, under the penalty provided in section 132, and a certificate of authorization or exemption, as the case may be, shall be obtained in accordance with section 133 or section 134.

Note:—This section is new.

Section 129. Unincorporated Banks Must Be Partnerships.—From and after January 1, 1923, no unincorporated bank shall be continued or carried on by an individual or an unincorporated association or otherwise than by at least three individuals, who shall be general partners and at least a majority of whom, in number and interest, shall be citizens of the United States, and at least two of whom shall be bona fide residents of the state of Pennsylvania; and no one, of at least three, of the members of said partnership shall be the owner of less than a five per cent. interest in such unincorporated bank.

Note:—The Commissioners are of opinion that a banking business should not be conducted by one individual or by an informal, unincorporated association. The complications arising in case of death in the first instance, and the difficulty of enforcing obligations in the second, make it desirable that in every case a bank which is not incorporated should be carried on by a general partnership and that at least three of the partners should have substantial interests in the bank. Furthermore, the rights of depositors and creditors will be clearly defined in the marshalling of partnership and individual assets. Ample time is allowed for the formation of partnerships.

Section 130. Statement to be Filed.—On or before December 31, 1922, every unincorporated bank in the state of Pennsylvania, except those exempted by clause (c) of section 127 of this act, shall file with the Commissioner a verified statement in duplicate, which shall set forth:

(a) Name.—The name of the bank, which shall be in form, "The.....Banking Company of Unincorporated," or the name by which the bank is known at the date of the approval of this act, followed by the word "Unincorporated," where required under the provisions of section 136 of this act, which name thereafter may be changed only with the consent of the Commissioner.

(b) Partners.—The full name, residence and post office address of each member of the partnership, and the citizenship of each.

(c) Place of Business.—The county, and the city, borough or township in which the business is carried on, with the street number or other local designation therein of the place of business of the unincorporated bank.

(d) Capital.—The amount of permanent capital actually paid in and remaining in its possession, bona fide, as its property, for its sole purposes.

(e) Individual Responsibility.—A statement of the responsibility and net worth of the individual members of the partnership, together with a detailed statement of the resources and liabilities of the unincorporated bank.

(f) Articles of Agreement.—A duplicate of the articles of co-partnership or agreement under which the business of the bank is being or is to be conducted, which shall be executed and acknowledged by all the partners, and which shall set forth the amount of the interest of each partner, and may, subject to the approval of the Commissioner, provide for the selection by the partners of a board of managers, consisting of not less than three of the partners, and for the employment of a cashier and such other agents and employees as may be necessary.

(g) Managers, Officers and Employees.—If not disclosed in the articles of co-partnership or agreement, then the names, residences and post office addresses of the board of managers, if any, chosen for the first year, and of the officers, agents or employees in active charge and management of the business.

Said statement shall be verified by the oaths or affirmations of all the members of the partnership, upon a form prescribed by the Commissioner, which shall state that the affiants have read the statement and that the facts therein set forth are true.

Note:—The statement required by this section corresponds as nearly as may be to the certificate of incorporation of an incorporated bank, and will put upon record in the office of the Commissioner full information as to every unincorporated bank subject to the supervision of the Department, including the paid-in capital, the net worth of the partners, and the terms of the partnership agreement.

Section 131. Statement of Exempted Unincorporated Banks.—On or before December 31, 1921, every unincorporated bank exempted by clause (c) of section 127 of this act, or claiming to be so exempt, shall file with the Commissioner a verified statement in duplicate, setting forth in detail the facts upon which such exemption is based or claimed, and the matters specified in clauses (a), (b) and (c) of section 130 of this act.

Note:—Compliance with this section will furnish the Commissioner with a record of the names, partners and places of business of the banks not subject to his supervision, with a statement, in each instance, of the grounds upon which the exemption is claimed.

Section 132. Business Prohibited unless Statements Filed.—From and after the dates mentioned in Sections 130 and 131 of this act, respectively, no unincorporated bank shall continue in business unless it shall have filed with the Commissioner the statement required of such bank by section 130 or section 131, as the case may be; nor, although it shall have filed such certificate, shall an unincorporated bank subject to the provisions of section 130 continue in business after December 31, 1922, unless it shall have obtained from the Commissioner a certificate of authorization as hereinafter provided, or an unincorporated bank exempted by clause (c) of section 127, unless it shall have obtained from the Commissioner a certificate of exemption as hereinafter provided.

Note:—This furnishes the method of enforcement of sections 130 and 131, as well as sections 133 and 134.

Section 133. Certificate of Authorization.—Upon receipt by the Commissioner of the statement required by section 130 of this act, he shall issue his certificate authorizing the unincorporated bank, subject to the provisions of this act, to continue its business, provided it shall appear that the provisions of this article have been complied with by the applicant, that the terms of the articles of co-partnership or agreement set forth in said statement are in form binding upon the parties thereto and not in contravention of this act or of public policy, and that the financial condition and responsibility of said unincorporated bank and of the individual partners are such as to warrant a continuance of the business.

Said statement may be amended for any defect in form or substance on application to the Commissioner and for proper cause shown.

In case the Commissioner shall refuse to issue the certificate of authorization as aforesaid, he shall forthwith give notice thereof in writing, stating his objections in detail, to such unincorporated bank, which shall have the same right to appeal and in the same manner as is provided by section 72 of this act.

Note:—Under the provisions of this section, the Commissioner is given power to determine whether an existing unincorporated bank, subject to the supervision of the Department, should be authorized to continue in business. The right to appeal from an adverse decision by the Commissioner is secured.

Section 134. Certificate of Exemption.—Upon receipt by the Commissioner of the statement required by section 131 of this act, if he shall find that the unincorporated bank filing such statement is entitled to exemption under clause (c) of section 127 of this act, he shall issue his certificate so stating.

Note:—A bank not subject to the supervision of the Department will, under this section, be furnished with evidence of its exemption.

Section 135. Certificate and Statement to be Posted.—Every unincorporated bank shall at all times keep posted in the room in which it transacts its business and in plain view of its customers the certificate of authorization issued by the Commissioner pursuant to section 133 of this act, with a statement of the names of all the members of the partnership, that the resources of the bank are pledged for its liabilities, and that the individual assets of the partners are additional security for its obligations, or the certificate of exemption issued by the Commissioner pursuant to section 134 of this act.

Note:—This corresponds to the provision of section 1 of the act of 1911 requiring the license certificate to be posted.

Section 136. "Unincorporated" to be Part of Name.—From and after December 31, 1921, every unincorporated bank shall use the word "unincorporated" immediately following the name under which it does business.

Note:—The Commissioners consider it proper that every person dealing with an unincorporated bank should have notice of the fact that the bank is not a corporation.

Section 137. Capital.—No unincorporated bank subject to the provisions of this act shall continue in business after December 31, 1922, unless it shall have a capital actually paid in and remaining in its possession, bona fide, as its property and to be used for its sole purposes and for the security of its depositors and other creditors, of not less than ten thousand dollars in any borough or township the population of which does not exceed five thousand inhabitants, nor less than twenty-five thousand dollars in any borough or township having a population between five thousand and fifty thousand inhabitants, nor less than fifty thousand dollars in any city, borough or township having a population exceeding fifty thousand inhabitants.

Such capital shall at all times be segregated from all other property or business of the members of the partnership and shall be kept and maintained unimpaired for the security of depositors and other creditors of such unincorporated bank.

From time to time, with the written consent of the Commissioner and upon cause shown, the capital of an unincorporated bank may be increased. In like manner, such capital may be decreased, provided such decrease does not bring such capital below the minimum required for such unincorporated bank by the provisions of this section.

Note:—These provisions, requiring a minimum capital, which shall be segregated and kept unimpaired, and which may not be decreased without the consent of the Commissioner, should tend to protect depositors and others dealing with unincorporated banks. Ample time is given to enable existing banks to bring their capital up to the minimum.

Section 138. Contract Provisions as to Ascertainment of Value of Partner's Share.—Nothing contained in this act, through the increase of the capital or surplus, or otherwise, of any unincorporated bank coming under its provisions, shall have the effect of rendering inoperative the lawful terms of any contract among partners, existing at the date of the approval of this act, as to the methods of ascertaining the true value of any partner's interest in the co-partnership in case of the withdrawal or death of such partner, without the consent of all the partners thereto.

Note:—This section is for the protection of partners in existing unincorporated banks.

Section 139. Bonds of Officers and Employees.—All officers of every unincorporated bank, other than members of the firm, and such employees as shall, with the approval of the Commissioner, be designated by the partners, shall be required to furnish bonds the same as those required of officers and employees of incorporated banks under the provisions of section 84, clause (d), of this act.

Note:—There is no reason why unincorporated banks should not be subject to the same provisions as to the bonding of officers and employees as apply to banks which are incorporated.

Section 140. Changing Place of Business.—No unincorporated bank shall transact a banking business except at the place designated in the certificate of authorization or exemption issued by the Commissioner as provided by section 133 or 134 of this act, unless such place of business shall be lawfully changed in the following manner:

Any unincorporated bank may remove the location of its place of business to any other place within the same city, borough or township, upon filing with the Commissioner an application for such removal, signed by all the members of the partnership, upon receipt of which the Commissioner shall issue a certificate of removal as requested, provided the place to which the removal is proposed to be made be one not prohibited by any provision of this act.

Any unincorporated bank may remove the location of its place of business to any other place within the same county, but outside of the city, borough or township, by filing an application and obtaining a certificate of removal as aforesaid, and, in the case of an unincorporated bank not otherwise subject to all the provisions of this act, by accepting such provisions; but such change of location shall not be made until the Commissioner shall be satisfied that the same will serve the convenience and advantage of the public, that the density of the population in the neighborhood designated for the new place of business and in the surrounding country affords a reasonable promise of adequate support for the enterprise, and that the capital equals or exceeds the minimum required by law for an unincorporated bank located in the place to which the removal is proposed to be made.

When any change of location of place of business of an unincorporated bank is made under the provisions of this section, the Commissioner shall forthwith notify the Auditor-General thereof.

Note:—The Commissioners consider it desirable that an unincorporated bank should not be permitted to do business except at its regular place of business, and that any change of such place should be subject to the supervision of the Banking Commissioner as in the case of incorporated banks.

Section 141. Branches Forbidden.—No unincorporated bank shall establish or maintain any branch or any agency for the purpose of discount or deposit; and any unincorporated bank violating the provisions of this section shall be subject to a penalty of one hundred dollars for each day during which any such branch or agency shall be open or occupied, said penalty to be payable to the Commissioner and recoverable by him by action at law. In addition to said remedy, a court of competent jurisdiction may, on bill filed by the Commissioner, issue an injunction restraining any unincorporated bank from establishing or maintaining a branch or agency, and may make such other order or decree as equity and justice may require.

Note:—In the opinion of the Commissioners, no branches of unincorporated banks should be allowed. The penalty and the remedy provided by this section are the same as those for the unauthorized establishment or maintenance of a branch by an incorporated bank.

Section 142. Title to Property.—No penalty, real or personal, owned by an unincorporated bank, shall be held in the name of any individual or member of the partnership; but all such property shall be held in the registered name of the co-partnership, or in the names of the members of the co-partnership, followed by the words, "co-partners, doing business as," and the name of the unincorporated bank.

Note:—In line with the provision of section 137 for segregation of capital, this section provides that title to all property shall be held in the name of the bank.

Section 143. Powers and Limitations as to Real Estate, Loans and Investments.—The powers of unincorporated banks as to the purchase and holding of real estate and the improvement thereof, and as to the making of loans upon or investments in mortgages and ground rents, and the limitations upon the loans which may be made by an unincorporated bank to any corporation or person, shall be the same as those provided by sections 95 and 96 of this act as to state banks, save that the percentages shall be calculated on the paid-in capital of the unincorporated bank and the net worth of the partners as individuals.

Note:—This puts unincorporated banks on the same footing as state banks with regard to holdings of real estate, the improvement thereof and loans and investments. The net worth of the partners as individuals is used as a basis for the limitations instead of the surplus of incorporated banks.

Section 144. Distribution of Assets.—The depositors in any unincorporated bank shall be first paid out of the assets of such bank in any proceeding for winding up its business, to the amount of their several deposits; and for any balance remaining unpaid, such depositors shall share in the general assets of the members of the partnership pro rata with the general creditors of such partners.

Note:—This gives depositors priority as to the assets of the bank and makes them general creditors of the individual partners as to any balance not paid out of the unincorporated bank assets.

Section 145. Receipts for Money Deposited for Transmission.—Every unincorporated bank shall give a receipt to every person depositing money for transmission to a foreign country, which receipt shall show the name and address of the bank, the date of receipt of the money, the name and address of the person to whom the money is to be transmitted and the date not later than which the money is to be transmitted. All moneys received by an unincorporated bank for transmission to a foreign country shall be forwarded to the person designated to receive the same within five days after the receipt thereof, unless a later date be fixed in such receipt.

Note:—This takes the place of sections 6 and 7 of the act of 1911, but omits the penal provision of the latter section and permits the fixing in the receipt of a period for transmission longer than five days.

Section 146. Satisfaction of Mortgages, Etc.—Whenever it becomes necessary to satisfy any mortgages, judgment or lien which has been accepted by the Licensing Board, under the provisions of the act of June 19, 1911, entitled "An act to provide for licensing and regulating private banking in the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and providing penalties for the violation thereof," the Commissioner shall have power to cause satisfaction or relief to be entered upon the record in such manner and form as is now prescribed under existing laws.

Note:—This takes the place of the act of May 23, 1913 (P. L. 334; 5 Purd. 5354), which requires a resolution of the Board giving the Commissioner power of attorney. The Board will of course be abolished by the repeal of the act of 1911.

Section 147. Conversion of Unincorporated Bank into State Bank or Trust Company.

(a) Method of Incorporation.—Any unincorporated bank lawfully doing business in this state may be converted into an incorporated state bank or trust company by complying with the provisions of this act in regard to the incorporation of such banks and trust companies; and in the event of such incorporation the capital stock may be paid by a transfer to the assets of such unincorporated bank, provided the live assets of such unincorporated bank shall exceed its liabilities by an amount equal to the amount of the capital stock, such assets to be taken at the true value thereof. The Commissioner shall cause an examination of such unincorporated bank to be made and its assets and liabilities ascertained before authorizing payment of the capital by a transfer of such assets and before approving the certificate of incorporation.

(b) Effect of Incorporation.—Upon the incorporation of any unincorporated bank as herein provided, all the assets of every kind and character, including the real and personal property, and choses in action, belonging to such unincorporated bank shall be deemed to be transferred to and vested in such incorporated state bank or trust company without any deed, transfer or assignment being executed, and the incorporated state bank or trust company shall hold and enjoy the same in the same manner and to the same extent as the unincorporated bank held and owned the same.

(c) Rights of Creditors and Others.—The rights of the creditors and depositors of such unincorporated bank shall not be impaired in any manner by such incorporation, nor shall any liability or obligation for the payment of any money due or to become due, or any claim or demand existing against such unincorporated bank be in any manner released or impaired thereby, and all the rights, obligations and relations of all the parties, depositors, and others shall remain unimpaired by such incorporation. Such incorporated state bank or trust company into which such unincorporated state bank shall be converted shall succeed to and be held liable to pay and discharge all obligations and liabilities in the same manner as though such incorporated state bank or trust company had itself incurred the obligation or liability; and no suit or other proceeding then pending before any court or tribunal in which such unincorporated bank is a party shall be deemed to have abated or been discontinued by reason of any such incorporation, but the same may be prosecuted to final judgment in the same manner as if such unincorporated bank had not been so converted, and the incorporated state bank or trust company may be substituted in place of the unincorporated bank by order of the court in which such action, suit or proceeding may be pending. Such incorporated state bank or trust company shall likewise be subject to be sued in any court having jurisdiction upon any cause of action against such converted unincorporated bank, in the same manner as if such cause of action had originated against such incorporated state bank or trust company.

Note:—This new section provides a method whereby private banks may be directly converted into incorporated state banks or trust companies without the necessity of having the individual partners apply for a charter and wind up the affairs of the unincorporated bank.

Section 148. Matters Not Specifically Covered by This Article.—Unincorporated banks shall be subject to the provisions of sections 100 to 106, inclusive, of this act, so far as the same are not in conflict with the provisions of this article, save that "capital invested in the business" shall be substituted for "capital stock" in sections 104 and 105.

Note:—This section has been drafted to avoid repeating in this article the sections covered by the cross-references.

ARTICLE VIII.—CRIMINAL OFFENSES BY OFFICERS DIRECTORS OR EMPLOYEES OF BANKS.

Section 149. False Swearing.—The wilful and deliberate false swearing by an officer, director, partner or employee of any bank, in any case where an oath or affirmation is required of him in such capacity by this act or by any law of this commonwealth, shall constitute perjury and be punishable, upon conviction, in the same manner as perjury is or may be punishable by law.

Note:—This takes the place of section 1 of the act of April 3, 1840, (P. L. 716; 1 Purd. 436). It has been extended so as to include partners in unincorporated banks; and the crime is declared to be perjury, instead of a misdemeanor punishable by stated fine and imprisonment. It does not cover violations of the official oath, which are included in section 153 of this Act.

Section 150. Compensation for Procuring Loans.—No officer, director, partner, associate, employee or attorney of any bank may stipulate for, or receive or consent or agree to receive, any fee, commission, gift or thing of value for procuring or endeavoring to procure for any person or corporation any loan from, or the purchase or discount of any negotiable paper or other evidence of debt by such bank: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall prevent the payment by a bank of a rate of interest on a deposit with such bank of any officer, director, partner, associate, employee or attorney, not greater than that paid to other depositors on similar deposits.

Any violation of the provisions of this section shall constitute a misdemeanor, punishable on conviction by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding three years, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Note:—This section is new.

Section 151. False Certification of Checks.—Whoever, being an officer, director, partner, associate, employee or agent of a bank, wilfully certifies a check drawn on such bank and fails forthwith to charge the amount thereof against the account of the drawer, or wilfully certifies a check drawn upon the bank unless the drawer of such check has on deposit with the bank an amount of money subject to the payment of such check and equal to the amount specified therein, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be subject to a fine of not more than one thousand dollars or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Note:—This section is new.

Section 152.—Embezzlement and Frauds.

(a) Embezzlement Generally.—If any president, cashier, director, trustee or any other officer or employee of any bank shall fraudulently embezzle or appropriate to his own use, or to the use of any person or persons, or misapply any money or other property belonging to said bank, or left with the same as a special deposit or otherwise, he or they, upon conviction of such offense, shall be fined in any amount not less than the sum appropriated or embezzled and sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the proper state penitentiary, to be kept in separate and solitary confinement at hard labor for any term not exceeding five years: Provided, That this shall not prevent any person or persons aggrieved from pursuing his her or their civil remedy against such person or persons.

Note:—This re-enacts section 19 of the act of May 13, 1876, P. L. 167, with the addition of the word "trustee" and the substitution of "employee" for "clerk," and makes the section applicable to all banks.

Section 20 of the Act of April 16, 1850, P. L. 486, is substantially the same.

(b) Embezzlement; Missapplication of Funds; Frauds and False Entries.—Every president, director, trustee, cashier, teller, employee or agent of any bank who shall embezzle, abstract or wilfully misapply any of the moneys, funds or credits of such bank, or shall, without authority from the directors or trustees, fraudulently issue or put forth any certificate of deposit, draw any order or bill of exchange, mortgage or other instrument of writing, or shall make any false entry on any book, report or statement of the bank, with an intent, in either case, to injure or defraud such bank, or to injure or defraud any other company, body corporate or politic, or any individual person, or to deceive any officer or agent appointed to inspect the affairs of any bank, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be confined in the penitentiary, at hard labor, not less than one, nor more than ten years.

Note:—This re-enacts section 36 of the act of May 1, 1861 (P. L. 515), adding the references to "trustees," substituting "employee" for "clerk," and omitting the provision as to fraudulent circulation of the notes of the bank, which is obsolete.

Section 153. Punishment For Offences Not Otherwise Provided For.—If any officer, director, partner, associate or employee of any bank shall wilfully violate any provision of this act or of his official oath, for which violation no other criminal punishment is specially provided in this act, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars and to be imprisoned for a period not exceeding one year, or either, at the discretion of the court.

Note:—This is derived from section 16 of the act of 1850 (1 Purd. 425), which, however, is limited to officers and directors who have taken the official oath.

REPORT OF THE HEALTH INSURANCE COMMISSION.

To the 1921 Session of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 18, 1921.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 7, 1921.

To the 1921 Session of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Gentlemen:

Your Commission was appointed under the provision of the Act approved the 18th day of July, A. D. 1919, reading as follows:

Session of 1919, No. 392-A.

An Act to establish a commission to continue the investigation made by the commission appointed under the act, approved the twenty-fifth day of July, one thousand nine hundred and seventeen (Pamphlet Laws, one thousand one hundred and ninety-nine), entitled "An act to establish a commission to investigate sickness and accident, not compensated under the Workmen's Compensation Act of one thousand nine hundred and fifteen, of employed persons and their families, and to make an appropriation for such commission".

Section 1. Be it enacted, &c., That a commission is hereby created to be known as the Health Insurance Commission, which shall

1. Continue the investigation begun and carried on by the commission appointed under the act, approved the twenty-fifth day of July, one thousand nine hundred and seventeen (Pamphlet Laws, one thousand one hundred and ninety-nine), entitled "An act to establish a commission to investigate sickness and accident, not compensated under the Workmen's Compensation Act of one thousand nine hundred and fifteen, of employed persons and their families, and to make an appropriation for such commission.

2. Make a study of proposed and existing systems of health insurance in this and other countries.

3. Make a careful study of possible remedial legislation which shall provide adequate medical care for employees and their families during sickness, afford a means of meeting the wage loss suffered by employees during such periods of sickness, and stimulate State wide interest and active work in sickness prevention.

Section 2. The commission shall hold public meetings in different parts of the Commonwealth, and shall submit to the General Assembly of one thousand nine hundred and twenty-one, a full final report, including such recommendations for legislation by bill or otherwise, as in its judgement may seem proper.

Section 3. The commission shall consist of three Senators, to be appointed by the President pro-tempore of the Senate, three Representatives, to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives; and five other persons, not members of the General Assembly to be appointed by the Governor.

Section 4. The commission shall have power to elect its chairman and other officers, to examine witnesses, books and papers respecting all matters to be investigated, to issue subpoenas to compel the attendance of witnesses, and the production of books and papers, to administer oaths, to employ a secretary, experts in the matters to be investigated, and all necessary clerical and other assistance, to purchase books and all necessary supplies, and to rent halls for hearings. If the commission shall appoint from its members, sub-committees to make an inquiry, the sub-committees shall have the same powers for the examination of persons and papers and to administer oaths as are herein conferred upon the Commission. Salaries and other expenses of the commission shall be paid upon vouchers approved by the chairman of the commission, up to the amount appropriated by the General Assembly.

Section 5. The Commissioner of Health and the Commissioner of Labor and Industry are hereby directed to cooperate with the commission and to render it any such proper aid and assistance as in their judgment may not interfere with the proper conduct of their respective departments; and, as far as possible, rooms in buildings owned or leased by the Commonwealth shall be assigned to the commission for hearings or other purposes.

Section 6. The sum of fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000) or as much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby specifically appropriated for the actual and necessary expenses of the commission in carrying out the provisions of this act. Payment of the money shall be on order of the chairman of the commission and on warrant of the Auditor General.

Approved—The 18th day of July, A. D., 1919,

WM. C. SPROUL."

In pursuance of this act, the following members of the Commission were appointed:

Members named by the Governor:

Mr. William Flinn, Pittsburgh, Pa.
Mr. William Draper Lewis, Philadelphia.
Dr. Francis D. Patterson, Philadelphia.
Dr. G. Oram Ring, Philadelphia.
Mr. William H. Kingsley, Philadelphia.

Members named by the President Protem, of the Senate:

Senator S. J. Miller, Clearfield, Pennsylvania.
Senator Morris Einstein, Allegheny.
Senator Charles W. Sones, Lycoming.

Members named by the Speaker of the House:

Mr. William T. Ramsey, Delaware.
Mr. John M. Flynn, Elk.
Mr. Theodore Campbell, Philadelphia.

On March 11th, 1920, the Commission organized with the election of the following officers:

Mr. William T. Ramsey, Chairman.
Mr. Theodore Campbell, Treasurer.
Dr. Francis D. Patterson, Secretary.

In order to facilitate the work of the Commission a Committee on "Plan of Work" was appointed by the Chairman, which Committee consisted of the following members:

Mr. William Draper Lewis.
Mr. William H. Kingsley.
Mr. Charles W. Sones.
Mr. William T. Ramsey, Ex-officio.
Mr. Theodore Campbell, Ex-officio.
Dr. Francis D. Patterson, Ex-officio.

The Committee on Plan of Work determined that it was essential that the Commission have the benefit and cooperation of various agencies, and accordingly the following associations were requested to appoint Committees to cooperate with the Commission and we had the cooperation of the following:

Committee Representing the Pennsylvania Manufacturers Association:

Col. John P. Wood, Pequea Mills, 22nd & Spring Garden Streets, Philadelphia.
Mr. Justus H. Schwache, Wm. Sellers & Co., 16th & Hamilton Streets, Philadelphia.
Mr. H. Anderson, Keasby and Mattison, Ambler, Pennsylvania.
Mr. Arthur N. Blum, Henry Disston & Sons, Incorporated, Tacony, Philadelphia.
Mr. J. W. Rawle, J. G. Brill Co., 62nd. & Woodland Avenue, Philadelphia.
Mr. B. R. Lichty, Otto Eisenlohr & Brothers, Incorporated, Philadelphia.
Mr. Francis Curtis, Editor, Bulletin of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers Association, Finance Building, Philadelphia.

Committee Representing the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor:

Mr. John A. Phillips, 131 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia.
Mr. James H. Maurer, Commonwealth Trust Company Building, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.
Mr. A. P. Bower, 111 N. 6th Street, Reading, Pennsylvania.

Committee Representing the Medical Legislative Conference of Pennsylvania.

Dr. G. A. Knoyles, 4812 Baltimore Avenue, Philadelphia.
Dr. F. L. VanSickle, 212 N. 3rd Street, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.
Dr. Jos. G. Steedle, McKees Rocks, Pennsylvania.
Dr. L. Webster Fox, 17th & Spruce Streets, Philadelphia.
Dr. Frank Hartman, 136 N. Duke Street, Lancaster, Pennsylvania.
Dr. E. A. Krusen, Norristown, Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. Ross Swartz, 235 N. 3rd Street, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.
Dr. G. Harlan Wells, 1807 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Dr. W. Steele, 1825 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Dr. Wm. Hillegas, 1807 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Dr. M. V. Hazen, 211 Locust Street, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

Dr. E. F. Shaulis, Indiana, Pennsylvania.
 Dr. W. S. Glenn, State College, Pennsylvania.
 Dr. W. O. Keffer, Frugality, Pennsylvania.
 Dr. R. E. Holmes, 18th & State Streets, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

Committee Representing the Industrial Physicians:

Dr. Drury Hinton, 3500 Grays Ferry Road, Philadelphia.
 Dr. A. W. Colcord, Carnegie Steel Co., Clairton, Pennsylvania.

Dr. Loyal Shoudy, Bethlehem Steel Co., Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.

Committee Representing the Emergency Aid of Pennsylvania:

Mrs. John C. Groome, Rosemont, Pennsylvania.
 Mrs. Barclay H. Warburton, Jenkintown, Pennsylvania.
 Mrs. Thomas Robins, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Committee Representing the American Red Cross:

Mrs. H. C. Boyer.

Committee Representing the Visiting Nurse Society:

Miss Tucker.

Committee Representing the Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce:

Mr. Robert Haight, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

The Commission at this point desires to make public expression of its deep appreciation of the cooperation and help it has received from all the members of these Committees.

The Commission has also had the very great advantage of the advice and cooperation of Miss Edith Hilles, who was Executive Secretary of the Commission appointed in 1919, and desires at this time to publicly express its appreciation of her efforts in behalf of the Commission.

With a view of gathering knowledge, the Commission has held a number of Public Meetings, the first of which was held in Philadelphia, May 24th, 1920, at which time addresses were delivered by the following:

Dr. Edward Martin, Commissioner of Health of Pennsylvania.
 Mr. John A. Lapp, Secretary Ohio Health Insurance Commission.
 Dr. F. L. VanSickle, Executive Secretary, Pennsylvania State Medical Society.
 Dr. Lee K. Frankel, Vice President, Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.
 Dr. A. W. Colcord, Chief Surgeon, Carnegie Steel Co.

A joint session of the Commission with the Homeopathic Medical Society of Pennsylvania was held at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, September 21, 1920, Chairman of the Meeting, Dr. R. L. Piper, Tyrone, Pennsylvania, which meeting was devoted to the subject of "What is State Health Insurance" at which time addresses were delivered by the following:

Dr. William H. Hillegas, Philadelphia.
 Dr. G. A. Knowles, Philadelphia.
 Dr. Clarence Bartlett, Philadelphia.
 Dr. F. L. VanSickle, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.
 Hon. Wm. T. Ramsey, Chairman of Commission.
 Dr. E. S. Snyder, Lancaster, Pennsylvania.
 Dr. G. Harlan Wells, Philadelphia.

The Commission held a joint meeting with the Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania at its annual meeting in Pittsburgh, October 6th, 1920, at which time addresses were delivered by the following:

Dr. Henry D. Jump, President of Medical Society.
 Dr. Fredk. R. Green, Chicago, Illinois.
 Hon. Wm. T. Ramsey, Chairman of the Commission.

A Meeting of the Commission was held in Philadelphia, December 3rd, 1920, at which time addresses were delivered by the following:

Dr. Wm. E. Sweet, Philadelphia.
 Dr. Clarence Bartlett, Philadelphia.
 Dr. Edward M. Gramm, Philadelphia.
 Dr. Harlan Wells, Philadelphia.

Dr. Henry D. Jump, Philadelphia.
 Dr. Frank C. Hammond, Philadelphia.

A meeting of the Commission was held in Philadelphia, February 4th, 1921, at which time addresses were delivered by the following:

Dr. John B. Andrews, New York, N. Y.
 Mr. John A. Lapp, Chicago, Illinois.
 Mr. Miles M. Dawson, New York, N. Y.
 Mr. Jos. P. Chamberlain, New York, N. Y.

A Meeting of the Commission was held in Philadelphia on March 18th, 1921, at which time addresses were delivered by the following:

Dr. Edward Martin, Commissioner of Health of Pennsylvania.
 Dr. A. H. Doty, New York City.
 Mr. H. B. Anderson, New York City.
 Hon. P. Tecumseh Sherman, New York City.

The Commission has also had the advantage of studying the report of the investigation into the operation of the British Health Insurance Act made by Chairman Ramsey of the Commission assisted by Mr. Ordway Tead, who visited England for that purpose. Owing to the disturbed conditions upon the continent of Europe, it was impracticable for them to make an investigation of health insurance in the Central European countries.

The previous Commission had made a survey of the sickness problem and this work was so ably and efficiently performed that there was no necessity for this Commission to further investigate along these lines.

The Commission has carefully studied the investigations that have been conducted in the States of California, Massachusetts, Wisconsin, Kentucky, Ohio, Illinois, New York and New Jersey, and in none of these states, nor in any other state, have laws been enacted providing for health insurance. In some states, notably New York, bills have been proposed providing for health insurance, but these bills have been defeated, and your Commission had had the advantage of making a study of this proposed legislation.

In our study of this problem we have been brought into contact with the notable work of the more than eleven thousand physicians now engaged in the practice of the Healing Art within the borders of our Commonwealth, and we have had emphasized for our consideration that the excellent work in which they are engaged may be classified under two general headings,—first, The Prevention of Disease, and second, The Cure of Disease.

We have found that these physicians are working in close harmony and cooperation with our State Department of Health, and too much credit cannot be given Dr. Edward Martin, Commissioner of Health of this Commonwealth, and the able organization which he has developed, and to the physicians of our Commonwealth for their successful efforts in reducing the sickness incidence of this Commonwealth, which is materially lower than in many other states and countries.

A notable instance of this work is in the conservation of the purity of our water supplies, which has resulted in the prevention of an untold number of cases of typhoid fever, which disease in the past was almost endemic within the borders of our Commonwealth. Preventive measures against smallpox, tuberculosis, venereal diseases, and many other diseases have been followed by a most gratifying result.

The splendid cooperation of our Medical Profession and of our hospitals, both state and private, and the ability displayed by the Nursing Profession resident within our Commonwealth have resulted in not only the saving of many lives, which would otherwise have been wiped out by disease, but in shortening the period of lost time resulting from illness.

Your Commission is familiar with the medical work being performed in many of the larger industries, and the eminently successful work being daily performed by the Industrial Physicians of this Commonwealth cannot be too highly emphasized. Their work has meant that in many cases disease has been diagnosed in its incipency, and under proper and adequate medical treatment what might have terminated in a serious illness, has instead, ended in prompt restoration to good health. Their activity and close cooperation with the Division of Industrial Hygiene and Engineering of our State Department of Labor and Industry have made for better sanitation in the factories and therefore better health among the many thousands of employees.

Your Commission has been in receipt of resolutions passed by the American Medical Association and by state and county medical societies, the State Chamber of Commerce and other organizations, which have gone on record as being opposed to Compulsory Health Insurance and this attitude has been emphasized at many of the public meetings which the Commission has held.

We have further been in receipt of communications from many representatives of Organized Labor, expressing their disapprobation of Compulsory Health Insurance.

It is the belief of the Commission that so-called Health Insurance patterned after laws in effect in foreign countries more properly might be termed "sickness indemnity" and would fall short of its hoped-for achievements were such a law to be enacted in Pennsylvania.

The aim of those who urge legislation that would lessen the existent loss of manpower by reason of neglected illness through compulsory prompt medical treatment which would shorten the period of sickness absence of wage earners, with its attendant distress and wage loss, is in a good direction; but an open-minded study of this whole subject leads to the conclusion that a plan which would extend the benefits of "sickness prevention" so as to diminish the sixteen million days of time loss, with its concurrent wage loss of over fifty millions of dollars, now existent in the State of Pennsylvania, and preserve the wage earning ability of the large class intended to be covered and the full industrial and commercial value of the increased labor thus performed, would yield far greater benefit than would legislation which contemplates the payment of sickness allowances to the relatively few who would qualify.

The whole problem of loss of working time through illness, occupational disease, or physical degeneration rather automatically divides itself into the elements of either prevention or cure. Wage earners find no substantial benefit from either brief or prolonged absence from work by reason of sickness, and even if it were possible to continue their full wage during such periods there still remains the many millions of days total absence from their vocations, with the consequent commercial and potential loss in their lines of work.

So far as the mechanical operation of a Health Insurance system is concerned, it may be said that where it is enforced by national legislation, as in England, its difficulties may be diminished, but if as is the case in that nation, there is a decided division of opinion, as to its real benefits, how much broader would be this variation of opinion and the attendant difficulties if put in force in one or more of the states of the United States and not in the balance.

Prospective physical impairment that is likely to prove permanent and so-called occupational diseases usually have their forerunners of exclusive warning to the individuals affected and it is within the realm of probability that such parties would, as their impairment increases seek employment in states having most liberal health insurance laws in order that they might ultimately come under the greatest possible indemnity benefit.

It might be argued that this condition would be counterbalanced by interstate migration, but as the laws providing for sickness indemnity would not likely be uniform as to benefits there would be a decided tendency toward imposition by prospective beneficiaries seeking domicile, when chronic illness impends, in the state which has most liberal benefits of Health Insurance.

The State of Pennsylvania has always stood at the fore and front in the matter of paternal care of its citizens and there is abundant proof of the genuine, wholesome benefits, protective and otherwise which through law have been conferred upon those who are engaged in its industries, professions and various vocations, and it is with the thought of leading to a higher, more widespread and enduring beneficial results that the suggestion is made that an enlargement of the facilities and scope of function of State Department of Health, with due support by appropriation and contributions, would make possible a much more valuable result if these activities were directed toward disease prevention, maternity, care, etc., and thus eliminate or greatly lessen at their source, the conditions, a neglect of which, is the foundation of later illness, on which the desire for so-called Health Insurance is based.

In conclusion, your Commission would strongly emphasize that this subject has been under careful consideration and exhaustible review for a period of four years in this State and four a longer period in other states; that the members of this commission have recognized their duties to be more or less judicial, that they have considered all phases of this important subject without prejudice and with open minds; that while there is an element of idealism in the suggestion of Health Insurance there is lacking to a surprising extent the degree of benefit which without intensive study might appear to develop from its operation that there is a preponderance of belief against it and an abundance of evidence that leads the Commission to make a negative report, as to the enactment of so-called Health Insurance Legislation at this time.

Report
of Investigation into the Operation of the British Health Insurance Act
Made in July, 1920
by William T. Ramsey, Esq.,
Chairman of the Commission.

Accompanied by Ordway Tead, Esq.,
as Special Investigator.

PREFACE.

In submitting this report, attention is called to two facts,—(1) the field inquiry consumed only one month, July, 1920; (2) the method of inquiry was therefore necessarily confined to reading all available documents and to the interviewing of over fifty representative persons in London, Manchester and elsewhere, including government officials, employers, union officials, friendly society officers, commercial insurance company officials, insured workers and doctors.

Your Chairman, in company with the special investigator went to England with as full a reading knowledge as possible of the details of health insurance in England but with no settled conviction as to the working of the act. The inquiry was conducted with a thoroughly open mind, without preconceptions, with a sincere desire to get the whole truth.

Moreover, special pains were taken before leaving this country to communicate with prominent individuals known to be deeply interested in health insurance either because of their advocacy or their opposition. Letters of introduction were obtained equally from both groups and the special effort throughout our visit was to search out and interview those in England who were opposed to the act. It may be said in passing that the active opponents to it are very few and many, if not most, of the persons whom it was suggested that we see by those on this side of the water known to be most critical of health insurance, turned out to be in general favorable to health insurance and only critical of the present act in some of its details.

In short, no step was omitted that would assure our hearing all the adverse things that could possibly be said by well-formed English subjects about the working of the act.

The result may be unsatisfactory to those who desire unqualified statements of approval or disapproval. For the conclusions reached in this inquiry are not unqualified. They indicate a degree of success and a degree of what is less failure than confusion of purpose which has necessarily resulted in gradual but important changes in the insurance act and in the other public health legislation as well.

This kind of a qualified conclusion will be seen to be inevitable by all who realize that social institutions develop experimentally. The value of this investigation for America is thus the greater because England's experiments need not be repeated in every particular. They can and should be used as the basis for wiser measures designed specifically to meet American conditions and needs.

WILLIAM T. RAMSEY,
Chairman.

1. Introduction.

A. Summarized Conclusions

The investigation into the operation of Health Insurance in Great Britain which was undertaken at the request of your Commission, was designed to find the degrees of success attending the operation of the present act, to discover the attitude of the various affected groups toward it, and to consider as far as possible the extent to which it might be applicable to American conditions.

It may be said at once that in the main and considering the handicaps and obstructions suffered during five years of war the act is in reasonably successful operation and is beginning to produce some of the benefits that were initially urged in its behalf.

In the second place the affected groups in the community are now working the act with a remarkable degree of cooperation and with an all but universal recognition of the value of the legislation. Few in the community would seriously advocate or even contemplate its repeal or withdrawal. The tendency and common desire is in quite the opposite direction: to make the act in fact as well as in name a national act which will really assure good health throughout the country.

In the third place, as this report will presently develop, it is highly probable that much may be learned from the failures and the shortcomings of the present operation; and any rigid copying of the British act would certainly be quite unwarranted when the peculiar conditions under which it has developed are understood.

Points at which the British experience can most certainly provide a useful warning are the following:

1. The cash benefits should not be paid through approved societies but through local bodies publicly constituted.
2. The cash benefit should be at least 50% of wages.
3. The medical benefits should not be limited to the insured workers, but should extend to their families.
4. Hospital care, consultant services and specialized diagnostic facilities in the form of clinics and laboratories should not be left out of the plan, but should be incorporated as part of the medical benefit.

This report will amplify and explain the above statements. It will be exceedingly difficult to offer anything like statistical proof of them because to a considerable extent that does not exist. At every turn and in respect to every problem we were repeatedly told, "You know during the war it was impossible to do that, etc." or, "The experience of the war years would really vitiate any figures we might offer." Hence, while we have sought figures wherever possible, we have even more sought the considered opinions of representative and typical spokesmen of the government's administrative staff, employers, trade unions, approved societies, panel and general doctors and insured workers.

B. Purpose of the Act.

It is first necessary to consider what the act was intended to do. It was advanced by Mr. Lloyd George in 1911 to some extent for political reasons, and also to meet the conditions revealed in the reports of 1909 Poor Law Commission. It was originally intended to carry insurance against sickness and death to workers and their dependents through state organized funds. But because of the strength of the commercial life insurance companies and of the "friendly societies" (working class mutual benefit societies) the death feature was omitted and these organizations were allowed to become the agents for administering the cash benefits. And because of the work and expense involved the dependents were excluded (except in the case of the maternity benefit for the wife of the injured man.)

The act was designed to be a preventive of ill health and a means of alleviating the destitution which it brought. If "prevention" is taken to mean discovering from the records of sickness its incidence in particular trades and local areas with special study and treatment to reduce that incidence where it is excessive, little has been done. But if prevention means also making it easy for all working people between 16 and 70 to consult a doctor as soon as they begin to feel ill or whenever they are too ill to go to work and therefore want to be certificated for cash benefits by their doctors who must consequently examine them, then the amount of preventive work has been tremendous. Hundreds of thousands of persons, it is universally agreed, seek medical advice now who would not have afforded it before; and they seek it promptly. They seek it, as the doctors told us, at a stage when the length and seriousness of the illness can usually be reduced. The fact that there are roughly twice as many visits paid by doctors now as there were before the act was in force may be taken to prove not that there is twice as much illness or unnecessary visitation, but that people see the doctors as soon as they feel indisposed, and that many people now secure medical attention who never got it prior to the act. As a doctor put it to us, "If three men come to me two of whom have little or nothing the matter with them, and the third is in the early stages of some serious disease, all three visitations are justified."

As to the other purpose of the act the relieving by cash benefits of destitution due to sickness of the wage earner—the situation has been so profoundly changed by the war that accurate statements are difficult. The cash benefit even as increased by recent legislation is so small as compared with wages that in cases of prolonged sickness the need of some larger degree of outside assistance is still necessary. The act does not provide a large enough cash benefit to remove the possibility of destitution resulting from the wage earner's sickness. Due to a combination of causes, however, the amount of actual destitution is less in England than before in recent years. It is for example generally admitted that wages have in most cases risen to a degree that has made provision out of wages for more food and for illness more likely. Especially have the unskilled workers improved their status in this respect.

II. Brief Description of the Act.

The original act of 1911 was amended at various points in 1913, and 1920. Since the report of the previous Health Insurance Commissioner of Pennsylvania contains an admirable outline and summary of the provisions of the basic legislation, it is only necessary to mention below the essential features of the present law and regulations. Many minor provisions have intentionally been omitted in the interest of clarifying the main points.

A. Contributions.

Men pay 10d. (20 cents) a week of which employer pays 5d and the worker 5d. To the amounts thus collected the state adds an amount equal to 2/9 (two-ninths) of the total.

Women pay 9d. (18 cents) a week of which employer pays 5d. and the worker 4d. To the amounts thus collected the state adds an amount equal to 1/4 (one-fourth) of it.

These contributions are payable in respect to practically all manual workers and all non-manual workers whose income falls below 1250 per year ($1,250).

Other citizens may join as "voluntary contributors," but since no medical benefits are available for them they pay a reduced contribution.

These contributions are made through the employer who buys special stamps at the post office. These he is required to affix weekly to the card of each employee as in evidence of payment.

If the employer has more than 100 employees he may stamp the worker's card half yearly with one lump sum, high-value stamp representing the total amount of the combined contributions. These cards are at each six month's interval given to the individual workers who send them to their respective "approved societies" (presently defined) which in turn use them as evidence of payment to get the proper funds credited to them by the Government. The approved societies then distribute fresh cards to the employers where their members are at work.

B. Cash Benefits.

The man who is certificated by his doctor as "incapable of work" because of some specific illness is entitled to 15 shillings ($3.75) a week after a three day waiting period, continuing for twenty-six weeks; and for continued disability thereafter he gets 7 shillings 6 pence ($1.88) so long as he is incapable of work.

The benefit for a woman worker is 12 shillings ($3.00) with the same disability benefit as the men's.

To be eligible for these benefits the worker must have paid contributions for twenty-six weeks; and he is deemed to be in arrears in his contributions if they are not made for at least 48 weeks in the insurance year. When in arrears the worker is notified and has three months grace in which to become fully eligible by the payment of a fixed sum depending upon the length of the arrears period; and if that is not paid he is eligible for benefits at a lowered rate.

A married woman worker is entitled to 40 shillings ($10) at confinement. The wife of an insured man is entitled in her own right to the same amount when confined; and if both husband and wife are working two maternity benefits are paid.

The cash benefits are usually paid through the local officer of an approved society upon presentation to the society of the medical certificate from the worker's doctor and also in many cases after a visit from the society's sick visitor.

C. Medical Benefits.

Every insured person is entitled to medical attendance throughout his illness provided it is service that can be rendered by a general practitioner of ordinary skill and capacity. This service does not, however, include the services of a doctor at times of confinement of an injured woman or of the wife of an insured.

The sanitarium benefit heretofore provided hospital care for tuberculosis insured persons is to be withdrawn after 1920 for reasons that will be presently considered.

Medical benefit also includes the free provision of the familiar drugs and medicines and of a state number of medical and surgical appliances such as bandages, etc.

There is no statutory provision for hospital treatment, nurses, dental treatment, medical attendance upon the dependents of the insured, specialists' advice or medical care at confinement.

D. Administration of Cash Benefits.

There are the following general types of carrying fund which the insured person may join:

- An approved commercial insurance company.
- An approved friendly society.
- An approved trade union.
- An approved establishment fund.

In addition, there is a class called deposit contributors who belong to no society but hold their own cards and buy stamps for themselves at the postoffice. Their contributors are only available in benefits to the amount of their own and their employers' payments; there is no sharing of the risk with the members of any group.

The worker has the option of choosing his approved society; and he may not transfer except at stated intervals and on payment of two shillings.

The approved societies are not profit making bodies and they do not pool their funds. Each fund is supposed to carry its own burden of sickness and the idea has been that if any society accumulated a surplus, that value would be available for larger benefits to the members of that society. A valuation was to be made every five years to determine the condition of the funds; but owing to the war the first valuation is only now being brought to completion. The results of it will not be published until early in 1921; but they will probably show a considerable variation in surpluses.

E. Administration of Medical Benefits.

The local doctors who desire to practice under the act, that is do the medical work for the insured,—are contracted with by a local insurance committee, which is the representative administrative and supervisory body of each local area in respect to the medical side of the act. Doctors are now paid at the rate of 11 shillings per year per person on their "panel". However in Manchester and Salford although the total sum of money available to be used in payment of the local doctors is allotted at this rate, the individual doctor is paid on a visitation basis on a scale locally agreed upon.

Complaints of inadequate or unsatisfactory medical service are supposed to be brought to this committee; and if there is a real case against a doctor there is a body of inquiry and final decision composed of three doctors and a barrister.

Up until now, if there has been doubt about the certification by a doctor of an insured person, the approved society has usually employed its own medical referee to give an opinion. Under the latest amendments thirty state references have now been appointed to look into doubtful cases.

In order to assure a reasonable division of work and proper service to each individual, the size of the panels is now to be limited to a maximum of 3,000 persons, with authority in the local insurance committee to restrict the number further where they so desire. In the London area, for example, the panel of any individual doctor may now be only 2,000. In Manchester on the other hand it may be 3,000. As a matter of fact the great majority of panels are less than 2,000 in number.

F. Financial Arrangements.

The explicitly recognized expenses under the act are the following:

- (1) The cash benefits.
- (2) Payment to doctors at the rate of 11 shillings per person per year.
- (3) Administrative expenses of approved societies at rate of 4 shillings 5 pence per person per year.
- (4) Administrative expenses of Insurance Committees.

- (5) Payment for drugs on basis of an agreed schedule of prices.
- (6) Administrative expenses of Ministry of Health including indoor and outdoor staff.
- (7) The reserve fund.
- (8) The contingencies fund.
- (9) Women's Equalization Fund.
- (10) Central Fund.

The last four funds are explained later to meet these expenses there are available the three-fold contributions, and sundry parliamentary grants which have been called for as special problems have arisen.

G. National Administration.

The Central administration which includes allocation and handling of accounts, inspection of operation of the Act by employers, insurance committees and approved societies, issuance of regulations, stamps, cards, etc., is vested in a department of the Ministry of Health.

The actual arrangements with local doctors and the actual payment of cash benefits is, however, left to the several local agencies above described.

III. Other Public Health Legislation.

No adequate picture of the working of the act is possible without mention of the public health measures which are simultaneously provided.

In 1919 the Ministry of Health was organized "for the purpose of promoting the health of the people" of Great Britain. Under it are now grouped for purposes of coordination the following administrative duties.

- (a) Those of Local Government Boards pertaining to public health.
- (b) The administration of the National Health Insurance.
- (c) Supervision of work of Board of Education for expectant and nursing mothers and of children up to five.
- (d) Supervision of work of some body in respect to medical inspection and treatment of school children.
- (e) Supervision of midwives.

Under other recent enactments, provision is already made by most local authorities with the aid of special grants from Parliament for treatment of tuberculosis, venereal disease, medical and dental work for school children, maternity and infant welfare centers.

The situation is well summarized in the following paragraph:

"(1) Before birth the expectant mother may be dealt with by the local Health Authority (i. e., the Town or County Council or District Committee), under the Notification of Births (Extension) Act (Child Welfare);

(2) At birth there may be in attendance either a midwife provided by the Local Authority or a panel or private medical practitioner;

(3) From birth till five years of age is reached, the child again comes under the Child Welfare Scheme of the Local Authority;

(4) Between five and fourteen years, the child comes under the medical inspection scheme of the Education Authority, but if treatment is required that may be obtained from the family doctor or through a voluntary or charitable agency, or through clinics provided by the Education Authority;

(5) From fourteen to sixteen years there is no public provision of any kind for medical treatment, but the young person, if seeking employment in a factory, will be examined by a certifying Surgeon appointed by the Home Office;

(6) From sixteen years of age till the end of life, the man or woman, if employed, comes under the Insurance Acts, and received Medical Benefit through the Insurance Committee."

The doctors engaged on full or part time under one or another of these provisions probably total several thousand and are thus in fact the members of an embryonic national medical service.

In addition to the above provisions it should be explained that the local Poor Law Guardians also have their own medical and hospital provisions for destitute persons of any age. But it is now proposed and contemplated that all of this work shall be taken over and done under the Local Authorities, which will mean the final abolition of the Poor Law administration in so far as it is a branch of the medical service.

It is significant to point out in connection with all of this legislation that the tendency is definitely toward separating from the insurance act all special medical treatment and toward providing on a universal public health basis those medical services which are not readily available through a general practitioner. There is the meaning of the removal of tuberculosis and venereal disease treatment from under the act; and of the institution of maternity centers and care for all mothers under an act of 1918.

*A Public Medical Series, by McKail & Jones, 1919.

And it is not unlikely that in the next few months the Government will bring in a bill on the hospital question which will at least provide state payment for insured persons in hospitals and possibly for all regardless of whether they are or are not insured.

In short, the insurance act has been one of the potent influences in rallying public attention and support to a consistent and complete program of public health administration. And the Ministry of Health will undoubtedly in the next few years extend the scope and improve the quality of the medical services available for all the people. To this extent the insurance act has unquestionably been an aid in the direction of fundamental preventive medicine.

Having given this brief skeleton of the framework of health insurance legislation and administration, it is necessary next to consider its workings.

IV. The Act in Operation.

A. Contributions.

At present there is little if any objection to be found to the compulsory collection of contributions, except from those who believe that the contributory principle is less sound or less economical than the non-contributory,—believe, that is, that cash subvention as well as medical service should be provided directly out of taxes.

It appears to be widely understood that in whatever way immediate expenses are met, it is ultimately industry itself from which the cost is met. Whether the contributions are direct by assessment or indirect from taxation, the income out of which payment comes results from the productivity of industry and agriculture. And it is not generally felt to be a matter of primary moment to argue whether the contributions at least for the medical service should be secured in one way or another.*

On the other hand, it is true that the present contributory method of collecting the funds out of which the cash benefits and the medical benefits are paid, lightens the burden of direct taxation and is not felt to be an onerous burden by any individual employer or worker. From the point of view of adjusting the public health budget to available resources this consideration becomes of course of almost determining importance. It should be clear, however, that whether in the United States we elect to proceed by the contributory plan or by public grants, there is some additional expense involved. Good health can be bought only and as soon as we are willing to pay the price.

As to the administration for collecting the benefits, the work and confusion is now reduced to a minimum. Yet it is useful to consider further (1) the method of collection; (2) the cost of collection.

If the contribution idea is to prevail, there must of course be some definite evidence of payment which is readily available for the employer, the insured, the approved society and the government. The stamped card was only adopted after the most prolonged consideration; it is admitted to be a clumsy method, but no satisfactory substitute has yet been found that will apply to all cases. It is still conceivable nevertheless that a simpler method might be used for all but the more irregular and shifting types of work where because the worker is constantly moving about it is hard for him to have at all time evidence of his standing as to payment.

*A valid criticism may be made however against the restriction of the benefits to a limited number. Sir Arthur Newsholme, Medical Officer of the Local Government Board, says, for example, in a recent volume (Public Health & Insurance, John Hopkins press, 1920): "On the point of equity, it must be admitted that any system of so-called insurance which, like that of the English Act, excludes a large proportion of the population who, while paying in taxes in aid of the insured, require but do not receive their benefits, is contrary to the principle that any expenditure of Government funds should ensure to the whole community in need of the provision in question."

The method of lump-sum stamping at the end of each six months obviates much clerical work. The machinery of collection may thus be said to be running as smoothly as could be expected in a huge system comprehending 15,000,000 people and ranging from scrubwomen who come in by the day to highly skilled artisans and clerks whose income is regular.

Nevertheless, thoughtful administrators of the act including such persons as approved society secretaries, government inspectors, the best doctors, etc., call the whole stamp machinery into question—at least so far as the contributions are made to affect eligibility for medical attention. They point to the difficulties created by loss of cards by workers, agents or approved societies, by failure to stamp cards, failure to pay arrears. They point to the large amount of time and money required to hunt down the loss or error in one card; to be sure that employers are regularly stamping the cards; to be sure that workers are technically eligible for benefits to which they are entitled or which they manifestly should have. In the Government's own inspecting staff an enormous amount of time is certainly spent straightening out irregularities in regard to contributions.

The cost of contributions and collection is negligible so far as the individual employer is concerned. The administration expense of bookkeeping entries and stamping is surprisingly small; and the employer's share of the contributions is usually not over one per cent of the payroll. For example, in one store with over 7,000 employees not more than the equivalent of the full-time of two clerks is devoted to the health insurance details. In one factory with about 800 workers about half the time of one clerk was used. In general this cost would come to not over one tenth of one per cent of the payroll. The testimony of employers was therefore unanimous that the expense of the act to them was not a factory of any importance.

From the public point of view, however, the total expense of securing the contributions is undoubtedly great when all items in the account are considered—inspection, printing, postage, handling of stamps and cards by employers, approved societies and government officers. And that irregularities regarding contributions and stamping should ever deprive the insured of medical treatment is surely a denial of the whole idea of assuring good health among the workers. It frequently happens moreover that the worker whose contributions are not in good order, will be the very one who needs most not only the medical but the cash benefit as well.

In short, the conditions determining the eligibility for cash benefits may also disqualify the worker from benefits on the medical side. This interrelation seems to have little to commend it from the public health point of view, there should, it would seem, be no question from the public health point of view of eligibility for medical benefit. Any person needing medical attention should be able to have it.

B. Cash Benefits

The cash benefit, even as now increased, is in most cases such a small fraction of the possible wages that it is decidedly inadequate to protect the income and living standard of the insured during illness. It is generally conceded that the benefit should be less than wages, but a cash benefit which is 50% of wages is the very least that should be considered if a real subsidy is intended. Yet with a wage level for men workers today of between three and a half and five pounds a week (from $17.50 to $25) the weekly cash benefit of $3.75, is less than 25% of wages.

The small size of the present cash benefit not only automatically brings malingering to a minimum but, as several doctors said, the sick worker often returns to work before he should. Even unskilled workers are in many cases able to earn as much in one or two days work per week as they could get for the whole week's benefit. The problem from the point of view of malingering only becomes difficult in cases of irregular work where the worker may not have regular weekly employment and thus gets wages which do not exceed the usual benefit.

The promptness with which cash benefits are paid appears to vary with the efficiency of the approved society. The best organized societies unquestionably pay claims promptly upon their receipt. Delay may be due to many causes principle among which are question in the mind of the society as to the validity of the medical certification, and (in the case of commercial companies) transfer of agents with whom the insured thus gets out of touch and therefore does not know where to submit his claim.

The cash maternity benefit is undoubtedly the most popular and the most valued. The money is now paid directly to the woman beneficiary and the testimony is general that in ninety-five cases out of a hundred the money is used to help defraying the expenses of confinement. It assures that the mother takes care to have qualified midwife in attendance at the confinement. And the latter is sure to be on hand since she knows that the money for her fees is available. Moreover, the midwife is now required in case of any complication to call in a doctor whose attendance fees are paid by the local authorities under the maternity provisions legislation of 1918. Indeed, now that there is in most local areas some follow-up work with expectant mothers, (as a Public Health Provision) the likelihood is even greater that the maternity benefit will be wisely expended.

The maternity benefit is not, however, adequate to cover all the charges incident to confinement. The nurses' or doctor's fees usually take all or nearly all of the benefits which leaves the other expenses to be otherwise met. There is therefore a demand especially in labor circles for the payment of a larger amount which will be more in the nature of a maternity endowment paid to all mothers.

There is also on the part of organized labor a definite sentiment favoring the addition of a funeral benefit for the deceased worker. The demand for this will undoubtedly be strengthened by the recent governmental inquiry into the operation of commercial insurance companies, which found that in one large company over 40% of the insurance policies lapsed with consequent advantage to the companies and no return whatsoever to the insured; and found also that "though practically every person in the wage earning class is insured at some point of his life, at least 30% of the deaths among that class are uninsured at death."* Indeed the department committee of inquiry intimated that "it might be practicable to propose a funeral benefit to be administered under the National Health Insurance system."

C. Medical Benefits.

As already suggested, the existence of free medical service for all insured persons means that many now go to doctors who did not do so before and go at the earliest signs of illness. Everyone agrees that this is an incalculable benefit, the good results of which in a better level of health cannot fail to materialize.

It should be pointed out, however, that the medical service which is available is neither thorough nor exhaustive; nor is it expected to be under the terms of the act. If a doctor finds that a case requires an operation, or he is unsure of the proper diagnosis, he must now have recourse to hospital and consultants whose services are not required to be available to him or to the insured under the act. It has happened fortunately up until now that the voluntary hospitals (supported by private subscription and by the free work of their medical staffs) have stood ready to supplement the work of the general practitioner to the extent of their facilities. In this way hospital service has been usually available, although it has never been guaranteed, never been completely adequate in the suburban districts, always been dependent on private charity and subject in no way to any control by the patients or by the public health authorities. It is one of the anomalies of the act that its success on the medical side depends upon access to hospital and consulting facilities which have as yet no organic relation to the rest of the scheme.

Now that the hospitals, are on the verge of insolvency, the Government is being obliged to consider relating them to the insurance work more formally.

Much attention was given in this investigation to the quality of medical service given. While accurate general statements are difficult to make, it is probably fair to say that the workers of England are on the whole now getting more and better medical service than they ever did before the act. It has to be remembered, however, (1) that under the act every registered general practitioner has always been eligible to become an insurance doctor; simply by making application; (2) during the war a great many of the best practitioners were in army or navy service; (3) the act only inquires such treatment as "can consistently with the best interests of the patient be properly undertaken by a practitioner of ordinary professional competence and skill." (Medical Regulations).

*Industrial Insurance Companies and collecting Societies Cd. 614, 1920.

These three facts alone go far to account for much of the criticism which has been levied at the quality of medical work given under the act. Moreover, the doctors were at first hostile to or suspicious of the act. Today this is not true. Out of between 20,000 and 23,000 doctors (how many of these are only consultants and not supposed to do insurance work is difficult to find out) who are in active practice, over 14,000 are on the panels.

Criticism of the medical service has fastened on the danger of "lightning diagnosis"; on the distinction made in attention given to panel as against non-panel patients; on the difficulty of lodging complaint against a doctor; and on the fact that the best doctors do not become insurance practitioners. There is undoubtedly considerable basis for some of these criticisms or they would not be repeated as often. But the testimony is on the other hand convincing that medical service is better now—bearing the handicaps of war just noted—than it ever could have been before for thousands of persons. Now that the number of patients per insurance doctor is to be limited and the doctors are finding their panel practice in most cases so remunerative, the reasons for inferior service will be reduced. The doctors are and will be increasingly anxious to keep the good will of the insured and the insurance committee as well.

The Scotch Health Insurance Commission which until July 1919, administered the act for Scotland says in its latest report "very reliable evidence has emerged of neglect of duty on the part of insurance practitioners or of any real ground for loose general charged of inefficiency. Dissatisfaction with a limited service and agitation for an extended and complete medical and institutional service must not be founded on as a condemnation of the present insurance scheme but rather as an indication that it has resulted in increased appreciation of the importance of a further great development of medical services in the interests of the national welfare." (Italics mine).

Invidious distinction between panel and non-panel patients is undoubtedly still made; but it is generally considered to be decreasing. The feeling of inadequacy in the attention received appears to be a social as much as a medical matter. In those cases where the insured person does not use his panel doctor but goes to another physician and pays a private fee, the person is usually in the ranks of the clerical workers who still feel a certain class superiority to manual workers and therefore to panel doctors who treat manual workers;

The real reason for inadequacy of treatment is affirmed by the best doctors in England to be due rather to inadequate medical education and insufficient opportunity for special diagnostic assistance from which insured and non-insured suffer alike. The opportunities for study after the doctor leaves medical school meager; his opportunities for consultation with other practitioners and specialists are not well organized; access to laboratories is not assured.

An offset to this as well as to other shortcomings of general practitioners' service, is increasingly being resorted to in the form of partnerships of insurance doctors. These partnerships are of from two to six men, each of whom has his assigned hours at the offices and also naturally has some diseases on which he is more of a specialist than his colleagues. Under this arrangement the insured are certain of a doctor being on hand all the time, yet each individual doctor has free time for study and recreation. The terms under which these partnerships work are governed by regulations of the Ministry of Health so that the danger of any abuse of the plan is slight. Indeed, such arrangements appear to be officially encouraged. Similar results are obtainable where an insurance doctor hires an assistant to help him.

The medical services under the act are, it should be emphasized, specifically planned on the theory that only general practitioners' services can at this stage be given. Tuberculosis care, for example, except for domiciliary treatment, is now removed from the act and entrusted to the local authorities. The insurance doctor is not supposed to have to treat venereal cases, which also go to a local clinic. Nor is the insurance doctor expected to take maternity cases unless he so elects. But he is supposed to be able to diagnose and treat the usual complaints and to act as a clearing house for sending special cases to the necessary agency. It is in his home contacts and constant knowledge of the family that his value lies. The policy, thus exemplified, seems to argue for more adequate statutory provisions to correlate general and specialist advice.

The question of determining eligibility for medical benefit reveals the anomaly of trying to adhere strictly to the insurance principle in the provision of medical treatment while at the same time trying to make the service as fully available to all as possible. Loss of one's medical card, failure to pay a sufficient number of weeks' contribution or failure to "sign on" to a doctor's list may temporarily make it difficult if not impossible to be eligible for medical attention. Testimony is general, however, that a person needing treatment is likely to get it regardless of his legal status under the act. And this seems natural. The only real evidence which it should be necessary to give as to eligibility for treatment is increasingly seen to be the need of treatment.

This principle does not apply as yet however in the case of attention needed by the dependents of the insured. They must pay for their service; and, as would be expected, the workers of the family go to the doctor on the slightest provocation where as the non-insured persons will wait until illness becomes serious and therefore doubly difficult to cure. Yet even here the tendency is for the insurance doctor in his visits to a home to consider the troubles of other members of the family in which situation the fee while important is not the primary consideration. And without a great deal of bother the visiting insurance doctor can often direct a non-insured sick person to the service of local doctors available under special provisions for the tubercular, for maternity cases, school children's cases, etc.

Decision as to the eligibility of the insured for benefits in doubtful cases is now in an unsatisfactory state since the standards of different approved societies vary so greatly and their method of local follow-up are so different. As it is, if the approved society doubts the validity of a claim it usually sends its own doctor, or referee, to see the patient, advising the local doctor of the step and asking for his help. This intervention is usually welcomed and the necessity for a second diagnosis is so far recognized by all that thirty referees are now included as salaried doctors under the act. Indeed, it is not inconceivable that the time may come when there will be one doctor to give medical advice and wholly different one to authorize the certifications for cash benefits. It is felt by many that there is much to commend such a separation of two quite different functions.

It is in fact difficult to tell in many cases whether incapacity for work really exists. The border line cases are many, especially where there is a tendency to diagnose illness as "general debility", and "anemia". In such cases it shall be seen that there are two points of view at work—and they perhaps form a wholesome corrective to each other. There is the point of view of the approved society anxious to suspend payments as soon as that can be justified; and there is the point of view of insurance doctor who usually sees the need especially with "run down" persons, of a prolonged rest without worry and under wholesome conditions. It is admittedly hard to reconcile these points of view where the surrounding conditions, economic and otherwise, are constantly working to negative the efforts of the doctor. Truly preventive work in many cases requires more than cash or medical benefits. It requires more food and better-cooked food, more fresh air, more quiet, no worry, etc. Failing these, cash benefits and bottles of medicine or tonic, may be poured out unceasingly without appreciable results.

It should be noted, in short, that under any act it will be difficult to define when a person is sick; and it will be necessary while giving medical service without stint to use care in paying cash benefits for borderline cases of semi-incapacity or valetudinarianism.

This, is, of course, an aspect of the problem of mal-lingering. There is undoubtedly this kind of unconscious malingering which has to be guarded against; and the use of referees under the act is essential to keep this at a minimum. It is also necessary to this end to have the administration of cash benefits in the hands of local agency which can really be in intimate touch with the beneficiaries.

At present there is the further safeguard of weekly certification for cash benefit by the doctors, except in chronic cases where the approved society agrees to accept a bi-weekly or monthly certification.

Apart from these comparatively exceptional border line cases, the amount of deliberate malingering is agreed by all to be small, the reason being that the cash benefit is so small. Indeed as a problem of practical administration it appears to be negligible.

Extension of Medical Benefits.

The Government health insurance budget of 1914 contained estimates for the services under the act of referees, consultants and nurses. It is therefore fair to say that, although the war prevented the addition of any of these services, they were contemplated as parts of an adequate plan. It is probable that within the next year the Government will again introduce plans to aid in the provision of hospital beds, consultant's services and perhaps nurses' services. Already one of the approved societies with a membership of over 300,000 gives dental treatment free to the insured.

There is considerable demand in labor circles for the extension of medical benefits to the families of the insured. It is recognized that this would entail a larger contribution, but it would be proportionately less than for the man alone.

This demand reaches its logical culmination in the stand of the Labour Party for a national medical service under which medical attendance would be available—much as education now is—for any one who wanted it. The distinction should be noted, however, between a "state medical service" and a "National medical service." Under the former all doctors would be full time salaried servants of the state. The advocates of such a plan are naturally few. Under the latter the state would rather aim to build up and provide such medical service as was needed to assure the public health; leaving to private, individual and voluntary activity all doctors and patients who did not choose to receive the benefits of the public service, just as now public education is available for all unless the individual chooses to substitute a private school.

The Association of Approved Societies, including some of the largest friendly societies and trade union approved societies to which belong some six million insured, has also recently come out for nationalizing the medical service in the sense used above as the most satisfactory way of getting medical attention for all with as little red tape as possible.

The doctors as represented by the British Medical Association are opposed to the idea of a national medical service although they recognize and approve of the tendency of the state to provide certain consulting and specialist services in the hospitals on a salary basis as well as for the local authorities to make the medical provisions which they do.*

*The following quotations from an article on "The Future of the Medical profession" in the British Medical Journal for October 19, 1918 indicates quite typically a prevailing view among many thinking doctors as to the types of medical service that they would like to see available.

"What, then should be the profession's constructive policy? In formulating this it would well shortly to consider the basis, or bases, on which the profession renders service to the community at present, and these services can be classified under four heads according as they are rendered under conditions of—

1. Salaried service, whole time or part time—for example, public health appointments, tuberculosis appointments, school medical appointments, etc. (military medical services are not under consideration). These are conditions of "State medical service."

2. Part time contract service—for example, national health insurance work.

3. Voluntary service—for example, work done at charitable hospitals.

4. Individuals service—for example, private practice. This can be divided into two heads, according as it deals with (a) general work, (b) consultant and specialist work.

It is indeed a fact which no one in England ignores that wholly apart from insurance, there are today several thousand whole or part time doctors in the salaries employ of one or another governmental body; and the number is constantly increasing. If the insurance doctors are included in this number it would total close to 18,000 doctors. When applications were sought for the thirty referee posts to be filled this summer there were over 1,300 applicants; which certainly indicates no great reluctance on the part of doctors to accept a salaried position with the government. "The majority of the medical profession in Great Britain is engaged in either whole-time or 'part-time service for the state or for local authorities. Of the 24,000 medical practitioners in England and Wales, some 5,000 are engaged in poor-law doctors, some 4,000 or 5,000 in the public health service, possibly 500 in the lunacy service, 1,300 in the school medical service, and smaller numbers in various other forms of medical service for the state. This is exclusive of the general practitioners who undertake contract work under the National Insurance Act, and who cannot fall far short of three-fourths of the total membership of the profession. It should be noted that many doctors hold several appointments."

There is also an association of about 500 doctors actively in favor of a national medical service.

These facts are dwelt upon at length because this particular problem is significant for America as illustrating how a situation was not fully faced at the outset. Whether Great Britain was to have an insurance plan for dealing with health or a public health program supplemented by cash benefits, does not appear to have been candidly considered by the initiators of the legislation. As a result, the experiments have conclusively shown the need for making whatever medical provisions are offered universally available without regard to the industrial status of the citizen, his income limit, or his standing in a scheme of cash subventions.

In solving this problem serious consideration has to be given to the attitude of the medical profession itself. Its cooperation is manifestly essential to any plan the community decides to undertake. But that cooperation can so easily extend over into dictation that the experience of England is a useful warning. The outstanding features of any plan to be adopted should be offered to the medical profession for an opinion and for suggestion as to ways and means. But it will be a serious mistake to allow those who are accustomed to think that they "have a vested interest in ill health," to dictate how much or how little medical service the community shall provide for itself on a public and universal basis. On that matter of fundamental policy which is really the first problem to be faced in working out a plan for health insurance or other public health provisions. The doctor's advice should not be final. As he is likely to have a too ex-parte view. It is true of the doctor's relation to the state, as of the relation of the other professional experts, that when basic policies are being determined "the expert should be on tap but not on top."

Contrary to the usual impression in America, however, the doctors are not today opposed to the British act. Quite the opposite is the fact. They realize and state freely that the doctors are better off under the act than they ever were before. They have an assured regular income and no bother with collections. As one doctor in a peculiarly influential position said: "The doctors could not be pried loose from the act with a crowbar." Such remarks should not be taken to mean that doctors feel that they have a sinecure under the act, but it has brought a degree of economic independence in the profession which is unprecedented, and has served as a spur to better workmanship and to the enlistment in the profession of more young men and women than in the medical schools have ever before had. The fact that the doctors have a small organization which is actually a trade union, and another large and powerful body which is to all intents and purposes a professional union, and that both of these organizations represent the doctors in collective bargaining with the Government, should not lead to the conclusion that there is an absence of cooperation in these official relations. The fact does, however, point strikingly to the importance of having groups of officials both in the actual governmental administration and in the local areas strong enough to carry on the inevitable bargaining process in a way calculated to assure that the rights of the taxpayer (that is, everyone) and of the patient are protected.

D. Administration of Cash Benefits.

The cash benefits is administered through the approved societies except in the case of some 300,000 "post office contributors" who may collect through the local post offices benefits to the amount of their contributions.

A brief explanation of the machinery will serve to show the part played by these societies. They are the official carriers. A worker must join one of them (or become a deposit contributor at the post office). He then receives from his society a stamp card which he gives to his employer to stamp as evidence of payment by him of contributions for himself and his employees. These stamped cards, one for each six months, are returned to the worker at the end of the half yearly period; who in turn sends his card on to his approved society which credits him with the payment and presents the cards to the Government as evidence of the collection.

When the worker wants cash benefits, he gets his medical certificate of illness from his doctor, and sends it along to the approved society, usually by presenting it locally to an agent who forwards the claims.

Since the approved societies are organized in different ways some in local lodges, some in central organizations with merely local agents the promptness with which claims are settled, the standard of eligibility for benefit, and the thoroughness with which a local visitor investigates each case in addition to forwarding the doctor's certificates to the central office, vary greatly.

Moreover, since each worker may join any approved society he wishes, it is not unusual to find in one shop workers who belong to from 25 to 50 different approved societies. It is this multiplicity of societies which makes it necessary and convenient to use the stamped cards as evidence of payment. But when it comes to payment of benefits this multiplicity may make it necessary for the agents and sick-visitors of a great number of approved societies to be visiting in the course of one day in the same street or even in the same house.

The frightful waste to which this overlapping leads is at once apparent. So important a feature of the Act are those approved societies, however, that further discussion of them is postponed to a separate section.

As already intimated, the diversity of standards set up by the approved societies means that some societies are making every effort to curtail payments while others are giving benefits almost without question. The element of control which is counted on to keep the payment of benefits within reasonable limits is the method of considering each society's finances autonomously. The Act provides that the surplus of any society (as determined by the government valuation taken every 5 years) shall be available for increased benefits for the members of that society. These increased benefits may be in the form of either cash or medical benefits. Whether or not this provision has acted as an effectual check upon liberality of payments, is doubtful. For the government although careful in its inspection has on the other hand made special and additional financial provisions for societies which become insolvent.

Another provision relating to the control of approved societies' administrative expenses, says that if they go above 5 shillings per person per year there shall be an assessment upon the members of that fund or their benefits may be correspondingly reduced.

There has been some criticism on the score of delay in payment of cash benefits. There is undoubtedly some ground for this complaint, although here again much of the criticism can be explained in terms of the disorganized clerical staff of the approved societies during the war (e. g. one large society lost 100 men clerks the day war was declared). Or, in the second place, delay in settlement is frequently to be explained because of some irregularity in the presentation of the claim for which the approved society is not responsible. Here again the machinery of the stamp cards causes confusion, as for example, when the worker unwittingly gives his card to the agent of a society to which he does not belong and the card is put aside by the agent or lost in the offices of his company.

In general, however, the largest carriers, especially the friendly and big trade union societies, pride themselves upon the efficiency of their office organization and the promptness with which claims are paid. It was the usual thing in a number of the societies visited, to have all the claims received in a morning's mail handled and dispatched the same day. Testimony is general, however, that the commercial companies which are acting as approved societies are the least satisfactory carriers from the point of view of prompt payment due perhaps less to intention than to the fact that the health insurance is only incidental to their profit-making business.

It may be said, in short, that most of the administrative difficulties surrounding the present method of paying cash benefits are not inherent parts of a soundly-organized insurance plan; but they are inherent parts of a method of paying through approved societies such as England felt compelled to resort to because of the strength of the commercial insurance companies and friendly societies.

E. Administration of Medical Benefits.

Because it seemed expedient to work the cash payments through approved societies and because they offered no logical basis for the provision of medical treatment, it was necessary for England to set up separate machinery for the administration of medical benefits. The country was therefore divided into about 150 local areas, in each of which an insurance committee was created, the membership of which is representative of the different interested groups. This insurance committee makes the contracts with the local doctors who are to serve in that area. It also decides how many insured persons may be on the list of any one insurance doctor, although a maximum of 3,000 persons has now been set by the Government. This committee, moreover, handles the transfers of insured persons from the list of one doctor to another; receives and deals with complaints against the insurance doctors; makes the payments to the doctors; and makes arrangement with local druggists for the provision of drugs.

The means at the disposal of these committees for dealing with inferior or inadequate medical service are by means completely satisfactory, but are being constantly improved. The limitation of the size of the panels is universally felt to be desirable, as is also the use of official referees who will necessarily work in close conjunction with insurance committees.

Actual formal complaints against insurance doctors by insured persons are remarkably rare, due perhaps rather to the cumbersomeness of the machinery and the difficulty of proving a case, than to the absence of criticism. And it frequently works out in practice that the insured persons complain to the approved society with which he feels on better terms than with the insurance committee: and the approved society then handles the complaint if it is serious. If the Insurance Committee finds that there are grounds for the complaints which it receives, it may discipline the doctor in any one of several ways, the most drastic of which is to cancel his contract.

In such a case, however, the doctor has the right of appeal to a thoroughly disinterested local body composed of three medical men and a barrister as chairman.

From the point of view of the insured person, the effort is to assure himself of satisfactory medical service by the use of the following methods. He has free choice of doctors; the chance periodically to change his doctor and the right to complain to a lay authority—the insurance committee.

In practice the first provision—free choice of doctors—means today as much if not more actual freedom in selection than obtained before the Act was passed. For in the great majority of cases the doctors who were already practicing in industrial or agricultural centers, became insurance doctors. And in some districts the assurance of a fixed income from insurance practice has meant that additional doctors have been attracted there to practice.

The clamor for "free choice of doctors" was not one, however, which was or is raised by the patients, although it goes without saying that the most successful medical work depends upon a condition of personal confidence between doctor and patient. But there is very much less interest on the part of insured persons in exercising a free choice than was anticipated. The great problem has indeed, been to get workers to indicate a preference for some doctor, in order that he may be assigned to a place on that doctor's list. It is a further consideration that the free choice may take place on a capricious basis. Mention was frequently made of cases where a popular doctor on a convenient corner had larger panels than he could handle properly while better doctors who were less genteel or lived on a side street had less to do than they could handle.

Once the insured person is on a given doctor's list and finds the medical service unsatisfactory (even though there may not be sufficient ground for official complaint), he may apply for transfer to the list of another doctor. Such transfer may take place at the end of any six months' period, or, if the original insurance doctor also signs the application, the insured may transfer at once. Manifestly, however, the later condition is difficult to fulfill, and the former is resorted to in surprisingly few cases.

Payment of Doctors.

The basis for the payment of doctors is 11 shillings ($2.75) per insured person per year to which in the rural areas are added mileage fees for distances of over two miles to the patients' homes. A doctor with a thousand persons on his list would thus have an assured income of about $2,750. (This would mean over $3,000 if considered from the point of view of the purchasing power of money in England) to which would be added his fees for private practice. It is admitted by doctors and affirmed by all observers that the doctors are thus better off under the Act than they ever were before. They do not have to worry about collecting fees from panel patients; they get their insurance income at regular intervals of three months; they are virtually guaranteed an income dependent upon the size of the panel. Now that the practice of doctors working in partnership with several colleagues is being extended, the time on duty is being divided up in a way to make the amount of work necessary to earn a comfortable living exceedingly reasonable, leaving time for study and recreation.

Some trouble still arises about the number and identity of insured persons on a doctor's list but difficulties on that score are being reduced. The doctor is paid on the basis of a list made up in advance; and if there are transfers or movement of persons an adjustment is effected at the end of the period. Here again it seems true that doctors are on the whole less particular than they used to be about being sure that the patients whom they treat are on their own panel. If the visitor to a doctor's office needs attention he is likely to get it or is sent where he can get it.

The so-called capitation basis of payment has the effect of making it an object for the doctor to keep his insured patients well and of getting them well as quickly as possible. Of course there is also possible the view that since the fee is assured the service will not be so good. Undoubtedly instances to illustrate both tendencies could be cited. But on the whole it is agreed that the capitation basis is the most satisfactory.

In Manchester and Salford the doctors originally objected to the capitation plan and a basis of payment for services rendered was adopted. A similar plan started in four other localities has been dropped. The plan provides a scale of fees for different types of visit and a full record by the insurance doctor of services rendered by him. The records pass through the hands of a committee of doctors to see that there has not been excessive visitation and the payments are then made. The total fund from which payment comes, however, is determined on the capitation basis; that is, it is as many times 11 shillings as there are insured persons in the entire district; so that no doctor gets more in the long run than he would in any other district—unless he happened to be working in an area where the rate of sickness was constantly excessive. Since, the total resources are thus limited it has thus far under the visitation basis been necessary at every settlement to discount the doctor's claims for remuneration. The result naturally is that the good doctors who find their bills discounted because their colleagues have been doing too much visiting and thus making large claims, inquire into the type of medical service being rendered. Whether the reason for this discounting of claims is that the scale of fees for the several services is high or that the doctors do too much visiting, it is impossible to say. The doctors themselves, however, and others in the Manchester district, believe in the system and say that it works to satisfaction. It is the good result, they contend, of paying for work done and thus encouraging good work where it is needed. Not the size of the panel but the rate of sickness should in this view determine the payment.

The capitation basis however, clearly the simpler of the two; requiring less check and oversight and giving the benefit of a guaranteed amount of income and of freedom to give all the medical attention necessary without thought of seeming to "overvisit". And in the last analysis the kind of medical attendance given is determined more by the education and morale of the profession than by the method of compensation.

The English experience in administering medical benefits thus confirms the case of (1) Local administration of the medical service, (2) for a uniform basis for contracts with the local doctors in all districts, (3) for a uniform basis for certification as to the physical condition justifying cash benefits, (4) for medical referees, (5) for co-operative use of local diagnostic clinics.

F. Drugs.

A prescribed number of drugs and medical appliances are available free on prescription from the insurance doctor. These prescriptions when filled are forwarded to the insurance committees who make the payments to the local chemists whom they have appointed to fill the insurance prescriptions, on the basis of charges which have been agreed to between the Government and the national pharmaceutical organization.

In the event that a doctor is found to be giving too many prescriptions or those calling for too expensive drugs for which equally good but cheaper substitutes are available, he may be brought before a committee of doctors to explain his conduct.

G. Approved Societies.

The use of the approved societies as carriers of the cash benefits has been expedient but in many ways unfortunate procedure. Certainly no other country seeing the extra expense, duplication and over-lapping caused by the present system should think of resorting to this method of handling the cash benefits.

There are now over 900 approved societies and there were at one time over 2,000, many of which have been consolidated with other funds.

Each society, of course, has its own central office, its own local agents and sick visitors. Accounts must be kept for it separately in the Government offices and there must be individual supervision of their activities. Some societies select their risks; others admit every applicant. There is comparatively little segregation of risks by occupation and no segregation by residence. The statistics that would show the incidence of sickness by occupation and locality are thus especially difficult to get.

In short, the whole approved society machinery is a fine examples of what to avoid.

Indeed there are not lacking signs that the English themselves would be glad to be rid of them and to administer the insurance through one national fund. The valuation of approved societies which is now nearing completion will undoubtedly reveal wide differences in the amount of surplus which will be available for increased benefits in the several societies. If it comes about that some of the strongest commercial companies and friendly societies are in a position to offer larger benefits than many of the other societies, there will undoubtedly be considerable objection from the trade unions. And it is openly hinted even in official quarters that in the event of such a wide discrepancy being revealed, the agitation for one national fund as the carrier would be very active.

Certainly the warning was again and again repeated, "If you go in for health insurance, don't have anything to do with approved societies."

H. Hospitals.

As already stated, no hospital treatment is given under the act. The doctor who wants his patient to have institutional treatment must get him into a voluntary hospital. Of late years this has been increasingly difficult because of a shortage of beds and now also because the hospitals are financially embarrassed. Costs have more than doubled; former contributors are now taxed so heavily that they do not give; contributors from among the "new rich" have not yet materialized. As one advocate of privately supported hospitals naively remarked to me: "We expect that in another ten or twelve years the new rich will get the habit of giving and then the hospitals will be all right."

But meanwhile frantic efforts are being made to keep the hospital doors open at all; and those who are planning the public health program of the country, see that a wholly new way of meeting the problem is essential. It is possible that the Government will in the near future abolish the Poor Law Hospitals and make their beds available for use by the authorities. It is also possible that the Government will subsidize the hospitals on the basis of the number of beds used by insured patients. If some such arrangements as this is made, it will be then necessary to take steps to pay the hospital doctors who now give their services; as it is clear and right that if the hospitals are to be paid for their work for the insured, the consultants should be paid also.

This is an admittedly transitional time in respect to hospital provisions and those who are anxious to see adequate provision made as soon as possible with no suggestion of charity about it, are advocating that the hospitals be operated as public institutions. This will undoubtedly come in time, although the present Minister of Health has officially stated that this was not the present Government program. Nevertheless, the trend is already toward wholly publicly supported institutions for tuberculosis and maternity; and a good number of municipalities have their own general hospitals.

At the end of August of this year the Minister of Health introduced a bill which is likely to become law, which aims to make a beginning at public support and control of the hospitals. The proposed legislation gives power to county authorities to supply and maintain hospitals, to contribute to hospitals, to undertake the maintenance of any poor law hospitals in their areas, to provide ambulance service. It also gives these authorities power to raise the necessary funds.

The element of national control begins to enter, for contributions out of country funds to voluntary agencies are only allowed "on such terms and conditions as may be approved by the Minister."

This legislation is obviously a temporary and temporizing manner of dealing with the shortage of hospitals, since it puts the whole financial burden on the counties while making possible a beginning of national oversight. Still further legislation from the national point of view is thus needed, and is probably contemplated in connection with a bill to transform the poor law institutions into general municipal agencies.

I. Tuberculosis.

At present provision is made under the act for the sanatorium treatment of insured persons having tuberculosis. This arrangement will be discontinued after the year 1920, not because it is no longer needed but because it is felt that the local authorities can handle this disease better and more adequately. For the whole population will be considered at once from the point of view of institutional care of tuberculosis, rather than be treated in two groups—the insured and the non-insured. Domiciliary treatment for this disease remains, however, the duty of the insurance doctor.

Admittedly the present provisions are too few; almost every Insurance Committee has a waiting list for sanatorium treatment. To pass on to local authorities the work of maintaining all the sanatorium beds necessary for tuberculosis, will, therefore, not solve the problem. As was said above with relation to general hospitals, it will thus be necessary in the immediate future for the Ministry of Health in conjunction with the local authorities, to adopt policy which will really promise to cope with this enormous problem.

J. Nursing.

No nursing services are provided under the act although as already pointed out they were contemplated in 1914; and will in all probability sooner or later be added. The nursing situation, like that of the hospitals, is admittedly unsatisfactory and in a transitional state.

Nursing services are now provided by "Local Authorities in connection with the Tuberculosis and Infant Welfare, by Parish Councils for the supervision of children under the Children Act, by Educational Authorities in following up the recommendations as to treatment made by School Medical Officers, and by various voluntary agencies. With such a plethora of authorities it is to be expected that it will frequently occur that two or more nurses will at one and the same time be visiting the same family." (A Public Medical Service—David McKail and William Jones.)

It will thus be seen that some districts will be adequately staffed while others are not; and that there is needed a proper coordination of national and local policies which will make available in a public way the services needed.

K. Prevention and Research.

The claim that health insurance means a new awareness of the value of preventive medicine has on the whole been substantiated in the experience of Great Britain; although the developments have perhaps been in unforeseen directions.

It may be fairly said that the Ministry of Health which was created in 1919 grew not only out of a knowledge of the need for coordination of medical efforts but also out of the fact that a unified national health program and administration was shown to be necessary to national vitality by the health insurance and by the army draft.

It is also true that since the insurance act was passed measures have been adopted for providing separately for venereal disease, for tuberculosis, for maternity and child welfare. How much of a casual relation exists between the needs revealed by the insurance act and the inception of these services it is impossible to say. But it is certain that now Health Insurance is a fact there is a new impetus and eagerness to attack the hospital, nursing, dental and sanatorium problems on a public and fundamental basis. It is also true that the demand for a constructive policy worked out under a national medical service is greater than it would have been today had there been no insurance act. And the doctors have certainly come a long way in their new attitude toward preventive medicine, toward clinical cooperation and toward regarding themselves, as custodians of the health of the community as well as the carers of its ills. This change of outlook, this invaluable educational process, can be ascribed almost wholly to the experience they have gained in working the insurance act.

It is moreover widely realized that the tuberculosis as well as other infectious sickness cannot be greatly reduced until the housing problem of the country is seriously faced on a large scale.

It was to have been expected, however, that the records of sickness would reveal local problems and occupational exposures which needed special attention. Medical records were required of the insurance doctors until the war when they were abandoned; and only at the present time is attention being given to devising a record card that will be of value. For it is admitted by all that the pre-war records were practically valueless as disclosing the incidents and nature of the country's sickness.

In short, after eight years of the insurance act, there is not definite body of knowledge as to which localities, trades or age groups experience what particular kinds of illness. But here again, extraordinary as this omission seems, it must be remembered that through five war years the doctors hardly had time to see all the patients who needed attendance, to say nothing of trying to keep individual records.

On the side of research the results although only indirectly attributable to the health insurance, have been most valuable. A Medical Research Committee was organized at an early date after the act was passed; and during the war that committee became the official research body of the Government under which worked the Health of Munitions Workers' Committee and others. Its findings, reported in full in special monographs and in its very interesting annual reports; have been of great medical value; and the chief problem as was pointed out by the secretary of the Committee, is to get the information obtained by research quickly into the hands of all the general practitioners of the land.

So important has become the work of this Committee that it has now become the Medical Research Council, removed from under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Health (for reasons which seem to the outsider hardly sufficient), and placed directly under the Privy Council.

On the whole, considering the intervening problems, the work of fostering preventive measures and research has gone well; although it is a matter of great regret that the original form of medical record keeping was not well enough designed to be of permanent use, and that the body of existent records is so meager.

Not the least significant of the preventive influences which have been set in motion are two reports, one by Sir George Newman, Chief Medical Officer of the Ministry of Health, on "An outline of the Practice of Preventive Medicine"; the other the Interim Report of the Consultative Council on Medical and Allied Services on the "Future Provisions of Medical and Allied Services."

These reports have had a wide reading and are in harmony on their major recommendations, although the latter carries its constructive proposals into greater detail. They emphasize the strategic place in a national public health program of:

- The general practitioner as the first and major point of contact with the people.
- The primary (or local health center as the unit of local medical work especially on its diagnostic and specialist side although the members of the clinic would be largely local general practitioners.
- The secondary (or district) health center with salaried specialists and consultants having necessary hospitals and laboratories.
- A number of supplementary services and special hospitals.
- A better integration of medical education with the day by day work of the general practitioner.

Their conclusions as to general principles and as to methods of carrying them into practical effect seem to your investigator to be sound and to warrant the further study of your Commission. Two copies of each accompany this report.

L. Insurance Finances.

The sources of income for the insurance expenses are the following:

- Contributions of Employers and Employed.
- Contributions of the State under the Act.
- Supplementary Grants of Parliament for Women's Equalization Fund; and for the Central Fund.
- Parliamentary Grants as follows:
 - Medical Grants in Aid under Act of 1913.
 - Special Grants in Ministry of Health Budget for Central Administration.
 - Special Grants for Expenses of Insurance Committee.

The sources of expenses under the insurance act are as follows:

- Cash Benefits.
- Doctors' Fees.
- Administration Expenses of
 - Approved Societies.
 - Insurance Committees.
 - Central Administration.
- Drug Fund.
- The Reserve Fund.
- The Contingencies Fund.
- Women's Equalization Fund.
- Central Fund.

In an explanation of the above two paragraphs it will be useful to describe those funds not already explained.

The Reserve Fund is set up to enable the Insurance Fund to pay for the sickness of the older members. The statutory contributors are based on the sickness rate of 16 years of age and until there has been one complete generation contributing under the act it is necessary to create a reserve to meet the increased incidence of sickness of the older members admitted at the start. The fund is based on a complete payment by 1950.

The Contingencies Fund is created for every approved society to meet any extraordinary demands that might arise.

The Women's Equalization Fund is to pay for the high incidence of sickness of married women workers, which the societies have found it necessary to provide for.

The Central Fund is to provide for those cases where an approved society shows a heavy and extraordinary deficit.

The moneys available from each contribution are divided as follows for men:

Sickness Benefit	3.02	d
Disablement Benefit	1.11	(per cap. per week)
Maternity Benefit	.63
Medical Benefit	1.92
Expenses of Administration	.94
	7.67-7 2/3	pence
To Benefit Fund (including administration)	7-2/3	d
To Contingencies Fund and Central Fund	2/3
To Redemption of Reserve Fund Value	1-2/3
Total of employer and employee' contribution	10d

But the expenses under the act in addition to requiring 2/3 of the expense of benefits to be borne by the State, necessitates other appropriations.

The increased doctors' fee now makes necessary a special Exchequer grant. The amount of this grant in 1919 was £3,000,000; but the 1920 figure will be considerably higher.

The Women's Equalization Fund comes from an Exchequer Grant of £280,000.

The expenses of administration in the Ministry of Health come (as far as can be roughly estimated from the 1920-21 budgets to something over £400,000.

The statement given below will indicate in an approximate way only the aggregate sums involved in the insurance plan for the year 1920.

Approximate Balance Sheet of Receipts and Expenditures for the Operation of the Act (1920)*

Receipts:
Contributions of Employers and Employed	29,800,000
State Grant including Supplementary Grants on Women's Equalization	6,900,000
Supplementary Grant for Medical Services (1919 basis)	3,100,000
Interest on Cash Reserves	2,000,000
	£41,800,000
Expenses:
Benefits (cash and medical)	28,700,000
Supplementary Medical (1919 basis)	3,100,000
Central Administration	400,000
Contingencies Fund	1,800,000
Reserve Values	1,500,000
Reserve Surplus	6,000,000
	£41,500,000

A rough sort of check on this balance sheet is obtained by making a comparative study of the estimates of 1920. These show that the expense of the act to the government and payable out of the exchequer is between eleven and twelve million pounds for the year. Such an amount added to the receipts of the act from the contributors roughly balances the total expense of the act.

Another sidelight on the cost of the act was supplied by the figures of Dr. Addison, the Minister of Health, in reply to a question in Parliament on July 19, 1920: He said that since the inception of the Act the total cost was in round numbers 190 million pounds. Of this amount 99 million pounds had gone in benefits; expenses and administration had taken 25 millions; and there was a balance in reserve of 60 millions.

About 12%, he said, of the receipts from contributions went to the Approved Societies for the expenses of administration.

As far as it is safe to draw any conclusions from the above figures, they indicate that to provide medical service for about 15 million people and cash benefits to the amount of something over 15 million pounds and the yearly Government expenditures is about 12 million pounds and the cash contributions of employers and workers are over 29 million pounds. And it has so far cost £1 for administration for every 14 expended on benefits.

*This statement aims to give only the most general approximation of receipts and expenses. It includes a figure for the supplementary medical grant which is probably much too low owing to the fact that the 1920 medical payment is at the new rate of $2.75 per insured.

It would seem to be fair to draw the conclusion that for the benefit of 15 million people's health, about 205 million dollars (in terms of American currency) per year is being spent or between $13 and $14 per insured person per year. If these figures are sound, the expense is certainly high for the benefits received.

In a careful study of "A Public Medical Service" (Allen & Unwin, 1919) made by a Glasgow doctor and the Clerk of the Glasgow Insurance Committee, the case is set forth with a convincing show of accurate statistics for a truly public medical service (cash benefits excepted) which would cost between 12 and 13 shillings per person per year or a little over $3. The additional cost necessary to pay cash insurance claims would certainly not amount to over $5 (probably $4 would be much more nearly a correct figure on the basis of the amount of the English benefits); making a total cost of less than $10 per capita for medical and institution treatment available for the entire population with the addition of cash benefits of the amount specified in the British Act.

These figures are introduced as being in no sense exact or conclusive. But they are believed to indicate that the present methods of an insurance scheme with duplicating approved societies, elaborate doctors' panels, government inspecting agencies and small-scale private druggists, create a variety of channels for small wastes and leakages which in the aggregate amount to an unwarrantedly high expense for the value received.

Moreover, it is obvious that the method of financing the measure has now departed (if indeed it ever was so financed) from an insurance basis. Special funds are created and new costs are added with no regard to the amounts originally made available. This is not said in objection to the present method of financing by supplementary grants. But it is a further point in the evidence that the tendency is increasingly away from an insurance, and toward a public health basis of finance so that the funds are made available on a basis of public need rather than solely on a basis of joint contribution and a pooled risk.

V. Conclusions.

The general conclusions reached by your chairman were summarily stated at the outside. But it may not be out of place to consider finally some of the more specific results of the British experience from which America might especially profit.

A. The application of the insurance method to the provisions of medical, hospital and nursing facilities is a clumsy and indirect way of making sure that the public health is being fostered and conserved.

The tendency is a wise one which brings a separation between the medical services which should be universally available and the cash benefits which might remain on an insurance basis.

On the other hand, it is undoubtedly true that the immediate expense to the public treasury can be kept considerably reduced by securing payment for the medical services out of the fund created by the joint contributions.

And it is further true, not only in England but wherever health insurance has been instituted, that the working of the insurance has supplied the great education to all groups in the community but especially to the doctors, as to the necessity for a more extensive public health program.

Hence, as a practical matter; the incorporation of the medical benefits into the insurance act is probably a wise step coupled with which should be the extension of the benefits under the act to all dependents.

B. The public health provisions of the community should as soon as possible include the following:

Medical attendance for all sick members of the community who desire it (including general practitioner and consultant services);

Institutional treatment including hospitals, sanatoria and convalescent homes;

Medicine and medical appliances;

Dental treatment; nursing; and

All medical services incident to maternity.

These provisions should be available on a basis of joint state and local support with the actual administration of the work as the responsibility of the local health authorities who would be so organized or reorganized as to be able to include the above services under their care.

Plans for the relation of local to district medical facilities have been admirably worked out in one or two English counties and their method of organization suggests a model for careful consideration. As illustrative of the method there in use the plan given in the note below is valuable:

1. The authority for carrying out the scheme will be a Board consisting of representatives of the County Council and of the General Hospitals.
2. The General Hospital areas shall be those shown on the sketch plan, subject to such modifications as experience shall show to be necessary.
3. In each Hospital area an Advisory Committee shall be formed of members of the Hospital Staff and Medical Officers in charge of the out-stations, whose duties will embrace—
 - (a) Ensuring that all treatment given at the out-stations is effective, and
 - (b) Advising the Board of Representatives on all medical matters, including all difficulties arising in connection therewith.
4. The situation of the out-stations shall be as shown on the plan and where practicable shall be established in connection with the Cottage Hospitals. They will be opened in the order decided by the amount of work likely to be done at each and will be arranged to meet the circumstances of each particular area, being larger and more completely equipped in the denser localities than in the more scattered areas.
5. The out-stations will be provided and equipped by the County Council.
6. The uses of the out-stations are primarily for examination and out-patient treatment in connection with—
 - (a) Venereal Diseases,
 - (b) Tuberculosis,
 - (c) Ex-service Men,
 - (d) School Children,
 - (e) Maternity and Child Welfare, for which provision has been made at the public expense. They will also be available for other conditions for which provisions may be made in the future, and may be used by the Medical Officers for insured persons and general hospital cases, by arrangement with the County Council.

7. The staff will be—
 - (a) Medical—
 - (1) A regular staff consisting of local practitioners appointed as medical officers by the Board of Representatives.
 - (2) A consultant staff consisting of—
 - (i) Visiting Staff of the General Hospital.
 - (ii) The Tuberculosis and Venereal Disease officers of the County Council.
 - (b) Nursing—
 - (1) District Nurse—
 - (2) Masseuse or Masseuse—
 - (3) V. D. Orderly and Nurse—
8. The out-stations will be opened—
 - (a) Weekly at a convenient hour, on a fixed day, for attendance by the medical officer, or oftener if necessary for the work of the County Council.
 - (b) Periodically for attendance by members of the visiting Staff, and by the Tuberculosis and Venereal Disease Officer, by arrangement.
 - (c) As often as may be necessary for intermediate treatment by the Nursing Staff.
 - (d) At such other time for the convenience of the Medical Officer in seeing his own patients and hospital cases, by arrangement with the County Council.
9. A register shall be kept of all attendances in a book provided for the purpose, and a case file kept for each case containing such simple notes as may be necessary for the medical history of the patient.

It should be pointed out that such proposals as these do not involve the idea of a universally state-employed medical service. Your investigator believes that the idea of such a service is repugnant to the great majority of physicians and patients, and that the best results at least for some time to come are obtainable in other ways. For example, the general practitioner who is to be available to give public medical service to any comer, would (as now) go upon the Government's list and have assigned to his care those families who elected to have him as their physician. He would then be paid on a capitation basis. If any individual feels that he would get better service by going to a doctor who is not on the public list, or by paying a public practitioner in his other capacity as a private doctor for the service he gets, he is at liberty to elect either of these alternatives. And the doctor meanwhile has whatever spur is provided both by the opportunity of getting on in the public service or of making good in a private practice.

In short, there would be necessary the employment on full or part time (as at present with the insurance doctors) by the public health authorities of a constantly increasing number of general practitioners and specialists, thus accelerating an existent tendency. But there would still be the widest possible latitude for those persons who chose to secure their own medical and institutional care for those doctors who preferred on whole or part time to carry on private practice.

Moreover the existence side by side of a considerable amount of both public and private practice would undoubtedly react wholesomely on each, keeping initiative, energy, professional ambition and a spirit of public service alive and growing.

In short, as the immediate next step, the medical benefits under the act should be as liberal as possible, including, the maximum of institutional provisions as well as general practitioner's care; and all treatment should be carefully coordinate to bring into effective use for the insured and his dependents all local and all state facilities.

C. Having made medical provision available for all insured and their dependents, it would still be necessary to make provision on a compulsory insurance basis for payment of cash benefits to workers when they were unable to work and secure wages.

All employed persons should be required to insure in a state fund out of which cash benefits would be paid for inability to work and earn.

D. Cash benefits should be at least 50%.

E. The administration of cash benefits should be decentralized on the disbursement side on a geographical basis but centralized on the collection side so that the Fund would be pooled and the risk distributed over an entire state. Benefits should be paid through a local agency which would be in control of representatives of the affected groups.

F. The Cash maternity benefit should not be administered on an insurance basis, but should be universally available and should be of an amount to cover fully the expense of confinement. There is indeed much to be said for a policy which makes of this benefit a maternity endowment of an even more substantial amount.

Medical service should be freely available for all maternity cases.

It is recognized that these conclusions may seem to your commission to extend into a larger field than that of the immediate inquiry. They are however, the conclusions to which your investigator was led in the honest and wholly unprejudiced effort to discover the good and the bad in the English act from the point of view of its furtherance of the public health and from the point of view of its availability for American uses.

It may of course be necessary for each separate community to make the same social experiments and learn by the same mistakes. It is to be hoped, however, that this is not true; that it is possible for one community to build upon the experience of another. And the experience proves, as your investigator reads the evidence, that the acute necessity for greatly developing the public medical facilities of the state should be recognized and met apart from and in addition to any insurance plan. The two are not mutually exclusive. They are supplementary. But the proper and wise development of the public health services will and should modify the kind of insurance plan which is adopted.

Your investigator recognizes fully the painful fact that those forces which have for various reasons been in opposition to the introduction of health insurance into America, have taken the line that "prevention" rather than insurance is the method to pursue, where this position was simply taken to delay matters and "prevention" was simply a plausible can't phrase with which to oppose any governmental action, the opposition has of course been sinister to a degree.

But this fact should nevertheless not be allowed to lend to a slighting of the immediate value and need of aggressively preventive work. Hence, if we are to meet that opposition most effectively we might well take up the slogan:

Medical and institutional service freely available for all employed persons and for their families with cash benefits for physically incapacitated workers out of a fund created by joint contributions, and with the strengthening and coordinating of the federal, state and local public health activities on behalf of children, mothers the subnormal and abnormal, the aged and those suffering from all infectious diseases.

It is not a question of prevention or insurance. It is—when all elements in the problem are faced at once—a question of assuring simultaneously adequate medical service, prevention and cash subvention. And there is no good reason why these three aspects of a public program should not be developed together. Certainly to allow the advocacy of one to be used as a basis for opposition to another is unscientific and shortsighted.

This report will certainly be construed wrongly if it is taken to be unfavorable to health insurance in general or to the British Act in particular. It aims rather to give a discriminating statement of the extent to which insurance has been able to carry out the original promises and purposes of its proponents.

The British Health Insurance Act has been a distinctly forward step in social legislation. It is however to be hoped that your commission will see its way clear to favoring a program at once more thoroughgoing, far-reaching, economical and scientific, which will however include an application of the insurance idea in its legitimate sphere.

The above report and conclusion lead us to a further supplement, that while there are many in Great Britain who do not look with favor upon State Control Health Insurance, the Act is working its way to success. Notwithstanding this belief there is such a vast difference in conditions between Pennsylvania and the foreign countries that Health Insurance, if adopted at all in this State, would, in our opinion, necessarily contain the separation of medical and cash benefits and of Americanizing the entire plan.

The cash benefit might be paid to workers who through illness are forced to abandon their earning powers for a period, but it is our belief that the patient should, at all times, be permitted to select his own physician and contract personally for the compensation.

APPENDIX No. II.

REPORT OF PUBLIC HEARINGS HELD BY THE COMMISSION.

Public Meeting, Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia,
 May 24, 1920.

Addressees:

Dr. Edward Martin, Commissioner of Health, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.
 Mr. John Lapp, Modern Hospital Publishing Co., Chicago, Illinois.
 Dr. Lee K. Frankel, Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., New York, New York.

Dr. Martin: I understand the reason for my being called before this Commission is so that you may make an approximation as to what influence the State Department of Health, which is your Department; to which every citizen of Pennsylvania belongs, and as to what influence that we might present toward the lessening of disease, crippling and death.

I dislike to state or predicate the things the Health Department is going to do, and I would like to tell you about some of the things it is doing.

I think all will agree that Syphilis is the disease which causes the greatest amount of crippling, and on that basis the Health Department is considering Syphilis as a Public Health Menace.

When an individual gets syphilis it can nearly always be traced. If treated in its early stages it can be cured. Therefore the effects of breaking down of the heart and blood vessels, of the kidneys, brain and eyes, can be detected.

Therefore if we can get control of each case in its early stage the same can be rendered untransmittable.

We will all have the cooperation of every Medical Association and we will have the cooperation of 90% of the doctors in this project, but there is a 10% who will be or are always against every modern event.

We have secured Legislation through Senator Miller's backing of it.

It is true that germs which are peculiar to this venereal infection are not very strong except when they get into the human body.

As a part of the State Health Department's campaign it has organized a laboratory and in this laboratory, it analyzes the various packages for prevention and determines their efficacy.

Since the institution of this campaign by the State Health Department I have not heard one voice raised against it. Therefore, it looks as though our people were ready to take up a rational program of prevention.

About 80% of Syphilis and Gonorrhea comes from commercialized prostitution. Therefore the campaign to be efficient and a success unless places of commercialized prostitution are done away with, and it is impossible for them to exist against an organization backed by the citizen. We are organized and are backing our citizens.

So much then for Syphilis.

Now in regard to tuberculosis, which perhaps comes next. I am sure we are all aware that the campaign by Dr. Dixon formerly of the State Health Department was done better than had ever been done before or ever will be done.

Some 80% of tuberculosis cases are due to contact, and that being the case we have somewhat changed the general policy and our three sanatoria are steadily changing into sanatoria for the removal of dangerous contact.

We have formed a little group whose duty it is to see those people who are taking upon themselves all their own health and this group is backed by the State Board and this group will come to us and say here is a family that are keeping one who is dying with the tuberculosis.

With this group working with us and with state power behind them success is assured.

The necessities in the prevention of tuberculosis is the cooperation of all intelligent people of the State, separation of contacts and nourishing of the under-nourished child. We follow up the child until schooling as we believe this is the time when preventive measures are most required.

This about covers our broad policy, and the whole activity of the State Health Department is centered on prevention. We are doing just as the army has done,—we are calling in all the intelligent people of the State and endeavoring to teach them the necessity of all preventive measures in the care of their health, and I really think the people are commencing to cooperate with the State Health Department in our efforts to prevent disease.

Mr. Lapp: I take it that the Commission does not desire arguments for Health Insurance, or against Health Insurance, but a statement of facts regarding what we know about the problems involved in Health Insurance or has brought Health Insurance to the front at this time. I shall therefore confine my statements to facts such as I believe them to be.

The whole thing rests upon the proposition that there is a lot of sickness and that this sickness falls upon people who are then in distress. The great problem is, the incidence of sickness, what do we know and how much further information do we need regarding it. The former Commission in Pennsylvania has reviewed that subject and has made extensive surveys, and got together some very valuable information in regards the incidence of sickness among the working people.

The Commission then opened up a number of their agencies in Pennsylvania and made surveys in Philadelphia and other cities by a house-to-house canvass.

In addition to that the Ohio Commission summarized a great many of the surveys it made of sickness and the Illinois Commission in Chicago made a most extensive house-to-house canvass covering some 6,000 of such surveys, showing the amount of sickness that takes place.

Personally I do not believe that anything further is necessary to give us dependable data that sickness exists.

The second proposition is "How sickness falls". This is to my mind the important thing to be considered by Health Insurance Commissions. The average period of sickness is between six or nine days, and I am inclined to think that probably nine days is the maximum number of days caused by such sickness. But, how many people are sick for thirty days and how many for two and three months, and that to my mind is where the important thing is that the Commission should know.

I have no doubt that your actuaries have got a good deal of this data from the Insurance Companies.

We have made jointly in Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio Commissions, a survey of ten of the representative benefit societies, including the steel workers, railroad workers, letter carriers, iron moulders and machine shops workers in one or two instances, selecting those benefit societies which have concrete experience.

We believe that we got together from these ten representative societies a very representative body of data, certainly a large enough amount to give us a very dependable analysis of just where sickness falls.

The result of these surveys is that 20% of the industrial workers will be sick in a given time, 80% will escape sickness, and this 20% will have to bear all the burden of those that are sick, so that 65% of this 20% are sick for less than thirty days and 20% are sick over thirty days, 7% eight to twelve weeks, 6% twelve to twenty-six weeks, 3% sick for more than six months, and 1.3% are sick for more than a year. Therefore there will be 20% or 200,000 workers which will be seriously sick for a period lasting over the above mentioned nine-day period, and of this 65,000 will be sick for longer periods up to thirty days, and 20% or more than 40,000 are sick over thirty days, 7% or 14,000 will be sick eight to twelve weeks, 6% or 12,000 will be sick twelve to twenty-six weeks, 3% or 6,000 will be sick for more than six months and 1% or 1,000 will be sick for more than a year.

These figures form data which I believe will be the basis for any study of Health Insurance Commissions in any State.

In addition to these statistics of the incidence of sickness and where sickness falls, I have some other statistics which have been gathered from plant records with a great deal of care, which, however, I regret to say are not wholly accurate, as you all know, very few plants records of sickness are kept, unless they have an Insurance fund themselves.

For instance, if a man does not come back to work they never know, but if he does they do not know the incidence of the sickness and so that data gotten from industrial plants is not worth anything.

Another question is what are the conditions surrounding cases of sickness. We have made rather a complete study of dependency in connection with cases of sickness and I think there is much data that can be secured which would be worth while to your Commission on that subject. We have also had studies made by the Immigration Commission.

This, however, is not so serious a matter as the matter of economic distress that is caused in the ordinary family. A good deal of data on this subject was secured from the Morris Plan Banks. From these people we got the actual data from the records of loans made by them on account of sickness, and this information we consider very valuable, as they practically deal with the laboring class, but a class which is slightly above the average of the lower class, although they made many loans for commercial purposes, but I think you will find an appreciable number of the loans are made due to sickness.

Dr. Martin brought out medical care, sanatoria, care of the little children, the maternal care of the mother, care of the man during time he is sick, and these are the things, which to my mind we should consider.

A few concerns pay their men during the time they are sick, but only for a brief period, but the ordinary working man has his wages stopped the moment they take sick and quit work.

Of course, some of the men have savings in bank, liberty bonds, belong to beneficial and fraternal societies, but if a man is sick for any length of time, it does not take long, in the case of the man in the working of middle class, for his savings to give out very shortly.

Then again there are certain concerns who do sickness and accident benefit work, and there is a great amount of fraternal insurance, some of which pay the man five, seven and even nine dollars a week, and some of which give various other benefits to the man when he is sick, or some sort of scheme such as passing the hat. A great deal of relief is given in this way to members of the societies.

The next proposition is Medical Care, and I am sure that most of us recognize that medical care is the most important proposition. It is necessary in order to keep the people from being sick and its necessary to restore them to good health and this it a matter which should receive careful consideration and not be overlooked.

In the early days of the discussion of Health Insurance, medical care was overlooked, but Medical Care we must all agree is an important factor with or without Insurance.

Now in regard to the cost of medical care. We have a great deal of data on this subject of existing costs.

The U. S. Public Health Service has made some studies of this subject, and they made estimates four years ago based upon their studies as to the amount it would take. They placed an estimate for each worker of $6 per person, but this, of course, would be enlarged by the increased cost of everything since that time.

The U. S. Bureau of Labor statistics also has made a complete survey of the subject of family costs, and their studies of the subject point out that a family of four people spends on the average of from 35 to 50 dollars per year.

Are we going to have some means or other of public care of those who are taken sick? Or, are we going to be able to accomplish any results by means of prevention? Or, are we going to be able to prevent it by Insurance? Or, is it necessary to have a complete Social Insurance Scheme on Compulsory basis.

There are two angles to the thing. Give medical care to the family, and secondly the matter of prevention, and prevention ought to go just as far as it can go, and we ought to have the most complete methods of prevention.

In regard to Social Insurance. The plan goes back for a great many years in different countries. It was established in Germany in 1883, superseding the many arrangements which they had at that time. It was voted in England, Norway, Austria, Serbia, Roumania, and has recently been voted in Italy and Switzerland. It was adopted in Belgium, but has been superseded by the war.

It is not in force anywhere in the United States, but we have Workmen's Compensation.

It has been discussed in this country and New York is the only state where it has gotten into real legislation, and the bill that is up in New York probably summarizes the present plan of Health Insurance.

A number of Commissions have considered the subject in this country, your Commission being the twelfth to consider the matter of Health Insurance. In Massachusetts the first Commission reported for it and the Second Commission against it.

In California, in 1917 the Commission reported for it, and its successor also reported for it.

The State of Wisconsin had a commission which reported in 1919 unfavorably.

Kentucky reported unfavorably.

Ohio reported favorably.

Illinois reported unfavorably.

The New Jersey Commission four years ago reported favorably.

There have been about four unfavorable reports and six favorable.

As to private support the objection against it is very great.

Some forty-two organizations have voted declinations. The American Federation of Labor has not declared one way or the other, but I think I could safely say that practically the A. F. O. F. L. is by a majority opposed to Health Insurance.

The only Federation of Labor which has given a report in favor of the subject is the New York Federation of Labor.

The American Medical Association is definitely on record as being against Health Insurance.

The New York Bill brings the question in concrete form right down to date. It was presented to the country at large for discussion by the American Association for Labor Legislation, and in its present form represents the present consensus of opinion.

The New York Bill in the first place covers the same people that are covered by the Workmen's Compensation Act, but it does not include domestic servants nor agricultural laborers. The Workmen's Compensation Act does not either, nor does it in Pennsylvania.

It provides for insurance to be paid for jointly by the employee and the employer, the state covering overhead expense.

Dr. Frankel: I hardly know how to introduce the subject to you Mr. Chairman, and I am wondering whether that really is the subject you want me to present. I can tell you what the Metropolitan Life is doing.

We are a Company which has two general forms of insurance, ordinary and Industrial Insurance, and we have in force in the Industrial group approximately 32 millions of policies which are all on the lives of working men women and children and they cover approximately 17 millions of lives varying from 1 year to 70 years in age.

A number of years ago we felt there was an obligation upon our part beyond the purely business-like one of paying a death claim when it matured, and we tried to do what we can, under the insurance laws, to benefit the people while they live.

We realize one of the principle hazards which the working group suffers from is sickness

The things we have attempted to put across are these:

First: To carry on a campaign of education, to educate the working man who is of health and to tell him the condition under which he lives, and to show him what he can do along the lines of personal hygiene, and in order to make him do that, he had to be taught and this has been done chiefly by Health Literature. It is written so the man can understand it and will read it. We have printed literature on practically every one of the more common diseases, particularly infectious diseases.

One "The Child" tells the mother what to do at the time of her confinement and then goes on to say how to care for the baby afterwards and what to do after the baby becomes a child.

We have passed about 200 million copies of such literature as this throughout the United States, about 15,000 copies a year are carried into the homes by agents of the Company who explain the same fully. We presume and believe it to be read.

Down South several weeks ago I have a rather dramatic example of it. We have on book "First Aid in the Home". The Agent of the Company came back and stated that he had visited one of the homes and a woman told him that her child had swallowed poison and she got the book used the antidote prescribed in plain language in the book and administered it to the child and saved its life.

In this booklet the antidote is first send for a doctor: while waiting for the doctor to come give mustard and water just give all you can to produce vomiting, and this was all this woman did and she saved the child's life.

Secondly: Several years ago we organized our Visiting Nurse Service. Wherever we found a Visiting Nurse Association, we contracted with that Association. If a policy holder gets ill a nurse comes there and cares for him.

In Pittsburgh ten years ago I tried to organize a Visiting Nurse Association. We had our own nurses employed and contracted with some nursing organizations, but now Pittsburgh has its own.

There was a uniform campaign being carried on in every community and the death rate had grown pretty nearly constant.

In regards to Tuberculosis. This was not understood, and we thought possibly that if there were social reasons it could be ascertained by research and upon that basis we made arrangements with the National Tuberculosis Association to carry on an extensive campaign and incidentally it means an experiment along all lines of health.

The Association accepted the appropriations that was made and in the town of Framingham, Mass., which was an average town, a certain number of definite lines of work were laid out and they are rather interesting to your commission because I personally believe that it is going to be successful.

One of the first things we expected to do was to try to get everybody in the Community Examination. It meant a campaign of rather extensive reasoning with the people, and as a result of it, covering a period of three years, most of it in the first year, there have been physically examined in Framingham, just about two-thirds of the entire population of 18,000.

If a man does not feel up to the mark he comes to a Health Station and asks for an examination.

If the cases were Sanatoria cases they were sent to Sanatoria if Hospital cases to a Hospital; if home cases to their family physician who in cooperation with our own medical staff and nursing staff have given these cases personal attention.

Summarized, it means this, that in a city like Framingham, the mortality from Tuberculosis went down in three years from 93 per 100,000 to 78 per 100,000.

What we are trying to do is this. I do not need to tell you who are policy holders. They are working people of all nationalities, many do not read or write English, and we are trying to make them see and learn the things they ought to know about their own health.

Dr. Colcord: I am sure you will be really glad if I should not attempt to address you upon a subject which has been so ably covered by my predecessors, a subject which I planned to cover, and which I can only emphasize in many ways that which has been already said.

For the last eighteen years my work has been in Clairton among the steel workers, and three years of that time around the By-products coke ovens. For the last year we have had one welfare nurse making a sanitary survey. She goes into the home and makes a list as to the care, cleanliness, morality and whether or not the food is kept clean, etc. In other words she makes a general record of the health conditions of the town.

This record is revised from time to time when she again visits that vicinity. This is the work we are trying to do and want to keep on with it.

I understand you say there are 385,000 people who are sick in Pennsylvania every year. Now surely many of these cases were preventable sickness, and if it is preventable, why can we not prevent it, and if I can arouse the doctors in my state or my community and have them wake up to the prevention of this sickness, I shall not have lived in vain.

Our employes are stripped and examined, as to their eyes, their teeth, their heart, their lungs, their hernia area, etc. and with all men who have a physical defect which we think can be remedied we have a heart-to-heart talk and tell them how they can get it righted.

We have an up-to-date hospital which takes care of our accident cases, which we believe to be one of the best equipped hospitals in the United States, and every man who is sick or simply feels sick is welcome to come there every 24 hours to get help and advice.

If the sickness is something that needs the attention of the man's family doctor he is sent to him, but if it is something that we can help, we do so and keep him on his daily job if at all possible, so that he loses none of his wages.

I might say that in any system of disease prevention you must provide some way of catching the sick cases at the earliest possible moment. In our efforts to do this, we have in our Emergency Hospital, skilled nurses and skilled doctors, with the accurate list of the conditions at the homes of the various people of the community.

Now, what are some of the causes of sickness? To my mind one of the preliminary causes of sickness is bad sanitation in the home, bad ventilation, bad housing, improperly selected, improperly kept and improperly cooked food, flies, and other contamination, crowded sleeping quarters and so on.

Contagious diseases that are now properly or promptly reported and inactive Boards of Health, although as Dr. Martin told us we are getting more action from the latter source. These are two more causes of sickness, which are of a preventable nature.

Then again is the indifference on the part of the doctors, and I really do believe there is a lot of education work that should be done among the doctors in Pennsylvania, and before I forget it, there is now being prepared an opportunity for all doctors to take a course in public health. Two colleges that know of, Harvard and John Hopkins, are offering courses in Public Health.

All physicians have the opportunity to the education outlined above, and I think every medical college should put in a short four weeks course in Public Health to teach this all important subject to our doctors.

Mr. Flinn: What do you believe could be learned by the doctors in the four weeks course?

Dr. Colcord: They could be impressed with the important fundamentals of sewage disposal, water and water supply, milk supply, food supply and keeping of food, sanitation of restaurants and examinations etc. These are the fundamentals, and most of our doctors are ignorant along these subjects.

A good deal of this work can also be done by cooperation between the Community Nurses, Board of Health and the Family Doctors.

Now in regard to overworked employes. I am glad to say that this is being improved, but I really do not believe that overwork among employes is a very large factor in producing sickness.

Once during the recent flu epidemic, I was asked to give them a talk on the prevention of influenza, and I said that one of the most important things was to prevent fatigue.

We have a thousand men in our bunk houses at the steel mills, and these bunk houses are a model of sanitation. They are carefully policed, and every man who gets a little bit sick is taken right out and placed in an isolation ward. Out of the thousand men in our bunk houses during the flu epidemic, we had seventy cases of influenza.

We must not get over enthusiastic about Occupational Diseases. Workers are just as susceptible to other diseases as anyone else.

Now in regard to Tuberculosis. I think we are all agreed that one bad factor is bad housing, and that occupation has little to do with tuberculosis. In a certain locality observations were made and a large number of cases were examined and it was found that 42% lived in one room, 40% the whole family lived in two rooms, 12% the whole family lived in three rooms and in one 6% did the family live in four or more rooms.

The wives of miners have tuberculosis more frequently than the miners themselves, which proves that it is not the work in the mines but the houses in which they live.

In regard to Syphilis. From observation among industrial men I am more and more convinced that one great cause of chronic disease among workers is syphilis. Someone has said that out of every five workers of the laboring class, one has syphilis.

In regard to Heat Exhaustion. In making a study of this question I have come to this conclusion that I have never seen a case of heat stroke in a well man, and I believe a well man does not get heat stroke. The same might apply to the diarrhoea cases.

But all this is not an argument for Health Insurance, it is rather an argument for preventive measures.

This brings us to what we shall do.

I think I can best say what I want to say in the following in regard to the prevention of these diseases or most of them.

There is an ideal town being built by a large corporation, and in the middle of this ideal town there will be a large space for the use of the people as a public park, etc. It has walks, flowers and trees. There is a large assembly hall for speeches on health questions, there is a Board of Health and this takes in every doctor in the town and every doctor has taken the four weeks course that I spoke of.

Now this Board of Health having all the doctors on it divides up the work, one doctor takes house sanitation, another food and milk supply, etc.

The Board of Health gives lectures in the Assembly Hall on the subject of health conservation, the things that people ought to know to keep themselves well.

Then there is the Community Nurses who go into the home to help carry this message of "Keep Well" into every house in the community.

In the town there is a General Hospital and every doctor in the town is on the staff. The hospital was built by the people who own the mills and partly by subscriptions by the people.

The idea is to keep the people well and teach them how to keep themselves in such condition and keep them all content and happy, and is it not going to solve your venereal disease problem if you keep your boys happy at home?

Now, how are we to apply the principles of this ideal town to the conditions already applied to the towns in Pennsylvania?

I believe we cannot have it better until the people are aroused to the subject to do something to house our people better.

I want to say in closing and emphasize the role of the industrial physicians.

The industrial surgeon can help first by his influence with the company he works for by arousing them to welfare work, secondly, by his work, in looking after the sanitary conditions of the mill, and not only in looking after the medical care only of the employees.

These are the things the industrial surgeon can do and must do.

Your Commission is going to help to solve it, and every industrial physician must help to solve this problem in this State.

If I were to sum up the immediate remedy of the problem, I would do so in one word,—“Education.”

JOINT PUBLIC MEETING OF THE COMMISSION AND THE HOMEOPATHIC MEDICAL SOCIETY OF THE STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Harrisburg, Pa., September 21st, 1920.

The meeting was called to order by the President, Dr. R. L. Piper.

Addresses:

Dr. William M. Hillegas, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dr. George A. Knowles, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dr. Clarence Bartlett, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dr. Frederick L. Van Sickle, Harrisburg, Pa.

Dr. Hillegas: The one thing that I shall try to do this evening is to give you a clear understanding of what State Health Insurance is. State Health Insurance, compulsory in character, is the solution proposed to remedy the inadequacy of present methods of relief for employees in the present time of industrial distress. The need is a real one, because it has been established by the present Commission that facilities for the care of sick industrial employees are inadequate and unsatisfactory, and that the individual workman does not avail himself of the agencies at present in existence for his insurance against illness. Even in these days of continued high wages, they do not do so. Only three per cent of the wage-earners carry health insurance; and this is true among those who need it most. Nor does any law in the United States offer a fair solution of this problem, and that is what we wish to study.

This subject, like any other of national importance, must be studied with a broad mind. We should always remember that what may prove the ultimate good for the whole community may conflict with what is at present harmful to a few, and that our view relative to the problem of health insurance measures must not be a selfish personal one. We must not lay ourselves open to the criticism that any medical opposition to such a measure is due to selfish interests. Some legislation on the subject is a good thing; but whether the compulsory feature is good, is a question.

State Health Insurance is in force in some foreign countries. One member of the Commission was sent abroad to study this subject, particularly in England, and will probably have an illuminating report to make to the Commission. It was hoped that he would be here this evening but he could not be present. So far, no bill on the subject has been presented in Pennsylvania. At the coming session of the legislature, it is probable that the Commission appointed by the Governor may present a report, and it is likely that this will be followed by a bill, if not, some over-zealous member of the Legislature may present one himself. Now we must be prepared to oppose and defeat such a bill if we do not approve it; or even if we approve of it, we must be prepared to write the medical clauses of such a bill, so that the medical profession may be fairly dealt with.

To give you an outline of the possible bill which will be presented I shall quote freely from the so-called Davenport Bill, presented in New York, because I understand that this is regarded as a model bill for this side of the Atlantic Ocean by its backers. The proposition is that benefits shall be furnished to industrial employees working under a minimum sum of wages. Possibly two thousand dollars will be the amount. This shall apply to any kind of illness of these persons, and shall not be limited to industrial illness. The benefits shall also apply to members of the family of the workman, when ill, including maternity illness. It is estimated that this will include twenty to thirty per cent. of the residents of the State, and in Pennsylvania that would mean two millions and a half of people. It will include, if a man is unable to work, a minimum of two dollars and a half, according to amount of wages he is receiving. They shall get free medical attention, including nursing, drugs and medical appliances, and, to a limited extent, dental work, maternity attention and benefits. Even if able to work, a man can, when ill, go to the doctor and get office attention without cost. In the Davenport Bill, there was a provision for a hundred dollars death benefit.

The administration of this bill is not clearly outlined regarding its medical provision. It was suggested in New York that the State should be divided into groups of five thousand people each, and medical men limited to certain groups. Therefore, freedom of choice would be limited to the employment of a physician in a man's own group. However, no doctor would be compelled to take a case, unless willing to take the fee given.

It is provided in the bill that the conditions of medical service and the rates and the amount of compensation shall be fixed by the Industrial Commission. At a recent meeting in Philadelphia to study this subject, a professional investigator, also an agitator of health insurance, was asked what the fees would be, and said that the office fees would be twenty-five to fifty cents, and the outside calls not more than two dollars.

Only a certain class of employees would come under the benefits. Many classes are excluded in the Davenport bill. No provision is made therein for the chronically ill, nor for the unemployed poor. Obviously, this is class legislation. For this reason, not one of the charitable agencies that already exist could be abolished.

Now for the cost of such an enactment: According to the proposition, premiums were to be divided among employees and employers, and the remainder borne by the State. The estimated cost when figured out would be a cent and a half to three cents on each dollar a man earned. In New York, it was estimated that it would cost the State ninety million dollars to administer the act. The proponents of the bill did not deny it, or attempt to controvert the statement. In Pennsylvania, on this basis, it would cost two and a half million dollars, and some of the tax-payers would have to meet this enormous expense. Why? Because, you must add the employee's share and the overhead to this compensation. Is such an enactment applied to a limited class, a worthwhile measure? Will it reduce the average of nine working-days' illness of industrial employees by improving preventive health measures? Will it reduce the present cost of charitable or semi-charitable agencies? Could not the expansion of present facilities under the plan of the Department of Health of the State and of the local communities fulfill far better the solution of the sickness problem? Your Council thinks that such legislation is vicious, and will tell you why. As a member of the Pennsylvania State Bureau of Medical Education and Licensure, I feel that medical education will be dealt a serious blow in this State, if such a bill is enacted.

Dr. Knowles: My part in this procedure is to care for the legislative end. We all know what compulsory health insurance will mean to the medical profession. It will lower the standard. We are now striving to educate the men in the best possible way, and all this labor will go for naught. The doctor must see one hundred people in his office in a night, and cannot treat any of them properly. I think, therefore, that it would be a bad thing to have such a law in Pennsylvania.

Our Commission, here, are open to argument, I know. Some have an understanding of what it means, and some have not. These meetings cannot help but be advantageous to the profession, and I know that the men who come after me can tell you more than I can. I am simply trying to take care of the affairs as they come before the Legislature.

Dr. Bartlett: Some years ago, in Harrisburg, a member of the Legislature who had been making a speech, walked to the water-cooler and drank a glass of water. Afterwards, he took a second; and he was on his third, when another member of the Legislature got up and said, "I rise to a point of order." State your point of order," said the speaker. The member replied, "I believe that it is out of order for a gas engine to go by water power."

I was asked to speak on this subject in its relation to medical education, and I do not know that I have anything to say concerning the evil effect of health insurance on medical education. I doubt quite a little whether it will have any, I know that we do certain things in the line of teaching students. We begin with the students in the second year, and teach them the normal sounds of the chest, and that it requires half an hour to go over the chest and determine the early signs of tuberculosis. Then in the second year, we have the boys go to Dr. Golden, who works hard in teaching them to get a perfect history, and how it is difficult to get the working people to answer questions properly so as to avoid misunderstanding. Then comes the physician examination, and it requires three quarters of an hour to examine a patient properly. Then during the next year, we teach the students how to make a thorough physical examination, and it takes a long time to do good work. If this has to be done as stated, one hundred in an evening, we must teach the boys differently. I worked for a doctor who saw patients for twenty-five cents each. We had jars of medicine in reach and could do twenty an hour. We shall get something like thirty-eight cents under the Health Insurance Act. For men like that, the Health Insurance Act will be a good proposition, but to produce men of that kind we must alter medical education and teach quantity production, regardless of quality.

Aside from that I do not think that Health Insurance will have any influence on medical education. It will simply change its character a little.

Now since I have known that I had to make a speech, I have been listening to others and getting points from them. I have learned that it would be a grand good thing to get people to get mass medical advice. I think of a case in which I am called a "cheap skate," although, I charge my usual prices. The patient comes in, and her doctor is a man who has one of those famous large practices, in which the men sit on the front door-steps in the summer and, as the trolley cars go by, their passengers say, "What a wonderful doctor, Dr. so-and-so is." This patient had been going to that doctor all summer and paying so much a visit without getting well; but he came to me and got well for forty-five dollars.

If all the time is taken in getting practice at twenty-five or thirty cents per, no time will be left for reading books, and there will not be money to buy books, which are going up so high that we are even now curtailing our expenditures in that direction. The idea is to get good treatment for everyone. I think it will be good treatment for no one.

Another thing bearing on the same subject: They say that it will be such a nice thing for the poor person to get good treatment. One Saturday morning, I saw a woman who had been a patient of mine for eight or ten years. She came with an alleged broken thumb. I took an X-ray, and could not find no fracture; although she had been told there was one. A Dr. Elliott is my neighbor. I called him on the telephone and said, "I have a patient with a suspected fracture of the thumb. She is on my favored list. Because she is on my favored list, I know she will be on yours." If I say that any woman is on my favored list, she gets on the favored list of every one of my doctors. Labor does not want favors.

Possibly one of the advantages to be derived from Compulsory Health Insurance is that it will give the doctors some practice in writing. They will become better writers; that will be the only advantage of the law.

Dr. Van Sickle: I feel indeed a sense of more than pleasure in being asked to occupy a platform with you to night, a platform upon which we can believe we are standing upon the most common ground that any men in the practice of medicine can possibly stand on. A man practicing in this state is a humanitarian agent, and we believe we are such for the people. I am also pleased to be with you because I believe that you have had an opportunity to go through the same feelings that the rest of the medical men and women of the State have, when we have been threatened with a proposition which we believe the people of Pennsylvania are not anxious for.

Sometime ago, when it was my privilege, possibly my duty to undertake the study of this phase of social insurance, I began to do so with the feeling that perhaps I should find that it was analogous to our present Workmen's Compensation laws. After delving into the literature given us and the investigations of others who had studied the question before me, I found I was in a field far different from that. When we studied the Workman's Compensation laws differently; because nothing could be so far from it as what is offered us by the proponents of compulsory health insurance.

It has been stated tonight in the discussion of the Compulsory Health Insurance problem, that up to the present moment there is no such thing in any State as State health Insurance, nor has there been a law known as "Compulsory Health Insurance". The reason that we are studying this subject has also been stated to you. We have the privilege and pleasure of having with us the representative of a Commission appointed by Governor Sprout, not only to review the work of a former Commission formed to study the question of Compulsory Health Insurance, but also to make original investigations.

Our study of Compulsory Health Insurance takes us to Europe. It seems strange that it should be though necessary to cross the Atlantic in order to study a problem so important to ourselves, but we have nothing of that kind in this country, except a model bill drafted in the State of New York, under the direction of Dr. John B. Andrews, Secretary of the American Association for Labor Legislation. It happens that I appeared on the scene for the Academy of Medicine at about the time that Mr. Andrews got out this bill. I had the pleasure of meeting the men who drafted the medical measures of the bill. I found that they were trying to adopt a measure that had been adopted in Germany forty years ago, and in England, twenty years ago, which had been an attempt to give the inhabitants of these countries something in the way of medical practice that we could not give the people here, because the Government control was so different from anything that we had in this country.

Having thoroughly gone over the history of the past forty years in Europe, we came to the circumstances under which we must study the sickness insurance problem, and we find, that no matter how hard we endeavor to inculcate the principles of this in the minds of those who should be interested in it, it sort of skims over the subjects that have been presented. It is what we call "Mass Insurance" because it takes into consideration the ailments of the people, everything they could have outside of accident. This is also mentioned in the bill known as the Davenport bill, which likewise takes into consideration all the various things that you and I know are so difficult of application when it comes to the problem of insurance. We find, however that it does not supply all the people with the sickness attendance needed. Why? Because we find it was to be applied only in a certain class of cases: to those in industry who worked practically full time in that industry, and had contributed to the funds which employer and employee in the State join in furnishing for this purpose. It did not supply the casual worker, the man who was able to work only part of the time, with medical attendance. It did not reach the farm laborer or the domestic; and in fact, it did not reach out in the field of the people whom we know that the insurance problem should reach, and men and women with long, lingering illness, who are unable to pay for continued medical service, and who are the people that should have some sort of insurance to carry them through. There are three kinds of people in every community, first, those who can afford to pay every dollar for sickness treatment they need. They are the rich, and can secure adequate medical attention. I had this refuted me the other day, however, when a college professor said that he doubted very much whether the rich received all they should receive in the way of medical service. There is another class of people, termed the charity patients. We know that the hospitals and physicians in this State are giving enormous amounts in the name of charity. They receive the same treatment as the rich. But we have also the great middle class, who should pay their bills. Among this class of people, we have those able to pay full medical service bills, those who can pay part and do so, and those who do not. Those who are able to pay part are the ones this bill should cover, and yet a great many of these, if not in constant employment, would not receive help from it, although they might deserve it. The people whose earnings are not less than twelve dollars a week would not receive medical attention.

The bill says that each district should consist of ten to twelve hundred persons, composing a local insurance board. These funds are organized by electing a Board of Trustees consisting of seven members, all laymen, (four employees and three employers.) I want you to understand who would administer the funds, if we had the Davenport bill. They shall make rules and regulations for carrying out the purpose of the funds, viz., hiring nurses and doctors, designating hospitals and providing means of relief. They shall select physicians, subject to the right of the physicians to refuse patients. This is known as the panel system. This would not make it possible that adequate medical service could be rendered. So recently ago as last month (and this is taken directly from a paper coming to my desk a few days ago), German papers apparently admitted that the system in vogue in Germany has broken down, and has practically reduced the State servitude a formerly free and independent profession. One of these journals (The Medical Clinic of Berlin), further remarked that negotiations for renewal contracts were broken off suddenly when fees of twelve marks for house visits and eight marks for office calls were suggested. In the present deplorable value of the German mark, this would be about twenty-five and seventeen cents respectively, in American money, and laying aside all question of the present conditions of foreign exchange and the purchasing power of the mark, the real significance of this report lies in the fact that private practice in Germany has become almost a thing of the past, and that the State has virtually assumed control of the practice of medicine.

We are at the deciding of the ways. The practice of medicine would be State medicine, or would be as we find it in Germany. We infer that if, after forty years trial the physicians are dissatisfied, as they always have been, we cannot but believe that Compulsory Health Insurance would develop inferior medical protection and service for the people of this State, were we to have such a law.

It is impossible to discuss this question unless we continually refer to dental, hospitals and nursing services, and to the relation between the healing art and the men and women who are sick. A friendly rivalry exists as to good attendance and scientific treatment, and the effect of such restrictions as would be placed upon medical men by Compulsory Health Insurance would be to reduce the incentive to offer the best service possible.

Those who have been in practice for many years will remember how the effort was made in certain districts where men and women came from foreign countries, to do the type of practice that they wanted. They had been accustomed to the dollar-a-month treatment. Our early experience in lodge practice shows that it is similar to this type of business. It brought results that, to many physicians, illustrated what has been found in Europe, known as, malingering. There is nothing that a physician so detests as to find that the patient is trying to deceive him. Sometimes the patients do it knowingly, and sometimes unconsciously. The subsequent effect upon the people has always been, as proved in European countries, to foster a tendency to this evil. It is found in people who come to the doctor because they do not want to work, but want to have some money for it. If the sickness is being treated by physicians who are paid out of funds created either by assessment or in other ways, where the individual does not pay for the service directly, malingering is prevalent. Especially is this found in times of labor depression and lack of work. It is so much easier to stay sick, draw benefits, call the doctor, and keep him coming, than to seek a new job. It is at that time that we see the most fatal side of this plan of Health Insurance.

I did not find, in my travels through Pennsylvania, anyone talking as an opponent of this plan who was doing so with any ulterior motive. I believe that the men who are writing against any type of compulsory Health Insurance, such as that represented in the Davenport bill, or talking from the platform, are doing so with but one idea. They visualize the future of the young men who are going to study medicine. When we consider the enormous amount of money that must be raised by assessment upon capital and labor, as well as the State, in order to apply this type of legislation under State supervision, we might hope for some good to come out of this insurance plan were all such funds to be expended in purchasing relief or cure, or in sickness prevention, but this is not the case, as it has been proved that not more than fifty to sixty per cent. of this money would reach the sick man or his family.

In one of our sister States, a large company has tried out this type of insurance, to find out how much it would cost and how much could be used for buying medical attention; and they found not more than fifty or sixty per cent, of what they themselves paid into their own fund could go to the sick man or be used in payment of the doctor's bill. All you have to do is to refer to certain literature which I shall give you, to find that this is absolutely a correct statement. Overhead costs have always eaten up a great share of the money, when the State has applied the law. Even then, if the death-rate from sickness could be reduced under this plan, or if the reduction of sickness in the homes of the laboring class could be accomplished, we should, out of a proper sense of our duty to the public, be the greatest proponents of this law; but we know that these reductions will come only by the application of the law of health, which the science of medicine of the past has worked out, and science of the present and future has worked out; and which the medical men and women of the State will continue to prove as being of value in the sickness problem. Mass insurance is not the practice of medicine. It is our duty not only to treat people when they are sick, but also to aid in every way in teaching them how to keep well. This plan would become obsolete under the Compulsory Health Insurance Law.

It may be said that only a few would practice under Health Insurance and that the rest would study the art of medicine. Then why do we, as physicians, presume to discuss the effect of compulsory health insurance laws upon the people of the community? We have tried to view measures that would affect the people and in which physicians are concerned, from the point of view of impartial advisers. We have arrogated to ourselves a duty, from the earliest days of medicine, to act as our brother's keepers; or, to state it better, advisers in matters regarding the preservation of health or health measures.

This, then is one of the times when we believe that it is our duty to combat a danger of error in accepting a theory that this plan of Compulsory Health Insurance would solve the sickness problem. It would only complicate the matter of treating the sick, and the future would be worse than the past. Any state that becomes over-officious in the application of paternalism is bound to reap a reward of increased demand for free service on the part of the people to whom this free service is extended. I say "free" because it is said in the Davenport Bill, that the employee shall receive free medical attention, and he will practically receive free service. This increased demand is well exemplified in Europe in the National Insurance Law. We, cannot, therefore, recommend paternalistic insurance in this State as beneficial to the people engaged in industry.

If we consider that the physicians are a part of the community, a part of the business of the community, then we must view also its effect upon them in the discussion of this problem. The young men of the past have had in mind, and I presume that those of the future will have in mind, some idea as to what career in the medicine means. They studied the lives of the doctors in their vicinity, and deemed medicine a profession well suited to their taste. I might ask each of you whether, when you attended college, you did so in order to practice medicine just for pleasure alone.

I believe that the monetary cost is not the thing that we want to consider. It would be immaterial what it cost, if we could reduce sickness absenteeism and make the people of Pennsylvania healthy and free from sickness problems; but I have yet to find, in this or any other law brought to us from Europe, that it would relieve these conditions. Most of the people could not draw sickness benefits, and would have the same problems in the practice of medicine that they have now. The doctor would be obliged to go at any and all times. Would this be good for the laboring man? Would it be profitable or would it not be better for him, if the State wishes to conduct sickness insurance, that the money so raised to pay sickness benefits should be paid to him, allowing him to select his physicians, as heretofore? This was a noted question when the Workmen's Compensation Bill was brought up. I believe that this would be more equitable to the workman, the doctor, the hospital, etc. Business would not be disturbed, and the friendly relationship, in the sickness prob-

During the past year, this subject has been much discussed and much written upon in Pennsylvania, these discussions being stimulated by the fact that Pennsylvania now has a Commission studying Compulsory Health Insurance, and that this Commission is looking over the field to find out whether we need it or not. I should be the last one to say a word against it, if it were not for the fact that Compulsory Health Insurance is now a tangible thing, and must affect the people, as well as ourselves. We therefore, consider it a duty to ourselves, as well as to the people to make public such facts as bear upon this measure, believing that no law should be made wherein so many people are to be affected as would be were the Commission to find it their duty—or, rather, their desire—to present a bill, during the coming session of the legislature, in favor of Compulsory Health Insurance.

We have pointed out the effect upon the people, where this type of insurance had been applied in Europe. We have also pointed out its effect upon medical practice. It is no assumption on our part, but a fact, that no plan or scheme of this kind has been a benefit to anyone affected by the law; it has only proved that State control does not lead to the best results in giving that which the law is supposed to give—namely, good medical service for the relief of the sickness. We believe that the Commission should have, in no uncertain terms, the view of the profession protecting against the interference with the peoples right to select that kind of a service and that particular individual in whom they must have faith, when they are sick or needing medical attention. This they cannot have under any plan proposed in Compulsory Health Insurance.

We can only appeal, in a fair-minded way, to the Commission to remember that there are so many other ways in which the people of this State can receive from the State aid toward better sanitation, better regulation of hygiene, and that, there are so many better methods of reaching those who are unable to pay fully for medical service, that it is unnecessary to add to the enormous laws upon the statute books such a burdensome one as Compulsory Health Insurance.

REPORT OF DISCUSSION OF HEALTH INSURANCE AT MEETING OF MEDICAL SOCIETY OF STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA WITH PENNSYLVANIA HEALTH INSURANCE COMMISSION.

Pittsburgh, October 4-7, 1920.

In the President's address Dr. Jump dwelt extensively on the subject of health insurance. The main points of his address in connection with this subject were as follows:

1. That there is inadequacy of medical service. This is true for country districts but not for cities and towns.

2. Faults of bills proposed up to this time—

Care of workman suffering from industrial accidents not analogous to care of workmen suffering from illness; former due absolutely to industry, latter, very seldom due to industry.

- (b) Workman pays small proportion of expense incurred, therefore is an object of charity in disguise.
 - (c) Burden shared unequally by the workman, the young person in good health bearing the same burden as the older person in poor health or ill because of his vicious or immoral habits.
 - (d) The person now suffering from the most inadequate medical service (the rural dweller) is not provided with any service.
 - (e) Physicians fees fixed.
 - (f) Physicians' actions so restricted by higher authority as to deaden initiative and individualism.
 - (g) Physician can not decide on immediate operation, must first consult his superior.
3. Foreign countries are not satisfied with the system they now have in force.

4. To provide more adequate medical service to rural communities New York and Michigan have established health centers, in the former under the direction of the state and in the latter under the direction of the University of Michigan.

Problems such as these in the opinion of Dr. Jump shall be handled by the medical profession and he urged the cooperation of the State Medical Society of Pennsylvania in formulating a system by which adequate medical service could be rendered every person in the state, in accordance with plans approved by the medical profession.

At the meeting on the evening of Tuesday, October 6th, the Society was addressed by Dr. Frederick R. Green of Chicago on "Compulsory Health Insurance," a challenge to the Medical Profession."

Dr. Green: Health Insurance has now been under discussion for nearly five years. The majority of medical organizations that have considered this question have adopted resolutions condemning it. At the New Orleans meeting of the American Medical Association, the House of Delegates, representing the fifty-four constituent associations which form the national body of our profession, adopted a resolution declaring its opposition to "any plan embodying the system of compulsory, contributory insurance against illness, or any other plan of compulsory insurance which provides for medical service to be rendered contributors or their dependents; provided, controlled or regulated by any state or the Federal Government."

In so far as any body has authority to speak for the American medical profession, the adoption of this resolution by the American Medical Association definitely determines the attitude of physicians on this question. It only remains for us, as individuals and through the various units of our organization, to mobilize the influence of the profession and to mold public opinion so as to make this policy effective.

In this attitude, in so far as it is opposed to health insurance as proposed, I am in hearty accord. In a paper which I had the pleasure of presenting recently before the Michigan and Ohio State Medical Societies, I endeavored to analyze the proposed plan, and the arguments of its advocates, I tried to show that the scheme was not insurance, neither was it an effective health measure, but that it was rather an economic and industrial scheme for subsidizing a comparatively small group of industrial employes at the expense of the public, either through direct or indirect taxation; that the plan was not suited to this country or in harmony with its institutions; that the burden or proof rested on the advocates of the plan, and that in order to establish their case, it would be necessary for them to prove four fundamental propositions, viz:

1. That there is a disproportionate amount of sickness among employed persons causing financial loss, incapacity and poverty, greater in proportion than that sustained by the average person and requiring special methods of relief. Until this is proved, there is no jurisdiction for special laws for employes.

2. That the financial burden caused by sickness is heavier than the average employe is able to bear. Until this is proved, there is no reason to assume that he cannot carry his own burden.

3. That present methods of promoting public health and controlling diseases are not adequate. Until this is proved, there is no need of devising any new plan.

4. That compulsory state supervised sickness insurance is the best remedy for this condition. Until this is proved, it is possible that some other remedy may be better.

These four propositions have not as yet been proved. I also endeavored to show that while much interesting and valuable data on various aspects of this question has been collected, the evidence was as yet neither complete nor convincing and that the only verdict which could be rendered at present regarding the soundness of the scheme itself or the advisability of its adoption was the Scotch verdict of "not proven."

Assuming for the sake of the argument that this reasoning is sound and that the medical profession is justified in the attitude which it has taken, the question still remains whether the rendering of such a verdict constitutes the whole duty of physicians. Let us apply the same situation to the more familiar field of private practice. Suppose any one of us were called as a consultant in the case of an individual patient. After as painstaking and exhaustive an examination of the patient as our knowledge and the resources at our command will permit, we are convinced that the diagnosis that has been made is wrong and that the treatment that has been prescribed is not effective. Is our full duty as a consultant per formed when we have stated these conclusions to the patient or his friends? Under such circumstances would we not immediately be asked to furnish the correct diagnosis in place of the erroneous one that we had repudiated, and to outline a proper method of treatment in place of the one we had criticized and condemned? And would we not all admit that if we refused to do so, there was no alternative remaining but to confess that the case was beyond our ability and knowledge and to withdraw and give place to a more capable diagnostician?

In the case under discussion, the patient is the social body. That is is suffering from certain ills is probably not questioned by any one. The exact nature, extent and seriousness of these ills in other words, the diagnosis, is the question at issue. Until an exact diagnosis is made, any proposed method of treatment must necessarily be empirical rather than scientific. We have questioned the diagnosis of those who claim to be competent and qualified to diagnose and prescribe for our social ills. We have opposed the treatment which they have prescribed as unscientific and inadequate. Does not this situation constitute a direct and unavoidable challenge to the medical profession either to furnish a correct diagnosis and to prescribe an adequate and effective remedy for such ills as may be demonstrated, or to admit that the case lies outside of our province and to withdraw in favor of a better qualified authority?

I think we will all agree that both the making of a diagnosis and the prescribing of the treatment for the diseases of society are at present beyond the ability and knowledge of social conditions necessary for accurate diagnosis of social ills, nor will such a diagnosis be possible until we exert the same energy, ability, industry and perseverance in the study of social ills that the medical men of our own and previous generations have shown in investigating the diseases of the individual. But the assumption of this task is an assertion of our belief that the study and treatment of social ills are just as much functions of the modern physician as are the diagnosis and treatment of the ills of the individual. Are we as a profession ready to assume the role of social physicians? If so, what are our qualifications? If not, can we qualify for this task. If we can, then it is obviously incumbent upon us to do so. If we cannot or will not fit ourselves for this duty can we justly complain if others assume a function which we refuse to perform? These are pertinent questions of immediate and pressing importance, which the medical profession must answer frankly and honestly if we expect to justify ourselves before the American people and to retain the leadership which we have assumed in directing and guiding public health and public welfare.

If a physician is called to see a patient and makes a diagnosis of typhoid, fever, while he will naturally do everything possible to promote the comfort and recovery of the patient, yet the determination of the source of the disease and the prevention of the development of other cases from the initial case as a focus, i. e., the social aspects of the problem, are of as great if not greater importance than the treatment of the individual patient. This becomes increasingly true as the disease increases in rarity and severity. Suppose a single case of bubonic plague were discovered to-morrow in New York City. The correctness of the diagnosis in this single case would affect directly or indirectly, every man, woman and child of the millions in New York, as well as the many millions in the eastern half of the nation. A single case of yellow fever in one of our seaports might easily change the currents of trade and affect millions of dollars of capital and innumerable human beings. Modern scientific medicine is to-day one of the most vitally important and indispensable factors in modern life, and we have as yet seen only the beginning. In spite of the marvelous development that has taken place in the fifty years since Massachusetts established the first state department of health in this country, we can not yet begin to appreciate or realize the possible benefits which our present and future knowledge of diseases and their control will have on the well-being and happiness of the human race.

But while for a half a century our knowledge, as Tennyson says, has "grown from more to more," our professional habits have remained the same. In this remarkable development of scientific knowledge, physicians, both as individuals and as a class, have been the leaders. So rapid has been the growth of scientific knowledge that it has been difficult even for the leading medical schools to keep pace with its development. In spite of the tremendous increase in equipment, personnel and facilities for teaching, in spite of the lengthening of the medical course from one or two years of six months each to four years of nine months each with two years of college work as a preliminary qualification and a year of hospital work for postgraduate training, our medical schools to-day find it impossible to include even in this extensive period of instruction and training all of the facts which should be taught to the medical student. While the value of medical services to society is now equal to if not greater than the value of medical services to the individual, the medical profession is as individualistic to-day as it was fifty years ago and as devoted to learning specific facts for application as it has been for the last five hundred years. The greater part of the time of medical students is devoted to learning specific facts for application to individual cases. In spite of the rapid development of public health as a function of municipal state and national government and the constantly increasing demand for properly trained and qualified men to serve in official positions, our medical graduates are still trained almost exclusively for the treatment of individual patients. Every medical student is given exactly the same training, largely instruction in the examination, diagnosis and treatment of individual patients. Practically nothing is taught the student regarding social medicine. If after graduation, he has any opportunity to take up health work for the community, he is forced to get his training at the expense of the community after he has been appointed to office. He is taught nothing in medical school to prepare him for such work as a recognized part of the activities of a physician. It is only in the last few years that any differentiation has been undertaken between the training necessary for individual private practice and that required for a man who desires to devote himself to service to the community or the state.

What is true of our medical colleges is also true of our medical societies. Papers on public health questions or on social and economic problems are read to a handful of listeners, while the majority of the members flock to some surgical amphitheatre to see a surgeon operate on an individual gall bladder, or to listen eagerly to endless papers on the diagnosis and treatment of individual patients. Questions of public policy and legislation involving the welfare of an entire state arouse little general interest. It is the universal experience of those interested in promoting and securing health legislation of any sort that the task of securing such laws, to say nothing of enforcing them, is invariably left to a small group of public spirited physicians and that it is generally impossible to obtain the cooperation of a majority of the physicians of the state. Our professional standards have been based on the same methods of valuation. An individual's standing or success in the profession is estimated largely by the number of patients he has seen, the number of clinical cases he has reported or the number of operations he has performed. So long as the profession was limited entirely to individual services, these were the natural standards. To-day with the social value of modern medicine far outweighing its individual value, these standards are obsolete and need revision.

If it be argued that in the development of social medicine in so far as it has gone, the physician has contributed his full share of services, often at considerable sacrifice to himself, it can only be replied that this is perfectly true and that as a health officer or a member of a local or state board of health at a ridiculously small and inadequate salary or as an attending physician or surgeon to a public institution or free clinic, the great majority of physicians give valuable services worth large sums of money; but it is at the same time, equally true that these contributions, magnificently generous as they are, have been contributed by the physician as an individual rather than as a result of any well defined professional program.

The explanation of this apparently paradoxical situation, of course, lies in the pertinent fact that to-day, as for centuries past, the physician makes his living by charging individual patients for individual services, and so long as individual services are the principal source income of the majority of physicians, there will his chief interest naturally lie. Yet it is also true that the physician is to-day living on the least valuable part of his knowledge and is giving away the most valuable part of his services and that he will probably continue to do so as long as present methods continue.

This can be summarized by saying that, while the development of scientific knowledge in the last fifty years has produced an entirely different conception of the relation of disease to society and of the duty of society to the individual and of the individual to society in the control and prevention of disease, the attitude of physicians both as individuals and as a body, is still practically the same individualistic attitude that it has been for hundreds of years past. The medical student of to-day still gives the greater part, if not all, of his time to the study of disease as an individual phenomenon, while the practicing physician of to-day gives the bulk of his time and practically all of his interest to the treatment of individual patients; this in spite of the fact that in the last fifty years the medical profession of the work has developed and given to the human race for all time the most valuable contribution of knowledge and applied science that has ever been produced since human history began, and that its present and potential value to society far outweighs its value to the individual. It is absolutely essential that physicians recognize the fact that diseases of the community are just as much a function of the medical profession as are diseases of the individual, and that they endeavor to qualify for the same services in the social field that they have so magnificently performed and are now performing in the individual field. An entirely new field has developed, that of social medicine, as contrasted with individual medicine which has been followed for centuries as the only possible activity of physicians and is still followed exclusively by the great majority of physicians.

Social medicine includes all practical applications of scientific knowledge regarding diseases of their prevention and the promotion of health and efficiency as applied to the community rather than the individual. Less than fifty years old in its development, it is naturally fragmentary and incomplete. Its exact boundaries, limitations and methods are still to be determined. Resting as it does on scientific medicine as a foundation, it has naturally been promoted so far largely by men with medical training and a professional point of view plus a social instinct and vision. Yet it is a question still to be determined whether this field will be dominated by medical or non-medical men. It is only in the last few years, comparatively speaking, that any others than physicians have begun to take an active part in its development. In two notable instances it is becoming evident that non-medical workers may invade, even if they do not entirely occupy this field. The creation of the degree of Doctor of Public Health separate from the degree of Doctor of Medicine, as well as the appointment of sanitary engineers, bacteriologists, chemists and others to positions in public health organizations have indicated the possibility in the future of a large number of public health workers being trained for public health and community functions alone, rather than for the treatment of individual patients. The fact that so far with very few exceptions, medical colleges have shown no tendency to modify their methods of instruction so as to produce any considerable numbers of trained workers in the public health field would indicate that unless there is a speedy change in this particular, the public health men of the future will not be medical men in the present sense of the word. In fact, present methods do not produce enough trained public health workers to supply the demand. In Ohio last winter when the State commissioner of health undertook to administer the Hughes law which provided for whole-time county health officers, it was found impossible to secure enough trained health officers to supply the eighty-eight counties in that state. Yet we have been urging whole-time county health officers for many years, not only in Ohio, but in most of the larger states. If there were not enough trained men to supply the eighty-eight counties in Ohio, what is going to happen when all of the states with an aggregate of nearly 3,000 counties attempt to put in force plans for whole-time county health officers in every county in the United States, and when every city of any size organizes a whole-time health department, where are trained health officers to be secured? Yet that this will eventually occur, there is no doubt. Obviously, unless the medical profession trains a sufficient number of men for work in the field of social medicine, the men are going to be drawn from outside the medical profession.

The other instance in which this field has been invaded by non-medical men is the development in the last years of social welfare organizations and the social welfare workers. This class consists almost entirely of men and women without medical knowledge and in many cases without any scientific training. Those active in this field and especially the individuals conducting the training courses for social workers which have been established are drawn almost entirely from philanthropic and charitable organizations. While a sincere and painstaking effort has been made on the part of many of the workers, in this field to put their theories and practice on a sound scientific basis, the subject is as yet too new, the data too incomplete and the workers as a rule too little trained to entitle social welfare to recognition as a science. Yet it is from this class very largely that the supporters and advocates of so-called health insurance have been recruited while the scheme itself is probably only the first one of many plans which will be suggested as remedies for conditions which increasing investigation of the field of social medicine are revealing.

It is most important that physicians should understand clearly the significance of the present agitation for health insurance. To regard this movement as an isolated and single phenomenon would be a serious error. On the contrary, it is the result of a long series of causes which reach back to and spring from the same source as the development of scientific medicine. The medical profession itself, through its labors and progress, is very largely responsible for the present situation. We are also very largely responsible for the fact that, while scientific knowledge in the field of preventive medicine has made tremendous strides in the last generation, our personal and economic relations to the public remain practically the same as they have been for the last five hundred years. For fifty years past we have been so busy extending our knowledge of disease that we have had no time to adjust our business methods to conform to changing conditions. While we possess scientific knowledge which enables us to render services to society of greater value than any other professional group can offer, we have continued to do business on the old basis of so many dollars for so many calls on the individual patient. Yet the medical services which can be rendered and which in the future must be rendered to the community by physicians are of far greater value than any services which we can render to the individual. Medical services have grown in value and importance until under present methods, modern up-to-date medical attention is beyond the reach of the majority of persons unless they secure it through charity. The proposed plan of health insurance is only one of the schemes proposed whereby adequate medical services can be put within the reach of the average employee. The fact that this particular plan is in our judgment economically unsound and that it would probably be ineffective in operation does not in any way relieve us of the immediate necessity of devising some method by which modern, up-to-date medical services can be made available for every individual needing them.

There are in my opinion two fatal defects in the proposed plan of health insurance. The first is that its proponents, instead of first studying the situation in this country and devising a plan suitable to existing conditions, endeavored to transplant entire, from Germany by way of England, a plan unsuited to this country and out of harmony with our social institutions and economic conditions. The other fatal objection is that so far the advocates of health insurance have failed to produce any conclusive and convincing evidence that the plan is sound or that it will do what is claimed for it. But if we could to-morrow defeat beyond any possibility of resuscitation the establishment of health insurance in every state in the Union, we would be no nearer the solution of the problem than we were before.

There would still remain the need just as imperative as ever of remodelling the economic methods of practice now existing in the medical profession by which professional services are rendered almost exclusively to the individual, and of substituting for the present method of individual services to individual patients some plan whereby each individual as a part of his social rights, would secure every protection of his health and well-being that modern medical knowledge could give him. In the face of the fact that the discoveries in medicine in the last fifty years have been of greater value to the community than to the individual, and that medical knowledge has already a far greater social importance than it has an individual value, it is idle to deny that the medical profession in the near future must inevitably and unavoidably modify and readjust its methods of service. The efforts for the adoption of health insurance, therefore, instead of being regarded as a single, isolated movement which will disappear with the defeat of the plan in the various states, should rather be recognized as the being of an effort to readjust professional methods to social needs. If we prove that the proposed plan is unwise and refuse to accept it, there still remains the duty of devising, within our own ranks, a better and a sounder method by which the results desired can be secured.

In the discussion of this question there are, as always, three distinct groups; first, the conservatives who desire only that things shall remain in the condition in which they always have been so far as their experience and knowledge goes; second, the radicals who look forward with eager vision and often without accurate discrimination toward what they hope will be better conditions and who favor any proposed change in the existing status; third, the mass of the medical profession who have accepted conditions as they found them and have made the best of them, who are willing to adopt new methods if their value can be demonstrated, who are neither wedded to the past as are the conservatives nor plunging rashly into the future as are the radicals. I take it that 75 per cent. at least of this audience belong to the third class. To you, therefore, I wish to submit what is to my mind the most important fundamental question in the whole discussion and to beg of you its most careful and earnest consideration. Briefly stated it is this: Is social medicine a function of the medical profession? This is the important question for physicians to determine. Is the physician of the future going to restrict himself to the treatment of individual patients as he has in the past, or is he going to assume the responsibility for the treatment of society and of humanity in the mass as well as of the individual? If he is then it is obviously necessary for him to qualify himself for this work. If he is not, then he cannot complain if others take up the functions and the responsibilities which he declines and endeavor to the best of their ability to furnish the services for society which he will not or cannot give.

I assume that there is no difference of opinion as to what the answer to this question should be. The medical profession owes it to society just as it does to the individual to render the best services and do the best work of which it is capable. It is inconceivable that the highest type of medical service, whether individual or social, shall be rendered by any other than scientifically educated and trained medical men. But if physicians are going to assume this responsibility, especially if we are going to assume this responsibility, especially if we are going to demand the control of this field as we have of the treatment of individual ills, then we must qualify for social services just as thoroughly as we are now endeavoring to qualify for individual services.

If the medical profession is to undertake the responsibility for social services as a part of its professional functions, then social medicine and its problem must be more generally, frequently, broadly and intelligently studied and discussed in our medical organizations and medical publications than they have been in the past. If social medicine is to be one of the functions of the medical profession of the future, then the medical student must be given broad and adequate instruction regarding its problems. He must be taught social anatomy, pathology, diagnosis and treatment with at least the same thoroughness that he is now taught the diagnosis and treatment of individual diseases.

The issue is plainly before us. Shall we follow the methods and practices of the past until we are forced to abandon them, or shall we ourselves recognize, as Lowell said, that

"New occasions teach new duties;
Time makes ancient good uncouth.
They must upward still and onward,
Who would keep abreast of truth."

Shall we adhere to the limited field of our professional forefathers or shall we broaden our methods to keep pace with the ever widening bounds of scientific knowledge? The question is yours to answer, not only for your own day and generation, but for the future of scientific medicine.

PUBLIC MEETING OF THE COMMISSION

Bellevue-Stratford Hotel,
Philadelphia, Dec. 3, 1920.

Addresses:

1. Dr. J. E. Sweet, Philadelphia, Pa.
2. Dr. Clarence Bartlett, Philadelphia, Pa.
3. Dr. Edward M. Gramm, Philadelphia, Pa.
4. Dr. G. H. Wells, Philadelphia, Pa.
5. Dr. Henry D. Jump, Philadelphia, Pa.
6. Dr. Frank C. Hammond, Philadelphia, Pa.
7. Dr. Frederick L. Hoffman, Newark, N. J.
8. Dr. Frederick L. Van Sickle, Harrisburg, Pa.

Dr. Sweet:

I have attempted to analyze the fact that the medical profession is almost unanimously opposed to the idea of health insurance, in order to make clear to the members of this Commission upon just what grounds this opposition rests, an opposition which may be looked upon as instinctive, and I beg you to listen to the result of such an analytical study.

In the first place, we must grant that this opposition is not based upon personal motive; men such as you see before you today would not be influenced in the least degree by the passage of such an act. I have not even thought personally of the bearing of such legislation upon the welfare of the profession of today, for I am willing to grant that if the idea were a good one, in the long run, some might have to suffer at the moment, and some might be immediately prospered. It must be granted, however, that the medical profession has never acted as a body for selfish consideration. No other body of men is so constantly at work to defeat its own welfare, for every move to lessen the incidence of disease simply lessens the number of the sick, and therefore cuts down the sum total of the work from which the doctor makes his living. The medical profession is unanimously in support of vaccination for the prevention of small-pox; and yet one good small-pox case would bring far more money to any given practitioner than he would make throughout his entire life from vaccinations.

This unanimous opposition must, therefore, be grounded in some deeper considerations, and I think this basis is to be found, not in a study of the idea of Health Insurance, but in a study of the peculiarities of the practice of medicine, and in a study of the facts of disease. From such a study we arrive at these conclusions; first, any proposal for Health Insurance yet made is in conflict with the underlying principal of medical practice, and will therefore work toward the lowering of the standard of medical practice; second, these proposals are not founded upon a study of the causative factors of disease, and are therefore unjust to the insured; third, these proposals are not based upon a study of those measures which have actually brought about a lessening of disease, and a comparison of these successful measures with a proposal for Health Insurance leaves room for grave doubt as to what Health Insurance could ultimately accomplish.

Let us consider more closely these three fundamental objections:

The practice of medicine is based upon a personal, intimate relationship between the doctor and the patient; this basis is of such ancient origin that it is written into Law, and we have the facts of privileged testimony, etc., as ample proof that the Law recognizes this relation as a basic one. No scheme of State Health Insurance can be devised which does not contain the provision for medical direction or medical supervision; such must exist, in order to guard the funds against gross abuse. But the introduction of a third party, the medical director, into this personal relation between the doctor and the patient immediately destroys the basis of personal, intimate contact vital to the practice of medicine; absolutely vital, for without the confidence born of this personal relationship, no physician can succeed with a given patient. For this reason the good men of the profession will not be influenced by the passage of such legislation,—they will have nothing to do with it; nor will the patient go to a physician who in turn will have to report to the medical director with the ultimate result that all the patient's sins of omission and commission will be plastered upon the records of the State. Proof of this is the present difficulty in making venereal disease reportable to the Boards of Health.

I further believe that such a scheme as Health Insurance, even though it did not affect the profession of today in any unfavorable sense, would surely work toward a lowering of the quality of the men who would undertake the study of medicine. There are, as you know, two distinct types of men in this world; the one who prefers to paddle his own canoe; the other who prefers that some one else should furnish canoe and paddle, and assume responsibility therefor. The one makes the successful, aggressive business man; the other furnishes the clerks for the first man's business. It is my belief that the institution of the scheme of Health Insurance will inevitably attract the clerical type of mind; and I do not wish to see the juggler of human life chosen from the type which has not the independence to guide his own destiny. You may say that this is a far-fetched argument; but it is notorious that the criticism of the Army and the Navy Medical Service is based exactly upon the fact that the conditions of service are such as to repel the right type and attract the wrong type. And I could show you, had I the time, how extrinsic factors of less basic moment have influenced the type of men in the profession.

And another basic consideration; under the terms of such an Act, a man will be paid according to the number of cases he sees. But if you stop to think of it, you pay your own doctor in proportion to the quality of his work, not the quantity of it. It is this constant effort to improve the quality of work which has developed the specialist of today; large quantity precludes high quality of medical service.

Those of you who are fond of studying the English system of Health Insurance may find food for intensive mental digestion regarding this point concerning the quality of men in the work and quality of the work they are doing in a consideration of the fact that the English authorities are now casting about for some means of applying pressure to the panel doctors to make them do better work.

If we now turn to a study of the cause of disease we find that we must divide disease into three classifications, from the standpoint of the method of handling disease. These are, first, epidemic diseases and communicable disease; second, disease for which we do not know the cause or in which some organ of the body has become irreparably damaged, such as diabetes and heart disease; and third, the common disease of every-day, due to individual ignorance, faulty habits of life and carelessness. The group, epidemic and communicable disease, cannot be successfully handled by such a scheme as Health Insurance, because an individual sick with such disease is a menace to society; for this group we have our State Boards of Health. The second group, the organic diseases, would not be much influenced by Health Insurance, for they mostly occur at an age beyond the wage-earning age, and the individual affected is not capable of being employed.

The third class of disease is the one then, which mostly concerns us in thinking of Health Insurance, the disease of every day for which the wage earner most often seeks medical aid, the disease due to individual ignorance, faulty manner of living, or personal carelessness. And a consideration of this group leads to the conclusion that poverty is not the cause of disease, nor is disease the cause of poverty; but both poverty and sickness have a common origin, ignorance and lack of sufficient stamina to save money on the one hand and to take care of one's health on the other hand.

I have taken the number of cases visiting three of our large dispensaries during one week of the past month in order to see how much of the disease of every day would come under the workings of a Health Insurance Act. 200 cases, new and old, visited the dispensary of the University Hospital, of which 118 were organic cases, the great majority of them women not employed; 82 cases were of the group due to ignorance, etc., 53 new cases sought the dispensary of the Pennsylvania Hospital; 25 were organic, 28 were of the second group, and 12 of the 28 were cases of syphilis. 37 new cases sought the dispensary of the Episcopal Hospital; 12 were under the wage earning age; 12 were housewives; or, in other words, two-thirds of them would not be affected by any scheme of Health Insurance I have seen proposed.

The actual result of such a survey seems to be that only a small proportion of the sickness of every day would be benefited by a Health Insurance. The problem however, involves all classes and all ages, and I fail to see why the employer and employee should bear the burden of disease due to municipal and individual ignorance and carelessness. Lack of knowledge concerning disease is as much your fault and mine as it is the fault of any one class; the burden should be borne by all.

If we look for the measures which have resulted in a lessening of disease what do we find? To choose but a few examples; it is not so long ago that the blind asylums of Europe were filled with the results of small-pox; now you seldom see a case of the disease in countries where compulsory vaccination is enforced. Only as long ago as the Spanish-American War, typhoid fever killed more men than bullets; in the late Great Unpleasantness typhoid was more rare in the armies than it is in civil life. Yellow fever is wiped off the face of the earth. The way has been pointed toward the lessening of the incidence of endemic thyroid disease. In other words, the only measures which have borne fruit have been preventive measures. But, you may say, we admit all that; but we wish to care for the unfortunate individual now sick. My answer is that the fight against disease is warfare of the most frightful sort, and the fundamental rule of warfare is to neglect the individual for the good of the whole of society. I would do what I could for the individual; but I do not favor the elaboration of a huge machine, the expenditure of vast sums, for the purpose of locking the barn after the horse is gone.

To put the matter in other words, the scheme of Health Insurance merely provides for an endless succession of to-days; it does nothing whatever to hasten the down of that tomorrow, when sorrow and sickness shall have flown away.

I feel therefore that the unanimous opposition of the medical profession is based upon the conviction that a scheme of Health Insurance would eventually result in lower standards; a lower standard of man who would undertake the study of medicine and a lower standard for his practice; it does not reach sickness in general, and the great mass of the sickness of every day, due to ignorance and carelessness, will not be helped much by simply making it easier to find treatment; and the idea of Health Insurance is directed at the wrong end of things from the standpoint of really bringing about a lessening of disease and its concurrent ills.

Dr. Bartlett:

This meeting has been called, as I understand it, to elicit facts from the Medical Profession concerning Compulsory Health Insurance, with the idea of giving the Commission information, as to its practicability, and as to the best means of drafting an act should Compulsory Health Insurance be regarded as a wise step. Our Chairman has requested me to address you concerning Medical Education and the practice of Medicine in its relationship to the subject under review.

First, permit me to discuss with you the course of Practical Medicine as followed at Hahnemann Medical College and of which I have the honor to be in charge. We start our students in the first year of their career with a study of the history of medicine which enables them to correlate the practices of the past and those of the present. In their second year, they are put through a rigid training of practical work in the study of the normal man, in order that they may better hereafter appreciate the abnormal. Sixty four hours are devoted to this subject, and students are rigorously trained in inspection, palpation, percussion and auscultation. Even this early in his career the medical student is forced to realize that patients cannot be examined hurriedly. In the third year, students are given three more lines of practical work as follows: The taking of case histories, the study of physical diagnosis in its relation to the sick, and thirdly, the training of the eye in the visualization of disease. At the same time didactic work in general diagnosis and practice of medicine is enforced upon them, and they attend clinical lectures, the total curriculum being two hundred or more hours. In the fourth year, they are assigned to hospital and dispensary service, where they receive instruction, attend didactic and clinical lectures, comprising probably two hundred hours at least. In all of their work, they are made to appreciate the following aphorisms: first, that more mistakes are made by not looking than by not knowing; secondly, that all statements of patients must be accepted cum grano sali until such statements are proven to be correct. Misstatements of fact are common sources of error in medical work. Thirdly, that many patients are not sick, but are worried or subsist in an unfortunate environment; fourthly, that it is just as important to know the patient as it is to know his disease; in fact, there are many instances where knowing the patient is the important factor in the conduct of his illness.

When the teaching is put into actual practice, it will be found that first class medical work, and there really should not be any other kind, requires a large amount of time. The situation is very different from what it was forty or more years ago, when it was a not uncommon practice for physicians to make 10,000 prescriptions in the course of a year. That, you can easily see, means an average of thirty patients daily, which also means that doctors saw anywhere from ten to seventy-five people in the course of a day. Satisfactory though these so-called busy practitioners may be to the people, they cannot do the best work of which they are capable under present auspices. Years ago such practice was the best obtainable. Today it is archaic. It is not necessary for you of the Commission to depend upon my statements as to the importance of the above assertions. Dr. Jackson of the Mayo Hospital at Rochester, Minn., has stated that the limit of best work on the part of a physician is nine patients daily, that any larger number results in a loss of quality as to the work. The State Board of Licensure of Pennsylvania has decreed that unless a hospital maintains an intern for every twenty-five beds that hospital cannot go on the approved list, which means in fact, that such hospitals cannot be regarded as class A institutions, and merit appropriations from the Legislature for the care of the citizens of Pennsylvania. When this Board says, "one physician for twenty-five beds," it does not mean one physician for twenty-five patients. It means that twenty-five patients is the minimum. When you come to consider, you find that of the patients in the medical wards, (and I speak of the medical wards because it is of them that I have the most knowledge) not more than one half, if that many, are seriously ill at one time. A very large proportion of the sick in our hospitals are convalescents, who require but comparatively little of the physician's time.

It may be objected to that when bringing before you the question of hospital illness I am utilizing a class composed of seriously sick people. Please remember gentleness of the Commission that all people may be seriously sick; that each person is as sick as he thinks he is, until after thorough examination he has been officially informed of his correct condition. Please bear in mind that there never was a serious illness that did not have a mild or innocent-appearing commencement. Even that terrible disease cancer, starts as a mere pimple. Tuberculosis has as its initial lesion a deposit scarcely greater than a grain of sand. If we are to recognize disease in its curable stages we must diagnose while it is still young and still curable. In reality, the trivial illnesses are the important ones and demand deliberate and careful attention. The excuse that an illness is insignificant is never a reason why it should be neglected. Many a patient has died of tuberculosis because he and his doctor thought at the onset that it was a cold. The patient has not taken care of himself properly, and the doctor has not properly examined.

Gentlemen of the Commission, the world is filled with horror over 34,000 American youth, killed and a quarter of a million maimed in the World War; a bomb in Wall street, killing some thirty or forty people and destroying property is impressive, and demands numerous columns in the daily press; a flood in China, a famine in India or typhus in Servia awakens world-wide interest and sympathy. Indeed gentlemen, I might multiply horrors of this kind which are indelibly fastened upon the minds of the American people, and yet I know that the lives lost, the health ruined by quantity production in medical work. Quality production should be the cry; for remember that the prevailing folly of the medical profession is not ignorance, but it is not looking, because the doctor, like the engineer, asleep at the switch, fails to take the time to observe the danger signals ahead. Overwork and not ignorance is the prevailing barrier to good medical service.

Next comes the question of economics. Ordinarily when it is said that a physician has a practice of three, five or ten thousand a year, these figures are intended to convey that that is his income. As a matter of fact, the conduct of a medical practice demands overhead and carrying charges such as are incidental to any other business. These include office rent, automobiles, telephone, library, medical society dues, light, heat, assistants, as overheads, while his carrying charges include medicines, surgical instruments, special supplies, to say nothing of numerous other items. These in the aggregate count up very heavily so that it is pretty safe to say that but few physicians get off with less than thirty per cent, many put out more than forty per cent, and in certain small practices the overhead is so high in relation to the income that the physician is lucky if he gets forty per cent for himself.

I might add what may be called the medical turnover, to correspond with the labor turnover. The manufacturer knows that it costs him money to discharge and break in labor. One of the problems of the factories today is that of making labor contented so that the cost of labor turnover may be reduced. The housekeeper today knows all about labor turnover as she recognized the fact that in the numerous changes incidental to house help, there are many expenses which add to the burden of keeping servants. I recognize, for example, that it costs from fifty dollars to seventy-five dollars to change chauffeurs. Medical practice has its turnover as time and expense are incidental to each new case of illness coming under our care. Many physicians recognize this fact by exacting larger fees for first examinations.

Let me mention as modest overhead charges for a physician: Office rent, $600; automobile, $1,000; telephone, $35; heat and light, $50; library and journals, $100; society dues, $25; the total being, $1,810; and you will agree with me that this would represent a very modest outlay and would probably mean a gross income or business of $4,000, or $4,500 per annum. Present day medical practice demands equipment the absence or which most assuredly interferes with a man's efficiency. The above estimate for expense does not provide for this to any extent. I have not seen any figures relating to the returns to the physician in health insurance work that could begin to compensate him for his business expenses, much less afford him a means of decent support for his family and himself. Remember that above expenses are the same irrespective of the fee received. It costs the same to travel two miles to receive one dollar as it does to travel two miles to receive five dollars. I might question that medical work under the reduced fee schedule of Compulsory Health Insurance might not place the physician in the position of using his diploma as a mere excuse for getting less returns from operating his automobile than are given to the chauffeur driver. Another economic question is that of hours. Labor unions have for several years contended for the eight hour day. Physicians, to their honor let it be said, have always been willing to work no matter how long nor how inconvenient the time, and despite weather conditions. When human life and health are at stake, they respond and cheerfully as a rule. If they growl that growl does not count, they go just the same.

When one analyzes the activities of physicians in medical legislation one will appreciate that every movement in which they have been active has been for the public good. Laws for health and for medical education alike stand as moments of their strict altruism. I believe that Compulsory Health Insurance is a bad thing as tending to the neglect of quality production and the encouragement of quantity work. It means that physicians must take long hours daily in order to make sufficient to support a family. It means that the profession will be robbed of its altruism and will be forced into commercialism. The time given to work will be greatly increased because of the incidental paper work of medical cases for the guidance of the central bodies.

So far as medical work in concerned there seems to be a decided lack of appreciation as to its relative position in human affairs. It is only three years ago since the Kansas legislature made certain appropriations as follows: For sick babies, $3,000; for sick bees, $5,000; for sick hogs, $50,000. Now gentlemen, you may think that this is a joke. It is not, it is serious. I know myself of an instance where one week a man, whose income that year was $100,000, or over, paid $500 for a prize bull dog, and the next week raised the deuce over a bill of $50 for attendance upon his sick wife. As twixt his love for his dog and his wife he may have stated his relative appreciation, and I have done him an injustice, still, we all have our opinions. One of our popular novelists makes one of her characters say that a man will pay cheerfully to a lawyer, $10,000 for keeping him out of jail for six months, and then will complain of a doctors bill of $100 for saving his life and perhaps keeping him out of hell forever.

From what I have said in the opening sections of this address, you will appreciate that it takes special preliminary education and long years of preparation before one can become a graduated physician. While men who enter medical practice do so of course as a means of making an honest living, they are not actuated entirely by monetary motives. If they were they would seek some other calling. Medicine properly practiced, made an art and pleasure and a science is fascinating in the extreme to its votaries. Part of their reward comes from pleasure obtained and the honorable position of physicians in the community. Compulsory Health Insurance will so surely remove from the practice of medicine its aspects of art and science that I fear truly that but few young men of proper mental calibre will take it up. Just what the beneficiaries of this law will think of it, I do not know. My impression, however, is that after they have tried it out they will take but little interest in it. Last Saturday, November the 27th, I filled out a certificate for sick benefits for one of my patients, a shop foreman in a large industrial plant in this city. I proceeded to sound him on Compulsory Health Insurance. He sidestepped my question entirely by stating facts that existed in his factory. His corporation maintains three physicians on salary whose services are given to the entire personnel of the employed at the works. My informant assured me that not more than ten per cent of the men employed took the company doctors but preferred physicians of their own choosing and to pay their own bills.

During the late War it was not uncommon among the enlisted men to voice serious objections to the military or naval doctor. I know this personally because one of my pleasures was to entertain at my home a large number of the boys, and I could hear their jokes about "mag. sulph.," "dope" and other things to indicate that they looked upon medical practice in the Army and Navy as of a decided machine like order. I know their criticisms were not fair because our Army and Navy doctors did good work. Unfortunately the environment that existed forced a kind of medical service to which the men were not accustomed. They were deprived of the liberty of choosing a medical man in whom they had confidence. They wanted a medical man who knew them personally. In other words, they craved the human factor. Unless a physician's presence and personality gives to the sick a certain amount of assuredness of return of health, the patient loses we will say twenty per cent (certainly he loses something) of his chances of recovery. Will this be given to the sick in Compulsory Health Insurance with its quantity production?

Gentlemen of the Commission, if in your wisdom you see fit to formulate and recommend a Compulsory Health Insurance Bill, may I ask you to provide that that bill shall give to the helpless sick who entrust themselves to your care and who no longer have the privilege of choosing their own medical advisors an opportunity for the best medical advice. Assuredly the best is none to good for labor. The best is the cheapest in the long run. Do not take away from the sick the human factor without which illness has no factors other than those found in the practice of veterinary medicine.

Dr. Gramm:

The membership of the Homeopathic Medical Society of the County of Philadelphia generally are opposed to Compulsory Health Insurance as now in effect and as proposed in the bills presented to the various legislatures, not on personal grounds; but because they believe its advantages are illusory and have not been demonstrated in actual practice.

It is economically unsound to draft a class of the community to minister to a portion of it many of whose individuals have an income much above the average found among physicians. No legislature would insist upon the plumbers, for instance, working for a specified assessment upon physicians and expect the former to be guided by rules for working that, by enactment, would be formulated by an outside commission, committee or similar body.

Physicians practically would be compelled to enroll on a panel to insure to themselves some sort of income. This obviously is the case where they practice in industrial communities, whose individuals would be compelled by proposed legislation to pay their share towards the maintenance of the machinery for carrying out compulsory health insurance and towards the fund from which benefits would be paid.

The portion of the community which needs assistance more than any other the poorest poor and those whose income is below that specified in some of the bills suggested in the past would not be reached by compulsory health insurance.

The incentive to enter the profession of medicine would be taken away from younger men and women who might be contemplating that step because they would, more and more be compelled to practice according to rules to be formulated by some body to be created by legislation rules governing the price of drugs allowable, when patients are entitled to treatment, when treatment no longer shall be administered, etc.

Because, under projects of compulsory health insurance in operation, malingering is greater in amount than where individual initiative induces people to seek medical advice.

Dr. Wells:

In the addresses that have been delivered today before the Commission a great deal has been said regarding the effect of Compulsory Health Insurance upon two classes of people in this Commonwealth, namely. Industrial Laborers and Physicians. While I do not attempt to belittle the importance of the interests of either of these classes, which together make up about 23 per cent. of the population of Pennsylvania, I am convinced that the Commission and the Members of the Legislature in reaching a decision regarding this important matter should look beyond the demands of any special class and consider the question from the standpoint of the effect it will have upon "the People of Pennsylvania". The proportion of those who may anticipate any benefit whatsoever from Compulsory Health Insurance are few, while the tremendous financial burden of such an act must be borne by the public as a whole and the question very pertinently raised by a Member of the Commission, Mr. Ramsey "What will be the effect of Compulsory Health Insurance upon the great body of citizens of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, is the question that should be uppermost in your minds.

At a meeting of the Homeopathic Medical Society at Harrisburg, in September, 1920, the 800 members of that Society unanimously adopted the following resolution condemning Compulsory Health Insurance.

Resolved: That it is the opinion of the members of the Homeopathic Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania that the passage of an enactment providing for Compulsory Health Insurance would be imposing a useless and unnecessary financial burden upon the people of this Commonwealth, would result in inefficient medical service to industrial workers, and would lower the present high standards of medical education and practice."

The Homeopathic physicians of the State of Pennsylvania are unanimously opposed to the enactment of the Compulsory Health Insurance Act for the following reasons:

1. Because Such Legislation Does Not Apply Impartially to all Classes of Citizens.

It does not apply to the agricultural laborer, who works from sunrise to sunset and whose compensation, on an average, is no greater in one week than the industrial mechanic receives in a single day. It does not apply to the domestic servant, whose weekly wage again is equivalent, in the majority of cases, only to the daily average of many industrial laborers. These two classes of citizens would have much greater need for assistance in time of illness than the highly paid industrial worker, and yet no provision is made for them in acts of similar character in other states. The only part they have to play is to pay their share of the tax to help support the relatively highly paid industrial worker.

2. Because it Will Not Increase the Working Efficiency of the People of this State.

It has been the universal experience wherever similar acts have been tried, that the duration of illness increases 300 per cent. Theoretically, this should not be so, but actually, it is.

3. Because it will Decidedly Increase the Tax Rate now Paid by the People of Pennsylvania.

A conservative estimate of the cost of Compulsory Health Insurance in Pennsylvania would be $65,000,000 per year, about 20 per cent. of this, or a little more than $12,000,000 would have to be raised by direct taxation from the people of the State and the remaining $53,000,000 would indirectly be paid by the people of this State.

4. Because it Will Add to the High Cost of Living in Pennsylvania.

This is no theoretical objection. Only a few weeks ago hundreds of people applied to the Mayor of Philadelphia for relief from taxation and high cost of living, which was bringing ruin upon them and their families. If we add $53,000,000 yearly to the cost of manufacturing commodities in this Commonwealth, we know definitely that the cost of these articles to the public will be largely increased. The Commission should hesitate before recommending a law that will add to the present high cost of living.

5. Because it Will Not Improve the Health of the People of this State.

Providing doctors and financial aid for the sick will only ameliorate some of the bad results of disease; it does not strike at the root of the trouble. Compulsory Health Insurance Laws, as they exist in other states and countries, have proven a failure as far as any benefit to the health of the people is concerned.

6. Because Compulsory Health Insurance is not a Scientific and Economic Substitute for Preventive Medicine.

It is generally conceded that one dollar spent in educating the people of the State in methods of preventing disease is equal, in beneficial results, to ten dollars spent upon those who are actually ill. If I were asked what substitute does the medical profession offer for Compulsory Health Insurance, I would say that it is the opinion of the profession that an active campaign along educational lines by means of lectures, literature, moving picture exhibits and other similar methods should be carried out by the Health Agencies now existent in Pennsylvania, supplemented by additional workers if necessary. We believe that a relatively small amount of money, spent in this manner, will do more to improve the health and efficiency, not only of the industrial workers, but of all the citizens of Pennsylvania, than ten times as great an amount spent upon Compulsory Health Insurance.

Dr. Jump: Like the previous speakers, I shall be compelled to dwell on certain points which have been spoken of by other speakers. This is natural for we of the medical profession are thinking of Compulsory Health Insurance in terms of the value of service which may be rendered to the people. We have always been concerned in the betterment of medical practices and in the character of medical service which is offered to people who cannot pay the fees incidental to the best and most thorough treatment. We have seen the rather poor character and inadequacy of some service which is gotten through contract and feel that in Compulsory Health Insurance there will be, in general, the same sort of practice. We feel that the good effect obtained will be more than balanced by the pernicious influence upon the profession. We fully understand that the conditions prevailing in the profession in Great Britain and among the working people there are different from those seen in this country but do feel that we may look upon the operation of the National Insurance Act in Great Britain as an example of the practical working of such legislation. The testimony of Dr. Targett which has just been given is the most important in this particular which I have heard. When he tells us that panel doctors have said that they were little concerned with the quality of the work they did we must stop and consider this matter more seriously.

Dependency and Sickness.

The survey conducted by the first Commission to study this subject led to the conclusion that sickness is the greatest factor in production of dependency. There are so many factors concerned in this matter that one wonders whether the conclusion arrived at is correct. The most important of these is the disinclination of people to give truthful answers to an investigator. There is a tendency to deceive either because the person questioned wishes to reply as he feels the questioner would desire or he resents what he considers an intrusion into his private affairs. Social workers have not been able to appreciate this weakness in the survey. Other conclusions have been gotten in other investigations. Dr. Brundage, in Public Health Reports, September 10th, Vol. XXXV, p. 2143, investigated the cause of absenteeism in a factory employing 6748 persons. He found there were among these people 17.1 days of absenteeism in the year for each employee. Of these 5 days were from sickness lasting more than two days; 11 days were for personal reasons and for sickness lasting less than two days. Statistics compiled by the Labor Bureau of New York show 5.7% of unemployment due to sickness, twice this amount to labor disputes and thirteen times this to lack of work. Absence from work because of personal reasons is improvident and at the same time such absence may be associated with conditions which predispose toward sickness.

The lack of thrift is inherent among a certain class of workmen. They are qualified for dependency just as they are for sickness and the two go hand in hand because of the material of which these individuals are made. They are improvident of their wages, their strength and their health. To provide for sickness alone is beginning at the wrong end and is inadequate. Correct rather the environment and its evil effects in heredity.

The Poor Working Man Cannot Afford To Be Sick.

Mr. Lewis, in two addresses before Medical Societies has given the name of John Callahan to one of these individuals who could not afford to be sick. He continued at his work while ill until he finally became incapacitated and later a dependent. As a matter of fact, John Callahan could have been cared for at any one of a large number of excellent medical dispensaries, or if he had stated his inability to pay he could have been treated by almost any physician he chose for a reduced fee or none. There were at hand adequate agencies for his treatment. Had he been treated at the onset of his illness, he probably would have recovered quickly, for in nothing more than in illness is early care productive of good results. Perhaps he could pay for medical care but would not go to bed because of loss of wages. It is fair to ask would he have quit his work more readily if he had been provided with a portion of his wages? I doubt it for John Callahan was one of that type who can't perceive the consequences of neglect of illness. He preferred to "fight it off". He and his class do not stand alone in this. Many persons quite able to lose their wages are disinclined to quit work and care for sickness.

Would he have fared better had he been one of the many patients waiting outside the door of the panel physician of Great Britain? All of the reports we have of the operation of the Insurance Act in Great Britain indicates that the panel doctor sees many patients during his insurance hour. We know that each one can receive, under such conditions, only inadequate examinations and treatment. Our Medical Societies are constantly contending for good medical practices and not for increase of income nor yet for assurance of income, as has been suggested as a point in our favor if this matter becomes a law. We know that the supervisory and hampering restrictions of such legislation is conducive to perfunctory or hack work and in that much must be degenerative upon the physicians affected. Is it right to enact legislation governing a learned profession which the members of that profession, in a purely unselfish spirit, oppose because they know the effects will surely be pernicious?

The poorly paid workman is not a victim of inadequate medical attention but rather of his own inadequacy to care for himself or to avail himself of remedial measures. To substitute for the present conditions one like that which prevails in Great Britain is not improving things for him. In other words, can John Callahan afford to be sick if he has to receive that kind of treatment?

Dr. Hammond: The medical profession of the State is anxious to help all constructive legislation, and to oppose any legislation inimical to the best interests and health of the people of the Commonwealth.

The following is submitted as a summary of some of the reasons why the medical profession is opposed to Compulsory Health Insurance:

1. Most sickness is traceable to ignorance of, or the wilful violation of, well recognized laws of health or hygiene on the part of the individual employee or his dependents.

2. If the employer is not responsible for the illness developing among his employees and their dependents, or does not benefit from the insurance against the losses occasioned thereby, he should not be forced to contribute to such relief many employers do continue the wages of employees during time of illness. All true occupational diseases should be compensated by the industry involved.

3. Health Insurance will compel the employer to pay a high premium on his employees, and no doubt in excess per ratio over the charges now being made for industrial accident insurance; this increase in the overhead, with surtax on profits from production, will increase the retail price on commodities.

4. The class making features, dividing workers into those forced to insure and those considered capable of caring for themselves, are un-American.

5. Adequate wages and better working conditions, without forced insurance contribution by employer; avoid any appearance of charity, and permit advantages of privately managed voluntary forms of insurance with free choice of physicians, dentists, etc.

6. It will mean either the employer must pay for pre-existing diseases or discharge bad risks (for example employees who have chronic diseases, but who at present are self-supporting, and a help to the community.)

7. The taxpayer now supports financially all well established state agencies, for the prevention and control of contagious diseases; the treatment through dispensaries and sanitariums of tuberculosis and venereal diseases, the treatment of dependent sick individuals through state aided dispensaries and hospitals, and the complete care of the indigent, disabled and insane.

8. State supervision of Workmen's Compensation Insurance, costs the taxpayers of Pennsylvania, several hundred thousands of dollars annually. State supervision of Health Insurance, covering the insured regular employees plus their million dependents, will cost the taxpayers considerably more than does Workmen's Compensation Insurance.

9. The taxpayer, who is an employer, will find his total contribution more than the 50 per cent pro-rated to him by the plan.

10. Compulsory Health Insurance as a scheme of insurance is unsound if a flat rate of contribution is required, because it assumes an equality of risk which does not exist; the lower incidence of sickness in rural districts making it in effect a tax on rural industries and occupations for the benefit of town dwellers.

11. The various cities, towns, etc. of the state have employees eligible under the proposed plan. Will such employees during illness be paid 100% of wages, and will the management of "locals" pay all sick benefits? If so, the taxpayer will pay 100% wage to city employees while ill, as well as 50% of his insurance benefits.

12. The enormous cost in money will be cut out of all proportion to the promised benefits.

13. Where tried, the plan has not influenced favorably the development of sickness, nor reduced the death rate, nor lowered in fact mortality. In fact, practices and laws resulting in the prevention of diseases, and the reduction of sickness, have their origin in the efforts of individual or grouped physicians. Witness the magnificent results obtained in the prevention of small-pox, typhoid fever, malarial and yellow fevers and the treatment of diphtheria and cerebro-spinal fever. Physicians led the way toward improved infant mortality, improved school and industrial hygiene, and they form the nucleus of the organizations endeavoring to reduce tuberculosis, insanity and venereal diseases. Such trained and experienced men better should be trusted to develop carefully and in an orderly process, proper plans to meet economically the existing widespread improvement in preventing and treating sickness. This should suggest to thinking individuals, an improvement over the proposed plan for compulsion of contract medical practice.

14. We are told that in Germany and England health insurance has demoralized the medical profession by removal of incentive to individual advancement, and has discouraged research work.

15. A state Bureau of layman in control of the treatment and sickness may be created.

16. The successful treatment of sickness is entirely a question of confidential, individual and personal relation, between physician or dentist and patient.

17. The compulsion features are distasteful to employer, employe, physician, dentist and beneficiary alike, compulsion to attend certain patients, compulsion to accept attention of certain physicians or dentists.

18. All plans proposed to date will result in the evils of contract medical practice in its most obnoxious form maximum of demands by beneficiary, maximum of service by physicians.

19. The various County Societies; the Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania; the State Homeopathic Society; the State Eclectic Society; the American Medical Association; various other medical societies; the Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce and numerous other bodies; have passed resolutions opposing the necessity for any legislation on Health Insurance.

20. It would substitute for the medical care and treatment now received by the wage earning class, medical care and treatment of an inferior character, thereby doing positive injury, to that class.

21. It would compel citizens to invest their savings in a certain way, and it would fix the remuneration of a class of special workers, physicians, dentists, druggists and nurses, without their consent.

22. It would impose on the wage earning class the annoyance of extensive inquisition into their private affairs by Government officers and agents.

23. It is opposed to sound public policy in a democracy, in fostering objectionable class distinctions, and a dangerous encroachment on public rights and privileges, including the most personal concerns of the individual, and the supervision, control and direction of the person in matters of health and welfare.

24. It is a danger to democracy, in that the promises made are impossible of fulfillment, and on this ground, will ultimately create an unwholesome industrial unrest.

25. Such demand for compulsory health insurance as exists has been created artificially by a skillful propaganda.

26. It does not promote the health of the individual, but rather fosters a tendency toward malingering and an undue prolongation of minor ailments for the purpose of wrongful gain.

27. Experience in other countries shows that medical treatment under its rules in a standardized method of mediocre practice the doctor who gives his whole time to the service reduces his profession to a mere trade; the doctor who gives only part of his time to the practice is bound to give it indifferent attention.

28. It would make the profession of medicines less attractive, would drive many practicing it into other occupations, and would discourage many from taking it up.

Dr. Hoffman: Spoke briefly upon the experience which has been had in Great Britain directing the attention of the Committee to his published papers on the relation of National Health Insurance to the medical profession yielding in the main thoroughly unsatisfactory results.

Dr. Hoffman referred to a large number of letters received by him from English physicians on the panel or in private practice, as well as from health officials, approval societies, labor organizations, etc., sustaining the point of view that in its general effects on the wage-earning element, the system had fallen far short of its expected results. He was emphatic in his point of view that the propaganda for health insurance in this country had the aid and furtherance of foreign governments, to whose interest it would be for the United States to assume the very serious burdens of social insurance to equalize the cost of production abroad, for he said, "There can be no question of doubt that when carried to its logical conclusion, as has partly been in the case in Germany, social insurance constitutes a substantial item in the cost of production, which cannot be met in international competition otherwise than by inducing all industrial countries to adopt a similar system".

This conclusion, he felt was sustained by the extraordinary efforts made in Germany, previous to the war, to familiarize foreign countries and international expositions with the alleged facts of social insurance, always emphasizing its so called advantages, while leaving unsaid, the true facts which could only be brought to light by a thorough and impartial investigation made on the part of those qualified to deal with interrelated questions of insurance, medicine, poor relief and labor and industry.

Dr. Hoffman was particularly emphatic in contradicting the assertions frequently made that National Health Insurance in Great Britain had been the means of reducing poor law expenses. "In fact", he said, "the system failed precisely where it was needed most, or, in other words, in reaching effectively, the poorest poor". He gave statistics proving conclusively, in the light of recent British experience, "that poor law expenditures had continued to increase not only as regards the amounts disbursed, but as regards the number concerned." This, he said, "was an inevitable result and a parallel to the experience of Germany, however, cleverly disguised in official reports".

For, he said, "the sinister effect of the whole system is to increase a sense of public dependence, as was recognized by far-sighted labor leaders and others familiar with the facts."

Dr. Hoffman had prepared an extended reply to a large number of stated questions, which he offered to the Chairman of the Committee to make available later.

Dr. Van Sickle: To me has been assigned the position occupied by an attorney in a case when, at the close of the trial, the evidence is summed up before the jury:

1. It has been the purpose of the men present at this meeting, as well as our endeavor from the beginning of the hearings before the Commission, to present the evidence put forth by the medical profession for information and advice so far as we have been able to obtain it, relative to the sickness problem, the adequacy of medical service, and such other discussion as might lead the Commission to understand the position of the medical profession regarding this measure.

We have endeavored to show you the adequacy of medical service to the people of Pennsylvania, and we believe that this has been fairly well presented for your information, and you have found that there is, so far as we know, no place in this state lacking adequate medical service, except the rural districts.

The whole effort of the medical profession has been to become thoroughly informed by all written opinions and other literature, that might be instructive, as well as by verbal opinions expressed by those who have visited and practiced in European countries, where health insurance, or national insurance in health, is in operation.

We have viewed this discussion in the light of what was best fitted for the people of the United States and this state, and have not considered it in the question of dollars and cents, but the question of the best service for the people.

2. We have not been presented with any facts wherein we can be assured that any great class of the people of Pennsylvania asked for this legislation.

We have not heard that labor is clamoring for compulsory health insurance.

We are not assured that capital believes it the best way to treat the sickness problem of Pennsylvania.

We have not heard from any of those who represent the government of Pennsylvania that it is the proper way to insure the working man and woman in Pennsylvania in sickness.

We have not heard that all the other people who are vitally interested in this measure, such as the hospitals, the dentists, the pharmacists, the nurses, and all the branches of medical and surgical service which such acts as this would imply as being vitally interested if it were applied, have been in conference with you regarding this problem.

3. If the discussion of compulsory health insurance has been of any particular value, it has produced good results among the medical profession by arousing interest upon the subject of public health. The members of the medical profession of Pennsylvania to-day are better informed in regard to compulsory health insurance and in regard to the health problems of the State, that they ever have been in the past. They are a unit as to their attitude in regard to health problems, and are vitally interested in the application of anything which would be of benefit to the people of this great commonwealth.

They are convinced, however, that nothing, so far, has been proved which would solve the problem of sickness, that would reduce morbidity and mortality statistics, or would give the people of Pennsylvania a better medical service were compulsory health insurance to be applied.

4. Were the Commission to advise a law covering this feature, of insurance of workmen in industries and cover the same sickness hazard as is covered in European countries, in order to make it a success, you must have the united support of the medical profession of the state to put it into effect.

We are prepared to show you, and we believe that you have been shown today conclusively, that the medical profession of this state have no assurances that this type of legislation is advantageous to the people, and, therefore, cannot recommend it but are urging you against the proposal of any such form of legislation.

5. The incident of sickness, such as has been shown today and on previous occasions, is a vitally important one, and never will be influenced by law.

Births, sickness and deaths will go on as long as the world stands. No law can control these questions, only so far as adequate laws are provided to improve the well-known methods of limiting or influencing the sickness hazard and the production of sickness.

No statistics have been produced from any country where compulsory health insurance has been applied that proved to us a change in the incident of sickness under this law, nor any proof by statistics that it will be for the better control of disease in Pennsylvania, were it to be applied here.

6. The shifting of the burden in cost has nothing to do with us as a profession, as that is entirely an insurance problem, which, if you wish to apply, could be done so without the application of the physicians, the dentists, the pharmacists, the hospitals, the nurses, or any other of the machinery necessary to treat people when sick; leave out, if you will, all these agencies, and make it purely an insurance problem, thereby doing no particular harm and possibly doing some good.

This, however, I do not believe is the aim of this Commission. It is not in conformity with other laws like this applied in European countries, and, consequently, would not fit in the scheme to be applied in this country.

We might show you the condition of the English hospitals which are now in a rather strenuous financial condition, due to the withdrawal of support of those who view compulsory health insurance in England as burdensome, and, therefore, the hospitals are appealing for assistance in the effort to maintain the proper standard.

We might advise the Commission to study the English hospital problem.

Finally, we present you with some of the resolutions which have been passed by the component county medical societies of the State of Pennsylvania, which are unanimously opposed to any form of compulsory health insurance, or any plan of providing the people of Pennsylvania with an insurance scheme such as has been proposed in other states, and we herewith supply you with the reasons why these societies are now in favor, nor the members thereof in favor of compulsory health insurance in Pennsylvania. We trust you will heed these resolutions.

PUBLIC MEETING OF THE COMMISSION HELD.

Bellevue-Stratford Hotel,

Philadelphia, Pa., February 4, 1921.

Addresses:

Mr. John A. Lapp, Chicago, Ill.

Mr. Miles M. Dawson, New York, N. Y.

Mr. Jos. P. Chamberlain, New York, N. Y.

Mr. Lapp: Chairman, Gentlemen of the Commission and Guests. A great many of the questions which I would like to discuss before the Commission are questions which perhaps you have had much information upon and I do not presume I may be giving you new information. I appreciate very much the invitation and appearing in my personal capacity, although I do represent the National Catholic Welfare Association, who are advocating Health Insurance and social insurance of various other kinds.

I think a great deal of this issue has been thrashed out so fully as to hardly need elaboration. For instance, the problem of sickness is fairly well known.

There have been several surveys made in regard to sickness, but I want to caution the Commission on the matter of the accuracy of these surveys. For instance, the metropolitan surveys taken by their agents in practically every one of their visits, which have been those surveys which have been relied upon the most. If you will examine these, you will find they were all taken in the favorable part of the year. There is much doubt to be cast upon surveys from house to house, furthermore, if they were not made by medical men, not even nurses. There is one side of the matter of sickness which I do not think has had sufficient publicity in this country and that is the extent of sickness, which has been studied by the combined commissions of Illinois and Pennsylvania.

We have concluded that there would be about seven days of compensated sickness and that normally there would be about nine days maximum sickness and that agrees with studies made by organizations, particularly the Fraternal Organizations and in New York by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, so you have a body of facts which are sufficient from any point of view.

The actual facts of sickness are so well known as to hardly warrant discussion before this Commission.

Everybody knows what happens when a workman who has no other means of support gets sick. Our study shows a considerable number of workmen who today are good workmen earning independently a living, who are going to be taken sick this year for more than six months, and it does not take much consideration to know what will happen in the family of a working man who is deprived from earning capacity for six months, nine months, or longer. The investigations made by the Pennsylvania Commission two years ago and also the surveys made by the Illinois and Ohio Commissions have been sufficient to show statistically what happens in the case of sickness. We come to the question of insurance as the method, believing that insurance is the very best system of distributing the risk.

In regard to the American experience in handling insurance in groups, we have the system under the Workmen's Compensation Act in Pennsylvania. In Ohio we have the subject covered in one mutual State Fund with Commercial Insurance Companies excluded. The subject is covered by these methods in two or so other states and in some Canadian Provinces.

Expenses of sickness are no more easily measurable than sickness itself, although it is so widespread over economic as well as social fields as no one doubts its value. If you want any examples of this we have them in the economic field. In a large number, say, seven, eight or nine states, they have a Bank Depository, where the employee deposits a certain amount regularly to take care of the economic consequences of sickness. In North Dakota, South Dakota and some Canadian Provinces they have a Universal Insurance Company under which system they deduct a tax from even those who are well.

Our experience in this country is widespread from an individual and private insurance point of view, as well as social and public view.

So Health Insurance is no new thing that is being presented. It is a plan to meet the loss from sickness exactly as we have liability insurance to meet losses of accidents and other things. It resolves back to the question whether sickness is so destructive as to need something of this sort to meet the economic losses.

Something should be done to provide for economic losses from sickness so that we will not have the sinking of the people from economic independence to dependence.

The question comes down to the actual way this will be organized. This is a matter which we do not need to emphasize. We have the experience of mutual benefit associations. We have a large experience in this country to say nothing of the experience in England, Germany, and other European countries. We have here plans in force which would be merely incorporated in a plan of Health Insurance. It is not a new plan upon which we have no experience.

In New York in 1916, the Davenport Bill was introduced into the Legislature in original form. The next year the Labor Federation took it up as their bill and eliminated some certain features and it has become the "Model Bill". And the bill as it stands now in New York is the bill which is generally looked upon as the model bill. The bill has been looked into from every point of view, in fact, no bill has ever run so complete a gamut of amendment as that bill. Naturally a bill must go through that process to show its merits. I understand the Federal Reserve Bill was amended thousands of times.

This Bill provides in brief for the universal insurance of workers and the last bill as it stands in the legislature has the same coverage as the Workmen's Compensation Act of New York.

From a medical service standpoint, I would state that in the organization of the medical service there are two big elements, which are cash benefits and medical service, and socially we have about the same cost for medical service that we do for the cash benefits, if we get medical service adequately. Everyone is agreed that we should have adequate medical service.

All medical service under workmen's compensation, hospital and doctors, should be paid for at the price. Nobody should be expected to give dollars without adequate compensation. The same should apply under health insurance.

We estimated about $36.00 as the cost for medical service, but medical costs have gone up, and perhaps the cash benefits would have to go up to meet the scale of wages, but I would not put it at less than $36.00.

The provision as it now stands is that each medical society in the county is asked by the State Commission to have its physicians formulate a plan of medical service and a schedule of fees for consideration by the State Commission. The State Commission considers the plans and decides whether or not it is just and feasible and then it goes back to the county society for consideration and if satisfactory to them it is accepted. No panel of any sort and no list of physicians excepting those men in the county societies who agree to these schedules of fees are mentioned. If the physicians are not satisfied with the state ruling, they may have a re-hearing before the Commission and after the re-hearing the schedule and plan comes back to them again and if they are not yet satisfied they have the right to appeal to the Supreme Court.

That would work out something like this. In a given county of 25,000 people, estimate that 3,000 are insured under Act. Assume that you have arranged to provide for actual bedside care of these people when sick and hospital service when seriously sick. The Commission arranges what may be necessary in the way of arrangement with the hospitals so that this service can be given. Perhaps they will utilize the public health nurses. But mind you, the doctor is paid under these plans his normal fee for office, dispensary and clinic visits.

As far as I can see I cannot see why the doctors would not be economically better off under this proposition. Of course, this medical service as the bill stands in New York today applies only to the worker himself. It does not apply to the families which have been eliminated. We would then apply our medical service to the man, but eventually the medical service should be made available for every member of the family.

Under the proposition, if I am sick and call my physician, he presents his bill, not to me but the fund to which I belong.

I presented to the Pennsylvania Industrial Physicians sometime ago an estimate of what it would cost based upon figures which were available then, for the medical men of the state, and I allowed $2.50 for a house visit which was considered an adequate compensation. The other kinds of medical service would be graded, a visit to the dispensary you all know does not cost much, and a visit to the office would depend upon the character of service rendered.

Mr. Dawson: It is always a pleasure to come before a body of men who are considering measures that have been advanced for the benefit of our fellow-men.

I have been very much interested in all the discussion that I have heard and find no better way to start what I would say to you than to begin where you left off. For instance, concerning malingering, I think it is proper to say that malingering to a certain degree just as seriously would accompany health insurance as insurance of any kind, whether voluntary or any other type.

It is now more than thirty years since I personally began to advocate health insurance, and ordinary health insurance of the social insurance type, and to urge upon the insurance companies and the public the desirability of the health insurance system of an approved type.

It was nearly ten years before the insurance companies of the country would see that health insurance could be done at all, and the same sort of arguments that you are now hearing were directed against the feasibility of insurance companies insuring any body's health.

Anyone who bought health insurance, it was the idea, would be a person to assimilate disease and malingering upon the company.

When I was called in by one of the larger companies and began my work, the actuary of that company prevented the president from starting out on a health insurance plan, because he was certain that there would be so much assimilation and malingering that it would not pay.

There are a few things that I think an actuary should speak to you about before I do, and these things, I will proceed to discuss next.

One of them is that physicians ought not to confuse the mere question as to whether workmen are kept away from their work on the average day or so more on account of sickness, with the question as to whether the general health and mortality of the community is improving or getting worse. The two things have a necessary relationship. They are at first sure to be confused. I am going to say at the outset that the facts about these matters are not doubtful. They are positively known.

Now the conditions concerning health insurance in our country is about this. We are going to have health insurance, there is no doubt about it. There is already an enormous amount of it. Before the matter was considered the only sort of health insurance we had was the lodges. The argument of the insurance companies was that they could not make out, but, we have advanced in many ways, since then, and we are not only going to have health insurance, but we are going to have compulsory health insurance.

When the beginning of the agitation for public forms of compensation and health insurance started in the United States in about 1908 and 1909, the work of Dr. Frankel and myself extended abroad. We brought back not merely information concerning workmen's compensation in these countries, but we also brought back information on many voluntary insurance plans and we brought back data on the subject of group insurance and this plan has grown quite large in this country.

Compulsory Health Insurance is coming, just as certainly as Workmen's Compensation came. When I first began working for Workmen's Compensation, when I drew up the first workmen's compensation bill in 1898 so that it could be introduced in the New York Legislature, the attorneys of the country so far as they were approached not only were sure that it was opposed to their views. Now, we not only have it, but we would not be without it.

In this first bill, one of the flaws that came out was that we did not put into the bill, the free choice of physicians. I drew up a later bill and suggested there should be free choice at that time. No support was given to it, and I did the next best thing. I put into the bill that the employer should furnish the service, feeling that the employer would deal with the matter very much easily and better than the insurance companies would. And we required the employer to insure the payment of his compensation, feeling that most enlightened employers would themselves attend to the providing of the medical service, but there were private insurance companies and other insurance companies in point of fact that employed their own physicians, and these companies worked without any regard to the best interests of the profession, and I am sorry to say that in many cases without regard to the best interests of the injured workmen.

Now it is the way in which the private insurance companies have behaved under workmen's compensation which stirred up the medical profession in New York, and caused it to believe in general that measures of this kind were things that it should look upon with suspicion.

When the first bill a more tentative bill was prepared by the Committee of the American Association for Labor Legislation, of which I am a member, it was provided in it that the purpose of giving as broad a liberty as possible to the dealing with the medical question should be given careful consideration.

In regard to panel system, I want to say to you gentlemen, that there never was a moment when we had anything similar to the panel system in Great Britain. I would say the word "panel" means two different things. The original meaning was in Germany and Austria where it was first introduced, and it was merely a list of physicians in a neighborhood who were willing to take these cases. In Great Britain it was quite different; there it was a sort of a Lodge Doctor System, but in some case a sort of a panel system.

Mr. Andrews: For the past eleven years, I have been Secretary of the Association for Labor Legislation and one of my principal interests has been in the field of industrial hygiene.

We made a study for the Federal government, but we have been able to make but little progress toward lessening the dangers to the wage earners. We drafted a bill following our industrial accident reporting experience which called for the report of occupational diseases. Naturally occupational diseases compensation came to be carefully considered as one of the ways of attacking this problem.

We drafted a Federal Workmen's Compensation Bill and from the beginning we covered compensation for occupational diseases.

I want to just stress the occupational disease limitations, because we find that those who are most violently opposed to social health insurance are those which would substitute occupational diseases for health insurance, and I mention for example, in New York last year, a bill was drafted that did not meet with the approval of our Association. This instead of taking our own American experience voluntarily development, copied the British Act.

We felt called upon to point out to the public at the time that legislation was pending that occupational diseases could be covered by legislation, and we were denounced in the assembly by Mr. Hoffman, and we were denounced because we informed the cause we informed the public of the only way we had that occupational disease legislation was a good thing, but it does not go very far. Just to show you how people may be misled,—the secretary of the Manufacturers Association of New York sent a letter to its members also advising them that this was an audacious thing that we had done.

So in December, I appealed to the administrative authorities in New York to tell them how many cases of occupational disease had been compensated for. In six months, four cases were compensated for.

But this is the conclusion we reached,—that we ought to have a plan by which sickness disability would be compensated. This naturally raised the question as to whether any practical plan of health insurance had been in operation and whether we could seriously consider such a thing in this country.

I have been in European countries and had the opportunity to look into this to some extent and investigated at first hand the operation of the system in England especially.

The only opposition that was encountered in England was from a certain element of medical profession.

I found that the doctors in England were divided in their opinions. Some of them criticized the act quite severely, but Dr. Doxe of the British Medical Association has furnished a great deal of detailed information and evidence that the British Act has really been a benefit to the medical profession, and I have no hesitancy, personally, in saying that the Health Insurance Act in England has certainly been of financial benefit to the medical profession. They have received considerable more than they did without the Act, and I will say that I was impressed with the character of the men who were administering this act in England, and I will say that they rank very well with the best of our administrators, at Washington, they all being a clean cut type of men.

These men were all very frank in their statements saying that they knew the British Act was defective, but they pointed out the tremendous advantages it has offered, and that it had given a new public interest in public health.

My final point is that I am sure the proponents of Health Insurance in this country, and there is a vastly greater number of them now than five or six years ago, would not oppose any scheme of doing this thing through a state health department, if that is the conclusion, but really it is the most practical and beneficial way of doing it.

I leave with you the expressed hope that your Commission may find a way of financing the whole health problem in Pennsylvania. We are of the opinion that through health insurance it can be financed without too great a burden upon industry or the wage earners. Of course, there will be opposition from commercial insurance companies, but any plan that will meet this serious problem which is far more important than the industrial accident problem will have the support of all who are considering a plan of health insurance.

Mr. Chamberlain: Owing to the shortness of time and due to the fact that mostly all the questions have been so thoroughly covered, I will make my remarks very short.

I want to speak of only two things. This Health Insurance movement is no new thing, but comes from a very old idea. It is based very largely on the attempts to improve the health of the people which were started in the fourteenth century. Medicine was also proven to a great degree satisfactory in improving the health.

As to the conditions in England there has been so much said against Health Insurance in England, I want to support the testimony that your Chairman has given. I found very few people abroad who would have discussed the question of doing away with Health Insurance.

PUBLIC MEETING OF THE COMMISSION.

Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

Philadelphia, March 18th, 1921.

Addresses:

1. Mr. P. Tecumseh Sherman, New York, N. Y.
2. Mr. H. B. Anderson, New York, N. Y.

Mr. Sherman: An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, and a pound of cure is worth a hundredweight of health insurance benefits.

The benefits provided by health insurance may be of two kinds—money and medical benefits. Let us consider the money benefits first.

Assurance by the state of definite, worth-while money benefits for ill health amounts to paying people to be sick or play sick, and is apt to promote neglect of the laws of health, avoidance of disagreeable means of cure, malingering and shamming. Not prevention but pecuniary indemnity for loss is the function of insurance. It is true that casualty and life and fire insurance are so administered as indirectly to tend to prevention; but only by skillful avoidance of over-insurance and by requiring the attainment of certain standards as a qualification for insurance or by measuring the premiums most exactly in proportion to the individual risks. So, also, in health insurance, selected groups of self-sufficient, healthy, thrifty and industrious workmen can insure against ill health, on the mutual plan, in moderate percentages of their earnings to general advantage. But when the state or other non-beneficiaries bear a substantial part of the cost, or the submerged, 'sickly, thriftless and unindustrious are brought under the insurance on the same terms with the good risks, and the money benefits are high enough to be worth-while, ill health and its simulation are subsidized and promoted. And it is the very classes of persons last referred to, whom insurance does not fit, who particularly need pecuniary assistance in illness. But their needs can be met only by poor relief; and no advantage is gained by disguising such poor relief under the false name of insurance. (On the contrary there is danger in poor relief insurance, of including many of the self sufficient and pauperizing them by making them recipients of needless public doles.)

Turning now to the medical benefits; a medical service, provided in conjunction with health insurance, has two purposes.

First. To police the insured and to control claims upon the money benefits. In broad, compulsory insurance, where in all kinds of workers are covered, this becomes the principal and most essential function of the medical service.

Second. To treat and cure the sick.

But no plan of medical service, as an adjunct to general health insurance has yet been devised that will effect both of the purposes just specified, efficiently and economically. It is quite certain and agreed to by many of even the most confident proponents, in this country, of compulsory workmen's health insurance, that all tried plans, including specifically, the British and the German plans, work badly. And all alternative plans that have been proposed are either crushingly extravagant, hopelessly impractical or involve the demoralization of the medical profession. In other words, the problem of providing adequate medical care to those of the working people and their dependents who now don't get it, is not simplified, and facilitated by establishing a state system of health insurance, but, on the contrary, is complicated and handicapped thereby.

Incidentally there is grave danger to the public health in experimenting with compulsory workmen's health insurance. The proponents of that scheme are promising adequate insurance benefits in return for contributions amounting to from 3% to 4% of wages. Adopt their scheme, however, and it will be found that certainly not one-half and probably not one-quarter of the expected medical benefits are in that way obtainable for the money; and yet once we are saddled with the scheme it will be apt to carry-on, with a skimmed and defective medical service. Such, exactly, has been the unfortunate result of compulsory health insurance in Great Britain.

In an address delivered in (February, 1920), the President of the National Association of Trade Union Approved Societies of England said:

"Insured persons are not receiving the treatment they were led to expect, because, instead of the standard of treatment being that within the competence of the average practitioner, it has been reduced to the minimum standard of any practitioner. We have standardized mediocre practice. Not only that, we are paying millions of pounds for what is least needed. There is no provision for any kind of specialist treatment, for operation and for the very things most needed by the workers. So incomplete is medical benefit that, but for the assistance given by the great voluntary hospitals, many of the most serious ailments of insured persons would have to go without adequate treatment altogether. Whilst the panel doctors have only to deal with the more simple ailments where we could almost do without them, their lightning treatment of symptoms has degenerated largely into mere drug-peddling.

"With regard to sanatorium benefit, everybody admits it has been a failure and will continue to be until we concentrate our attention on the prevention of consumption rather than on the cure. And one might safely say that the solution of the elimination of consumption involves the solution of most of the illness of our times.

"The healing art of the future should be in the discovery of the beginnings of disease and the elimination of their causes."

Such is the judgment of the representative of the working people most directly concerned with the British Health Insurance.

My own judgement of the British insured medical service, based upon an intensive study of its actual workings, in 1914, is that it is a positive menace to the public health.

The leading British medical authorities are not quite, but almost equally condemnatory. For example, Sir Arthur Newsholme, formerly Chief Medical Officer of the Local Government Board for England, said last year:

"Two medical benefits (medical and sanatorium) and a maternity benefit were conferred under the act; but, as they have been administered it cannot be affirmed that any marked public benefit has accrued; and it is certain that if the same amount of money has been placed in the hands of the public health authorities to provide medical aid to those needing it, of the kind most lacking and which they could least afford to obtain, great benefit to the public health would have been secured."

To round out this extremely abbreviated exposition of the reasons for rejecting health insurance as a means for promoting the public health, let me add a few specific conclusions from my studies of European experience to show how limited are the very possibilities from health insurance.

Compulsory wage workers' health insurance is hopelessly inefficient for the prevention of illness.

It is inherently inefficient for the cure of such common ills as tuberculosis, feeble-mindedness, congenital defects and the results of neglect in childhood.

In compulsory health insurance it is most demoralizing and inequitable to provide for chronic diseases.

In all health insurance it is most harmful to provide for vice diseases or illnesses due to or prolonged by vicious or improper habits.

Maternity benefits are inexpedient and out of place in wageworkers insurance. Maternity is not a misfortune to be insured against. Proper care should be provided for all needy mothers in childbirths; but not through insurance.

Health Insurance must exclude the long unemployed and down-and-outs who, of all people need help and the most; and, consequently, it never has and never can much reduce the volume of needed public sick relief.

Health Insurance is really useful only to provide support, during illness, for disabled breadwinners and their families, and, for such purpose it should be encouraged. But it does not follow, therefore, that it would be well to make it compulsory for wageworkers in general. Many wage workers can best provide against sickness by their own savings. And to group all wageworkers in common health insurance, results in many of them and often the most undeserving getting poor relief and often needless and misapplied poor relief out of the pockets of the others. It is far preferable to keep such poor relief separate from insurance, provide it out of the public funds and distribute it according to established principles of poor relief. In that way less poor relief will go further and do more good, and workmen's insurance will be kept free from a handicap that would demoralize it and prevent its proper development.

I do not ask you to accept my "say-so", as to the failure of compulsory health insurance in Europe. But I do ask you not to rely upon the say-so of others to the contrary. It seems to me absurd for your Commission to sit and hear testimony and arguments on this point, when, at little expense, you could go to England and observe the facts for yourself. Go to England, start in at the bottom, get in touch with insured workers, observe how they get their medical benefits, what such medical service amounts to, and red tape and expense involved and the effect on the medical profession, and then you will know that a common medical service, hitched to compulsory health insurance, is a curse to be avoided.

Mr. Anderson: I represent the Citizens Medical Reference Bureau (In opposition to Compulsory Medicine), New York, N. Y.

This bureau is composed of persons in all the different states who are opposed to compulsory medicine.

It is not a practitioners' movement conducted in the interests of any one system of healing or combination of systems. It views the subject from the standpoint of the person who is to be compelled to be inoculated, operated upon or otherwise medically treated instead of from the standpoint of those who are to do the innoculating, operating or treating.

The work of the Bureau consists chiefly in gathering statistics and other information bearing upon compulsory medicine and issuing this information in the form of bulletins and other publications thereby making it available in classified form for those who wish to use it. A charge is made for the publications covering the actual expense of getting them up.

Although I have appeared before a number of legislative committees both state and national I regard that as secondary to the other work of the bureau.

In discussing the question of "Measures for the Conservation of Health and the Prevention of Disease," I will endeavor to show,

First, that the proposed establishment of compulsory health insurance would retard rather than promote sound public health work.

Second, that much of the medical work now being carried on by the Department of Health of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania fails to show any favorable results whatever so far as the death rate is concerned but has been the cause of a condition of unrest which is harmful to the best interests of the state, and Third, that there is need of a reorganization of the Department of Health of Pennsylvania along broader lines so that the present evils may be corrected and more progress in sound public health work may be made.

Would Not Reduce the Death Rate.

In support of compulsory health insurance and allied measures a vast amount of propaganda has been and is being carried on to the effect that with the present development of medical knowledge about one half of sickness as it occurs in average communities is preventable.

In a paper published in the Illinois Medical Journal, October 1920, Dr. E. McD. Stanton, Chairman, Committee on Public Information, Schenectady, (N. Y.) County Medical Society, calls attention to the fallacy of this claim. He says:

"For a number of years I had read here and there statements to the effect that with the present development of medical knowledge about one-half of sickness as it occurs in average communities is really preventable. Such statements seemed harmless enough and I attributed them to the over enthusiasm of some public health workers more interested in imparting their enthusiasm to others than they were in the fundamental biological factors controlling the situation.

However, when I came to study the problem of Compulsory Health Insurance this apparently innocent statement took on an entirely new significance. I was surprised to find that in the opinion of the public about four-fifths of the argument for so-called health insurance centers around the belief that according to the present development of medical science about one-half of disease could be readily prevented. As a matter of fact the very name health insurance is based on this misconception and in order to incorporate the alleged preventive medicine possibilities into the scheme it is practically stripped of all semblance of a real insurance proposition.

"Do the individual members of this audience really believe that with the human animal as he is now constituted and by the use of really practical means, it would be possible to prevent anything like one-half of the sickness which actually occurs each year in your own communities? Search as I may, I have never been able to find any data which would support such a claim. I can find no such data both biological and medical which is directly opposed to any such claim."

The Report of the Health Insurance Commission of Illinois, May 1, 1919, covers 647 pages and probably represents the most exhaustive investigation which has heretofore been conducted by any state commission in this country on the subject. In its findings, on p. 164, it says:

"What has compulsory health insurance accomplished in those countries where it has been adopted?

"There is no evidence that compulsory health insurance has resulted in an improvement of health. The death rates and morbidity statistics of the countries which do not have compulsory health insurance show a decline fully equal to that of the countries which have such systems. It seems clear that compulsory health insurance is not an important factor in the prevention of disease or in the conservations of health."

Not Regarded as Health Measure by Physicians in General.

At the Annual Meeting of the American Medical Association, April 26-30, 1920, the following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, That the American Medical Association declares its opposition to the institution of any plan embodying the system of compulsory contributory insurance against illness, or any other plan of compulsory insurance which provides for medical service to be rendered contributors or their dependents, provided, controlled, or regulated by any state or the Federal government."

The Illinois and New York Medical Societies especially have carried on a very vigorous campaign against compulsory health insurance in those states, showing that physicians generally regard compulsory health insurance as not being in line with sound public health work and as being detrimental to their profession.

Medical Control the Real Aim Back of Proposed Legislation.

The principal objection which we have to the establishment of compulsory health insurance is that it is in line with a propaganda being carried on throughout the country under the plea of protecting the public health to secure the passage of laws which would tend to transfer the practice of the healing art to the State and Federal Government and to make such treatment compulsory.

Among the aims back of such proposed legislation may be mentioned the following:

1. A Medical monopoly of the healing art.
2. Periodic medical examinations of every individual in the State.
3. Compulsory medical treatment, without limitation of those compulsorily examined and found to be below the arbitrary standard of health set up by the medical examiners.
4. Compulsory medical treatment of those taken sick.
5. Compulsory vaccination or inoculation against small-pox, typhoid fever and numerous other diseases of healthy persons as an alleged protection against disease.
6. That Health Boards be authorized by law to seize healthy persons under the theory that they are "carriers" of disease, incarcerate them for life if they desire, and operate and otherwise medically treat them at will.
7. That a health certificate be made a requirement for obtaining an education a license to carry or to obtain employment.
8. That the teaching of sex hygiene and medical theories about disease be made compulsory in the schools.

Pennsylvania Health Work Organized on Medical Basis.

The Department of Health of Pennsylvania is organized on the assumption that public health work is chiefly a medical problem.

The law provides that the Department of Health shall consist of a Commissioner of Health and an Advisory Board. The Commissioner of Health must be a physician, and a majority of the members of the Advisory Board must be physicians.

As a natural consequence, therefore, the majority of the work carried on by the Department is of a medical character. The annual reports of the Department show that over two-thirds of the money expended by the Department is for work in which physicians are chiefly interested.

Out of a total expenditure of approximately two and one-half million dollars annually over one-half of this amount goes for tuberculosis work, including medical examinations, medical treatment and sanatoriums, etc.

As a public health measure, however the vast amount of money expended by the Pennsylvania Department of Health for tuberculosis work is a failure.

In a bulletin published by the Pennsylvania Department of Health September, 1911, it says:

"That statistics should show that Germany, the home of the discoverer of the tubercle bacillus, and recognized as one of the pioneers in the efforts for the control of tuberculosis is, notwithstanding the nation which presents by far the highest mortality from that disease of any European country, is a matter of surprise to sanitarians generally and naturally of great concern to her own sanitary authorities. An investigation made during the past year by Dr. P. Jacob, professor at the University of Berlin, undertaken in order to discover some cause for the persistent prevalence and stationary mortality of tuberculosis in Germany during recent years, in the face of all the efforts of physicians and sanitariums, clearly places the responsibility on the deplorably unhygienic conditions in which the peasantry and villagers live and the lack of a sufficiency of wholesome food."

Most investigators include along with housing and good food, the improvement of living conditions.

Notwithstanding the contention of the Pennsylvania Department of Health that tuberculosis is a disease of bad housing and lack of nourishing food, the annual report of the Department for 1916 only shows a Housing Fund Expenditures of $4,517.49.

That the millions of dollars expended by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania for tuberculosis work is a failure as a public health measure is indicated by the fact that while there was a reduction in the death rate in the state from 14.1 per 10,000 as an annual average for the years 1906 to 1910 to 12.09 per 10,000 in 1913, the death rate since then gradually increased to 13.53 in 1917. A number of other states without such expenditures show more favorable results.

With further reference to tuberculosis I beg to call your attention to Bulletins Nos. 16 and 17, copies of which I will be pleased to furnish to each member of the Commission.

The amount spent for sanitary engineering is favorable as compared with other states, but very small as compared to the amount spent for medical purposes in the Commonwealth.

As regards the item of approximately $100,000 annually for medical school inspection the large percentage of tonsils and adenoids said to be defective is itself enough to condemn the practice.

However, I will not take time now to discuss the question of medical examination of school children; the question of compulsory vaccination, etc., these being discussed at length in the book on "State Medicine A Menace to Democracy", and the various bulletins, copies of which I will be pleased to furnish. Should the Commission see fit to continue the hearings to take up those questions, will be pleased to discuss them further at such time.

Activity of State Medical Society Largely Responsible for Present Conditions.

In an article published in the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, October 7, 1920 Dr. John B. Hawes quotes the Secretary of the Pennsylvania Medical Society as follows:

"The president of the society has a desk in the Department of Public Health at the State House. He is in harmony with this department. He is closely affiliated with the medical members of the House and Senate, and attends committee meetings, not as a lobbyist but simply as an advisor. He lets it be understood that he represents 11,500 physicians in Pennsylvania. The results depend largely upon the personality of the president of the society. Pennsylvania is to be congratulated in having as the president of its State Medical Society a man who can devote so much time and who is able to exert so much influence as is apparently the case here."

It is perfectly evident from this that the Pennsylvania State Medical Society has used its influence in line with the present program of the state Department of Health.

Opposition to Present Program Increasing Among Physicians.

Having succeeded in gaining control of practically all public health work in the different states physicians generally are now beginning to realize that public health work is not being advanced as it should be; that the supposed benefits have not been what they expected and that the condition is inimical to their profession.

Referring to the condition in Pennsylvania Dr. E. McD. Stanton, in an article published in the Illinois Medical Journal, October 1920, said:

"Is it strict scientific accuracy for us to have all this propaganda for State-Subsidized so-called Health Centers without telling us how similar state subsidies have worked in other states? Surely such a simple scheme for a medical Utopia and getting money from the taxpayers has not been overlooked in all of the states until 1920. This plan has been in operation for many years more than a quarter of a century in Pennsylvania. I have lived in Pennsylvania and, while I do not want to pass judgement as an expert, my observations always led me to believe that it was bad for the doctors and worse for the public. One thing is sure, and that is, that after all these years, Pennsylvania has fallen decidedly behind New York both in the relative number of physicians and the relative number of hospital beds available."

By way of illustration let us assume that the members of a certain lodge succeed in having one of their members elected as president of a civic association. Then that the president proceeds to appoint members of that lodge on the various committees to carry on the work the way the members of that particular lodge desire. At first the lodge members feel more or less honored but in time they realize that such a selfish policy is injuring not only the association, but themselves as well.

Quite a number of leading physicians and medical journals have called attention to the fact that it is a mistake in regard the medical profession as guardians of the public health.

In this connection, Dr. Frederick R. Green, Secretary of the Council of Health and Public Instruction of the American Medical Association, recently said:

"Another error into which we have fallen as a profession is the tendency to regard the medical profession as a divinely authorized class, whose sacred and distinctive function is the protection of the people either with or without their consent. It is difficult to understand on what rational basis such a belief can rest in a scientific profession like ours. The medical profession is recruited from the same class as that which furnishes the lawyers, judges, ministers, teachers, and business men of our country. The men who go into medicine are neither wiser, more unselfish, more upright or more infallible in their judgment than those who make up any other class of professional men. Why should we regard ourselves as a superior mould, or why expect our opinions or views to be accepted on any different basis from those of other men of equal intelligence, except in so far as we are able to justify our judgment? Yet too often medical organizations, as well as individual physicians, have taken the position that they were the courts of last resort, that it was their special function to dictate the terms of public health legislation, and that it was the duty of the public to accept their decisions and acquiesce in their judgment."

So long as public health work is regarded as chiefly medical and physicians are placed in charge of such work, it is only natural that they view the question from a medical standpoint and show a decided prejudice in favor of certain alleged remedies or preventives. Efforts are then made to make these practices compulsory and the result is a condition of unrest which is harmful to the best interests of the Commonwealth.

Furthermore, there are as many different beliefs about sickness as there are about religion and it is not the function of the State to try to impose any one particular system of healing upon the people.

Without depreciating in the least, the sanitary work now being done by the Pennsylvania Department of Health, I submit that if a boarder policy were pursued you would have a more general cooperation toward improving public health conditions on the part of the sanitary engineers, housing experts and numerous other persons interested in sound public health work.

The present policy of regarding practically everyone as in need of medical treatment or advice and centering the attention of the people on disease instead of health tends to bring about disease.

In your findings to the Legislature, I recommend that you include the following changes:

First: That the proviso in the present law requiring that the Commissioner of Health and a majority of the advisory board be physicians, be stricken out.

Second: That larger appropriations be made for the promotion of housing conditions, sanitation, pure food, public safety, etc., and that less appropriations be made for purely medical purposes.

I appreciate the courtesy extended to me to address you and thank you for the privilege of doing so.

MINORITY REPORT.

To the Members of the Senate and House of Representatives:

We agree with the report of the majority of this Commission in so far as that report emphasizes the great importance of sickness prevention. We realize that on the medical profession, acting in cooperation with the public health authorities, rests the duty to formulate, to promote and in large part to execute plans to reduce the amount of sickness in the commonwealth. Several of the physicians who spoke at our meetings testified to the excellent character of the work in sickness prevention done by the members of the medical profession and the public authorities. The Commission made no investigation of the subject. As only two of the eleven members were physicians, it would hardly have been competent to do so, besides which, the investigation of existing and proposed methods of sickness prevention was not a duty imposed on the Commission by the act under which we were appointed.

The enactment by the General Assembly of 1919 of the act under which this Commission was appointed was the direct result of the report to that Assembly of the Health Insurance Commission appointed under the Act of July 25, 1917. The first Health Insurance Commission made, with the cooperation of public and private agencies, a survey of the amount of sickness among workmen and their families and the economic consequences of such sickness. To the wage worker these economic consequences are the loss of wages, the cost of medical care and other expenses incident to sickness, and the destitution and resulting dependency on public aid and private charity due to such loss and expense. The first Commission had an appropriation of only $5,000. They had, however, a well-trained executive staff and the generous cooperation of associations whose work brings them into contact with the effects of illness among employed persons. These associations placed their records at the disposal of the Commission and in several instances carried on, at their own expense, special investigations. Their help made it possible for the Commission to make a report which is a permanent contribution to a subject of vital importance to the State.

A principal result of the work done by the first Health Insurance Commission was to show that the chief cause of poverty and of dependence on public and private charity in Pennsylvania to-day is the sickness of the wage worker. A short illness is generally a serious financial strain; a long illness often an irretrievable financial disaster. This sickness road from independence to dependence is being traveled every day by hundreds of persons who, when well, were hard working, self-reliant wage workers. The Commission was not the original discoverer of these facts. That sickness among wage workers is the chief cause of poverty has been more or less clearly perceived for years. Neither are the facts found by the Commission peculiar to Pennsylvania. There is no reason to doubt that similar facts will be obtained by similar investigations in the other states. It is not a matter of wonder, in view of these facts, that the first Health Insurance Commission unanimously came to the conclusion "that the best way to close this sickness highroad to poverty and dependency is to make available immediate and adequate medical care for sickness cases and to prevent the financial burden of sickness from falling entirely on the person least able to bear it, the sick wage worker". (Report of the Health Insurance Commission of Pennsylvania, June 1919). They further believed that, "in some way this burden should be distributed among all wage workers or shared by industry and by the community as a whole". They did not, however, decide and recommend how this distribution should be accomplished, whether by the extension of existing voluntary insurance agencies or by a system of social health insurance based on a modification adapted to American conditions of the social health insurance systems now in operation in England and on the continent of Europe. That task they believed should be undertaken by another commission with ample funds for an adequate investigation. We are that other Commission. The act under which we were appointed was drafted by the first Commission and adopted by the General Assembly of 1919 on their recommendation. The work which this Commission was appointed to do therefore was:

To investigate and to report on the subject of social health insurance or other means which will make available adequate medical care for sickness cases among wage workers and prevent the financial burden of sickness from falling entirely on the wage worker.

On our appointment and organization, we made every effort to create an executive force capable of collecting, arranging, condensing and thereby making practically available for our purposes material relating to the subject of our investigations. To do this, all the members of the Commission who attended our meetings we believe then recognized that it was essential to secure the entire time of a trained person capable of directing our attention to the vital questions on which we would have to pass if we were to make a report of any value. Our failure to secure such an executive was not due to any lack of effort on the part of members of the Commission or to any inadequacy in our appropriation. We had enough money if we could have found the right person willing to come to us, but trained investigators into industrial and social conditions, with tact and executive ability, are not numerous, and those whom we would have been glad to secure were already employed. The efficient head of the staff organized by the First Health Insurance Commission, owing to the lapse of time between the disbanding of that Commission and our appointment and organization, had accepted an important appointment in another State. Our inability to secure essential assistance has made it impossible for the Commission to do any work of permanent value other than its investigation into the operation of the British Health Insurance Act, to which we refer later.

Again we desire to emphasize the fact that this lack of result is not the fault of the members of the Commission or of anyone else. For instance, the Commission believed that it was essential that it should have the benefit of the cooperation of representatives of associations whose members would be directly affected by the operation of any sickness insurance plan, voluntary or social, among wage earners, and therefore, as stated in the report of the majority, the Commission invited the Pennsylvania Manufacturers Association, the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, the Medical Legislative Conference of Pennsylvania, the Industrial Physicians, the American Red Cross, the Visiting Nurses Society and the State Chamber of Commerce to appoint committees to cooperate with the Commission. These committees were appointed, but the idea which led the Commission to ask for their appointment, namely, that it would be possible to gather around a table representatives of various interests, all endeavoring to find the right solution for the economic problem which arises as the result of sickness among wage workers, came to nothing. The plan may have been impracticable under any circumstances but the lack of the necessary executive assistance make it useless for the Commission to make an attempt to carry out the plan.

To avoid misunderstanding in connection with the statement that our original plan of securing the cooperation of committees representing various interests came to nothing, it is proper to state that there is one group which would be affected by the adoption of any sickness insurance plan the physicians who have spared neither time nor pains to place before us the results of their own thought on social health insurance. The untiring efforts of committees representing various medical associations, state and county, to combat what they understood to be social health insurance, have at least made it clear that any plan for social health insurance should avoid the grave defects incident to what may be called "contract practice". The doctors of this state are unalterably opposed to any system under which a physician is in effect hired by an insurance fund on the basis that he receives so much per annum for each person under his care. They object to a system under which the reward to the physician does not depend on the number of his sick patients, the number of his visits, or the work performed. They point out, with force, that such a system removes all incentive for good medical work except the incentive which comes from the instinct to help those in suffering; that it is due equally to the patient and the physician that the latter should be rewarded according to the amount and character of the work done; and that the physician should receive on account of, if not directly from, the patient for whom he has done much, more than he receives on account of the patient for whom he has done little or nothing. The physicians who came before us also pointed out that it is essential that the amount to be paid the physician for services to insured persons should be determined by a body on which the physician has large representation, because if this is not done it is almost inevitable that the remuneration will not be sufficient to attract to the profession the right kind of man. Those of us who sign this minority report are not physicians, but one does not have to be physician to perceive the essential soundness of these arguments or to realize that any plan to meet the economic consequences of sickness among wage workers should be so devised as to stimulate and not to discourage high ideals and efficiency among the members of the medical profession. The welfare of the commonwealth in no small degree depends on the ability and training of the doctor, his viewpoint towards his work, and his ideal of the public obligations of his profession as organized in medical societies.

While we believe that it is important that emphasis should be laid on the fundamental objections of incorporating into any health insurance plan the features to which objection has been raised by the medical profession, it was unfortunate that the physicians who appeared before us were generally unaware of the fact that the advocates of social health insurance in this country do not advocate a plan of social health insurance which contains the features to which they so strongly and ably objected. The process of reasoning underlying the various resolutions opposing social health insurance adopted during the last twelve months by numerous medical associations in all parts of the country appears for the most part to have been that: All plans for social health insurance necessarily contain the objectionable features above referred to and are therefore harmful to the best interest of the profession and of the community.

That the able physicians who came before the Commission should be ignorant of the fact that their objections to social health insurance were almost exclusively directed to features of a supposed plan of health insurance not, as far as we are aware, now advocated by anyone, is not extraordinary, when we consider the newness of the whole subject, and the fact that the British and Continental social health insurance plans now in operation do contain many of the features to which our physicians object. Though there has been for some time intense activity in the dissemination of anti-social health insurance literature by commercial companies interested in blocking any plan involving public insurance, we do not have to seek an explanation in such propaganda. Indeed, we believe that the members of our medical societies are as able to protect themselves from the effects of such propaganda as are trade unions or associations of business men or lawyers.

As a matter of fact, whatever its other merits or defects, the plan of social health insurance which has been advocated for some time in this country provides that the insured person may go to any physician who is willing to take the case; that the physician is paid by the visit and the character of the work performed; and that the rate of remuneration is determined, in the first instance, by the county medical society, and ultimately, in case the managers of the insurance fund object to the rates, by a body on which provision is made for ample representation of the medical profession.

The majority report states that, "The Commission has carefully studied the investigations that have been conducted in the states of California, Massachusetts, Wisconsin, Kentucky, Ohio, Illinois, New York and New Jersey. In some states, notably New York, bills have been proposed providing for health insurance, but these bills have been defeated, and your Commission have had the advantage of making a study of this proposed legislation". We are at a loss to understand this paragraph. The Commission has made no study of the investigations referred to or of any other investigations, or of the bill introduced in the State of New York, which is known as the Davenport bill. Individual members of the Commission may have read one or more of these reports or the bill referred to, but at no meeting of the Commission was the subject matter of any report of any other commission ever the subject of discussion. Neither have we ever discussed the text of any bill for social health insurance introduced into any legislature in this country, though some of the features of the Davenport bill were referred to by the speakers at one of our public hearings. This is not a criticism of the work of the Commission; it is a statement of fact. As we had no one to prepare, beforehand, a synopsis of the questions to be discussed and the arguments that have been made and the material gathered on any questions pertinent to our investigation, an executive meeting for the purpose of discussion and the exchange of views would not have been productive of any valuable result.

If we did not, as a Commission, study or debate the questions pertinent to the subject committed to us, or conduct investigations, we did hold public hearings. It is unnecessary to say to members of the General Assembly that public hearings are not often fruitful in throwing light on difficult problems. We believe, however, that our hearings though they were not free from the defects incident to this method of obtaining information, were, nevertheless, above the average. Many of those who addressed us took the trouble to carefully write out what they had to say, and the fact that these remarks have been placed in an appendix attached to the report of the majority will furnish a permanent record of what was said that may be of some value.

The chief and best work of the Commission was the investigation made by our Chairman of the practical operation of the British Health Insurance Act. At the request of the Commission, he went to England in the summer of 1920, taking with him a trained investigator of industrial conditions, Mr. Ordway Tead. The facts ascertained in regard to the operation of the British act, and the attitude of the different classes of people affected by its operation employers, employed and physicians is most valuable and interesting. We cannot understand why the majority report makes only a perfunctory reference to this investigation and no reference whatever to the facts elucidated thereby. It may be that the majority believe that the report of the Chairman and Mr. Tead will, when published, speak for itself. But in view of the widespread impression in this country, especially among physicians, that the British act is not working well, it is worth while to quote here two paragraphs from that part of the report called the Introductory Summary of Conclusions:

"It may be said at once that in the main and considering the handicaps and obstructions suffered during five years of war the act is in reasonably successful operation and is beginning to produce some of the benefits that were initially urged in its behalf.

In the second place the affected groups in the community seriously are now working the act with a remarkable degree of cooperation and with an all but universal recognition of the value of the legislation. Few in the community would seriously advocate or even contemplate its repeal or withdrawal. The tendency and common desire is in quite the opposite direction to make the act in fact as well as in name a national act which will really assure good health throughout the country."

From the foregoing statement of the work done by the Commission, it is manifest that it is not in a position to make any report on the best method of preventing the present unfortunate economic consequences of sickness among wage workers. We have also tried to make it clear that the failure of the Commission to find itself in a position to make a full and final report on the matters intrusted to it is not the fault of the members of the Commission, but is primarily due to the unfortunate fact that we were not able to organize an executive force under a trained person devoting full time to the work of the Commission. If the Commission have been able to do only a small part of the work assigned to them, it is a satisfaction to point out that a substantial part of the appropriation of $15,000 remains untouched.

We find ourselves unable to sign the majority report for three reasons:

1. Because, as worded, it leaves the impression that the Commission, as a Commission, has made a study of social health insurance.

2. Because it expresses the opinion that "while there is an element of idealism in the suggestion of health insurance, there is lacking to a surprising extent the degree of benefit which, without intensive study, might appear to develop from its operation".

3. Because the whole structure of the majority report is based on the pre-conceived notion that the economic problem faced by wage workers who are taken sick can be met by public health authorities and physicians co-operating to reduce the amount of sickness.

The facts which we have set forth in regard to the work done by the Commission show that the impression that the Commission has made a study of health insurance is without foundation. The Commission, therefore, is not in a position to know what "an intensive study" of social health insurance might disclose, because it has made practically no study of its own. As for the suggestion that the economic problem faced by the wage worker who is taken sick may be solved by a reduction in the amount of sickness, it is hard to believe that it is put forward seriously. In face of the fact that the investigation carried on by the Commission's Chairman in England shows the essential, practical success of the British Health Insurance Act, the majority report, in effect, charges the advocates of health insurance with being impractical idealists; but the most sanguine idealist would hardly venture to predict that efforts of public health authorities and physicians will shortly so reduce the amount of sickness that the wage worker can, without fear of financial disaster and consequent dependence, run the risk of carrying the full economic cost of sickness in loss of wages and increased expenses. Someone has said that "sickness prevention is the red herring which is being industriously drawn across the efforts of those who advocate health insurance". However this may be, in spite of our belief in the great importance of the efforts to reduce the amount of sickness, we believe that for many years to come the wage worker, like the rest of humanity, will experience sickness and that, unless a means is provided to prevent the economic burdens due to sickness falling entirely on the sick wage worker, sickness will continue to be, as it is to-day, the chief cause of poverty and dependence.

Nothing that has occurred in the past two years leads us to doubt the essential soundness of the conclusion reached by the first Health Insurance Commission that this economic burden of sickness should not be allowed to fall on the sick wage worker.

For the reason stated, we have not had the advantage of discussing various insurance plans, voluntary or social, with our fellow members of the Commission. Such personal study as we have been able to give to the subject leads us to believe that the solution does lie along the lines of social health insurance. The operation of social health insurance on the continent of Europe and in England has shown defects in detail in the various plans in force. America has the advantage of benefiting by this experience. Furthermore, any social health insurance plan must, of course, be adapted to American conditions. This bill introduced into the New York Senate on March 11, 1920, (No. 1111, Int. 986) appears to us to embody the best health insurance plan yet devised. We greatly regret that the Commission did not take this bill, publish it as a tentative draft, and hold public and executive sessions to discuss its merits and defects. Had the Commission done so, we might have had a sufficiently widespread and accurate knowledge of social health insurance to form the basis of an enlightened public opinion on the subject. That the Commission did not take this course is as much our mistake as the mistake of those who have signed the majority report.

We agree with the other members of the Commission that no useful purpose would be served by its continuance.
